Carter oil tax wins approval

Washington (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee handed President Carter a major victory Tuesday by approving a new oil tax aimed at forcing energy conservation by raising prices.

One effect of the tax would be to raise the price of gasoline by 7.6 cents a gallon by 1981.

The vote for a substitute crude-oil tax similar to the one offered by Carter was 21 to 16, with Republicans and oil-state Democrats opposing it. The panel has yet to consider the President's plan to refund proceeds from that tax to consumers.

However, in three votes the committee made clear it does not favor turning over a share of the tax revenue to the oil industry as a production incentive.

The victory was the biggest yet for Carter since the Ways and Means Committee began considering his energy-tax program. He suffered three major defeats in the committee last week.

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, said after the vote that the President was "extremely pleased by what he termed the 'courageous action' taken by the House Ways and Means Committee, action taken in the face of an intense lobbying campaign by the oil industry."

Powell said Carter hoped the committee action "will be maintained in future consideration by the Congress."

Some administration officials have viewed the crude-oil tax as a more important part of the Carter energy program than the standby gasoline tax and rebates for buyers of gas-efficient cars, which were defeated, and the tax on gas-guzzling cars, which was watered down by the committee.

The crude-oil tax would take effect in three stages, starting in 1978. Eventually, the price of oil produced in the United States would be raised to the world price. U.S. production now ranges in price from $5.25 a barrel to $11.28. The world price averages about $13.50.

The Carter administration estimates the new tax would save up to 200,000 barrels of oil a day in 1980, rising to double that amount by 1985. Current use is about 17.4 million barrels a day.

Rather than give the tax back to taxpayers, the oil industry advocates turning over a share of the money to producers, in an effort to increase exploration for more oil. The committee defeated three attempts to earmark the money for producers.

The key vote was 21 to 16 against a plan by Rep. Joe Waggonner, D-La., that would have provided a federal subsidy of up to $2.5 billion a year for producers.

Earlier in the day, Laurence Woodworth, assistant secretary of the treasury, said Carter considers such proposals "a ripoff of the American consumer and wholly unjustified."

"I can't think of anything from our standpoint that would be worse," Woodworth said.

The 16 votes for the Waggonner subsidy were cast by the 12 Republicans on the panel and four oil-state Democrats.

Carter wants most of the money from the tax, which by 1980 would total $14 billion a year, to be given back to Americans. The first share of the money would go to refund higher prices of home heating oil that would result from the tax. Most of the remainder would be returned across-the-board as credits against federal income taxes.

This would mean a cut in income taxes of $45 to $50 per person, or up to $200 a year for a four-member family. The "rebates" would go equally to every person, regardless of whether or not he conserved energy.

Oil industry supporters have several other ideas on how the money should be used. One of them, drawn up by congressional technicians, would amount to a subsidy of about $2.5 billion a year for oil producers. The idea would be to let producers keep more of their money so it would be "plowed back" into the search for more oil.

Woodworth said Carter is "unilaterally opposed to any plowback (credit) and feels it is totally uncalled for and unjustified."

Woodworth was criticized by a committee member, Rep. Bill Archer, R-Tex., for using "inflammatory political rhetoric." Archer said, "All we're talking about is trying to raise additional capital" for the oil industry.

Woodworth said it is essential that money collected by the crude oil tax go back to consumers. "If it is not refunded, consumers' income will be less and that will have serious economic effects," he said.

As envisioned by Carter, the new crude oil tax would be paid by refiners when oil is purchased from producers. The refiners would be expected to pass along the higher cost, and eventually it would mean higher prices for fuel, plastics and many other consumer products.

Under the alternative considered by the committee, the oil producer — who actually pumps oil out of the ground — would get the big tax break while not having to pay any of the new tax.

"That 'refundable plowback' is just a euphemism for giving them something they don't pay," said Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla.

As outlined by the committee staff, Oil Producer X could get a check from the federal government for up to 20 per cent of the tax the refiner would pay on X's oil if certain conditions were met. The main condition would require the producer to invest more than 40 per cent of his oil and gas income in the search for more oil.

Anchorage, Alaska (AP) — Dr. Robert Mallin raced snails and lost — a total of 295 pounds.

Eleven months ago, Mallin weighed 490 pounds. Today, after racing more than 5,000 miles on an exercise bike against the snails in his fish tank, he's down to 195.

"The magic is you've got to be motivated. And even then the going isn't easy," said Mallin, who combined hard work on the bike with a diet restricted to 400 calories a day.

He's mighty proud of the feat, calling the huge loss in weight "the outstanding achievement of my life."

The plastic surgeon said a friend's poor health led him to the conclusion, "By George, I'm mortal, too. I'm going to die."

Deciding that being 37 years old "was better than the alternative," he went to an internist and said: "Here I am. Do me."

A full range of tests showed high blood pressure was the only harmful consequence of his obesity thus far. He took medication to bring his blood pressure down, but took no other drugs during the weight reduction program.

Ordinarily, doctors advise against rapid weight loss. But in Mallin's case, the weight was a bigger risk.

Now that it's over, Mallin said, "I think I'm normal." He trimmed his waist from 64 inches to 34 and his jacket size from 60 to 42.

To keep from going back up he has had reorient his life. "Doing it is hard," he conceded, though there are benefits:

Mallin's story begins in childhood, as a member of the "clean plate club." He went from being "chunky to stocky to stout." By adulthood he weighed 230 pounds.

He gained an additional 260 pounds after his family moved to Alaska and he rose from a "struggling, starving resident" to success.

Splurging on big meals and eating out was "a way to show success." And some thought fat people were "jolly." But, said Mallin, "Generally, fat people are sad." He said he hopes his children learned from his anguish and will be "spared . . . the sadness."

Drop in school taxes expected

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln taxpayers may be paying less in real estate taxes next year to support the public school system, according to budget estimates.

The 1977-78 mill levy for Lincoln Public Schools may drop by one mill over this year's 57.54 levy, according to Schools Supt. John Prasch.

A more than 6% expected increase in property valuation and a possible $1.3 million jump in state aid above the current $5.4 million will help offset budget increases, according to Robert Den Hartog, associate superintendent for business.

Much of the school's budget increases are tied up in the 8.6% average raise in teacher's salaries. The board is expected to vote on a similar 8.6% increase for the nonteaching staff and administration during a June 28 meeting.

The largest single portion of the more than $40 million budget is instructional salaries, anticipated at $26.5 million, up more than $2 million from this year. Instructional salaries go to teachers, principals and counselors.

The wage increase would give beginning principals an $820 annual increase, and would raise nonteaching salaries 21 to 40 cents an hour.

Surrounded by large loose-leaf folders, piles of paper covered with typed figures and Styrofoam coffee cups, the Lincoln Board of Education members spent several hours Tuesday morning listening to the budget information presented by Prasch and Den Hartog.

There were few questions and no decisions. Budget decisions, including any pay raises for the top administrators, will be made at a June 28 meeting.

The tentative budget items presented include the following:

— A $200,000 increase in funds for developmental learning programs, including money for 11 additional staff members. State special education funds will reimburse portions of these programs.

— A more than $100,000 increase in staff development.

— Supplies and utility costs will rise to $1.4 million from $1.1 million.

— A $51,000 increase primarily to fund a change in the system's achievement testing program.

New board member Milan Wall questioned the budget review method where board members get little review on the effectiveness of money spent on past programs.

The suggested increase in staff development was questioned by Lou Roper, who said that speaking out against staff development "is like talking against motherhood. But we have to use some reason. There is a limit to how much time teachers and principals can be out of their buildings."

A public hearing on the school's budget is tentatively set for July 11.

How would Whelan differ from Exon as governor?

Editor's note: This is the first of two articles on Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan by The Star's political writer.

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

The same, but different.

Jerry Whelan shares basic political views with Gov. J. James Exon, but the lieutenant governor would probably be a different kind of chief executive in terms of style, manner and operational technique. Maybe even in more fundamental matters of emphasis.

You know Gerald Whelan, 52, now serving his third year as lieutenant governor, is going to run for governor next year, attempting to succeed Exon after he completes his constitutionally limited two consecutive terms in the office.

But Whelan is not ready to talk in those absolute terms yet, preferring to delay any official announcement until a later date, probably sometime this winter. So the conversation has to turn rather iffy.

If he were to seek the office and win it, how would he differ from Exon? Or would he?

"I think we both look at the world pretty much alike," Whelan begins. "On the really basic issues, like social welfare and fiscal responsibility, we're not very much different.

"But we are different human beings. We do things differently. But to say that there could be some changes is not to imply any criticism of Jim Exon."

Besides, political conditions have changed — in no small part because of Exon himself. And the experience and background of the two men provide differing opportunities.

For instance, Whelan believes his association with the Legislature, as its presiding officer for three regular sessions (with a fourth coming up in January), could mean a different relationship with the legislative branch of state government.

Relations between Exon and the Unicameral have often bordered on political warfare.

A different kind of relationship might open up new kinds of options for a governor, Whelan said.

Exon has "worked hard and successfully to keep the (state's) spending base within bounds," the lieutenant governor noted.

"And I think we will be forever grateful to Jim Exon because in times of relative plenty, when the temptation to spend was very great, he kept trying to keep the base down so our future opportunities would not be limited.

"Jim Exon knew there would be leaner days coming and he assumed the role of fiscal watchdog. I think that will be the great Exon legacy."

The result of it, Whelan says, is that Nebraska "still has opportunities for progress ahead of us" while other states have soared to such a high spending base that they can no longer react to changing needs or new possibilities. They are, he suggests, "out of gas."

Nebraska has moved ahead prudently "doing those things which need to be done with a very manageable tax rate. It's not a pleasant tax rate, but it's not an oppressive one."

Finally, this year, Whelan said, "The Exon message" seems to have "gotten through" to the Legislature.

With the exception of a $20 million increase in state school aid, the 1977 Unicameral kept state spending within the general boundaries of the governor's budget, he noted.

"Maybe now the executive branch can reenter the field of affirmative legislation. Maybe now new options of shifting emphasis will be with us," Whelan said.

If such options are indeed open to the next governor, Whelan said, it will only be because Exon cleared the way with "prudent management" of state government's resources, often over the Legislature's objections.

But don't misunderstand the lieutenant governor: If he were the next governor, he says, he too would be a fiscal conservative.

As a matter of fact, he will argue, any governor would violate his oath of office if he were not — because the state constitution prohibits state indebtedness.

Philosophically, he is a Jeffersonian, Whelan says.

"I think government is a tool created by the people, to be used by them to solve problems they decide should be solved by concerted action rather than individual action."

There are people in society who "need some help" from government, often because of circumstances beyond their control, Whelan said.

As an example, the elderly need and deserve some assistance, he said.

They have been hurt by "the ravages of inflation" at a time when they can no longer earn, and they should be helped to "live in some dignity," the lieutenant governor said.

If (that word again) he were to become governor, he would also like to do something about what he now considers "possibly our No. 1 social problem." That's alcohol abuse.

"We've got to try to change the attitudes of the young on that one, but that's not an issue I want tied up in any political campaign."

(Tomorrow: What's a lieutenant governor?)

Whelan shares basic views.

A different kind of relationship might open up new kinds of options for a governor, Whelan said.

Exon has "worked hard and successfully to keep the (state's) spending base within bounds," the lieutenant governor noted.

"And I think we will be forever grateful to Jim Exon because in times of relative plenty, when the temptation to spend was very great, he kept trying to keep the base down so our future opportunities would not be limited.

"Jim Exon knew there would be leaner days coming and he assumed the role of fiscal watchdog. I think that will be the great Exon legacy."

The result of it, Whelan says, is that Nebraska "still has opportunities for progress ahead of us" while other states have soared to such a high spending base that they can no longer react to changing needs or new possibilities. They are, he suggests, "out of gas."

Nebraska has moved ahead prudently "doing those things which need to be done with a very manageable tax rate. It's not a pleasant tax rate, but it's not an oppressive one."

Finally, this year, Whelan said, "The Exon message" seems to have "gotten through" to the Legislature.

With the exception of a $20 million increase in state school aid, the 1977 Unicameral kept state spending within the general boundaries of the governor's budget, he noted.

"Maybe now the executive branch can reenter the field of affirmative legislation. Maybe now new options of shifting emphasis will be with us," Whelan said.

If such options are indeed open to the next governor, Whelan said, it will only be because Exon cleared the way with "prudent management" of state government's resources, often over the Legislature's objections.

But don't misunderstand the lieutenant governor: If he were the next governor, he says, he too would be a fiscal conservative.

As a matter of fact, he will argue, any governor would violate his oath of office if he were not — because the state constitution prohibits state indebtedness.

Philosophically, he is a Jeffersonian, Whelan says.

"I think government is a tool created by the people, to be used by them to solve problems they decide should be solved by concerted action rather than individual action."

There are people in society who "need some help" from government, often because of circumstances beyond their control, Whelan said.

As an example, the elderly need and deserve some assistance, he said.

They have been hurt by "the ravages of inflation" at a time when they can no longer earn, and they should be helped to "live in some dignity," the lieutenant governor said.

If (that word again) he were to become governor, he would also like to do something about what he now considers "possibly our No. 1 social problem." That's alcohol abuse.

"We've got to try to change the attitudes of the young on that one, but that's not an issue I want tied up in any political campaign."

(Tomorrow: What's a lieutenant governor?)

U.S. protests KGB's grilling of reporter

Moscow (AP) — Soviet security police grilled Los Angeles Times correspondent Robert C. Toth for more than four hours Tuesday after he was accused of gathering secret information and barred from leaving the country.

Toth was allowed to leave Moscow's Lefortovo prison, where the interrogation took place, but he said the KGB major who questioned him told him to return for more interrogation Wednesday. He was not told the charges against him.

In a note to the U.S. Embassy, the Soviet foreign ministry said the 48-year-old journalist "has been engaged in . . . the collection of secret information of a political and military character."

While an investigation continues, "his departure from Moscow . . . is not desired," the note said.

Toth had planned to leave Moscow with his wife and three children Friday, ending a three-year tour here. He said that during the interrogation he was given no indication whether his scheduled departure would be delayed.

In Washington, the White House said President Carter was "quite concerned" about the Toth case.

The White House made public portions of a formal protest lodged with Soviet officials that complained of "a persistent effort by Soviet authorities to harass and intimidate American correspondents in the exercise of their profession."

White House press secretary Jody Powell's quoting of the protest note marked a departure from normal diplomatic practice, which is to keep such communications secret.

The note said that the detention of Toth "cannot be considered in the best interests of normal U.S.-U.S.S.R. relations."

It said the action was "inconsistent with commitments undertaken by the Soviet government" in the Helsinki accord, "which calls for the participating states to increase the opportunity for journalists to communicate directly with their sources and reaffirms the correct, legitimate pursuit of their professional activity as journalists."

Powell, when asked about possible retaliation against Soviet correspondents in Washington, replied, "We certainly do not intend to violate people's rights to legitimately pursue the news."

Powell said any additional steps the U.S. government might take, beyond protests delivered in Moscow and in Washington, would "depend upon events."

The State Department called the Soviet treatment of Toth "unwarranted interference in the legitimate work of the journalist.

"Based on our knowledge of the facts we see nothing in Toth's activities that could be considered incompatible with his legitimate journalistic status and activities."

The chairman of the Republican party, Bill Brock, accused the Soviet Union of "a chilling revival of the Cold War." In a telegram to Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, Brock said Toth should be permitted to leave the U.S.S.R. immediately.

Toth said his interrogation had to do entirely with an incident last Saturday when he was seized on the street by five KGB security policemen just after receiving a document from a Soviet scientist about parapsychology, the study of mental telepathy and extrasensory perception.

He was also interrogated for three hours Saturday.

Toth said he had been introduced to the scientist, Valery G. Petyukhov, six months ago, and that Petyukhov telephoned him Saturday to offer his article.

Robert Gibson, foreign editor of the Times, said in Los Angeles that the newspaper was "shocked and dismayed" by the decision not to allow Toth to leave the Soviet Union "and to subject him to accusations and interrogation in connection with his legitimate journalistic activities."

Personalities

Young Kennedy to rough it

John F. Kennedy Jr. will spend three days alone this summer on a small island with no food and only one gallon of water, one match for every meal and a Euell Gibbons book on edible wild plants.

The late president's 16-year-old son has signed on for the 26-day Outward Bound summer wilderness survival course in Penobscot Bay, Maine.

Dream went down the drain

Cornelia Wallace, wife of Alabama Gov. George Wallace, has abandoned her plans to build a "dream" home because her autobiography "C'Nelia," did not sell well. Mrs. Wallace has decided to sell the lot on Lake Martin because she said she cannot afford the resort home she had wanted.

"I feel like my dream just went down the pipe," she said.

Twiggy wed in secrecy

Twiggy, the beanpole model turned singer, married her American boyfriend Tuesday in secrecy that would do credit to a spy agency.

Twiggy, 27, married Michael Whitney under her real name of Lesley Hornby.

Former banker indicted

John S. Gleason Jr., former board chairman of the Mercantile National Bank of Chicago, was indicted Tuesday on federal charges of misapplying $528,745 in bank funds for his personal use.

Gleason was head of the Veterans Administration in Washington from 1961 to 1965 and was national commander of the American Legion during the 1950s.

Newlyweds pedaling 2,500 miles to bliss

Denver (UPI) — Bicycle mechanic Gary Harty introduced his fiance to bike riding, and she likes it so much they've decided to spend their honeymoon trip by pedaling 2,500 miles.

The Hartys were married during the weekend and left Monday on a three-month honeymoon to Nova Scotia. They said they hoped to average 50 miles a day.

Harty, 27, said friends and family members were about evenly divided between "extremely excited and a lot of disbelief" about the trip.

"But we think it will be a good way to see the country up close — a chance to meet people on a personal basis," he said.

The newlyweds got the idea for the trip after reading about the "Bikecentennial Trail," a 4,250-mile transcontinental bicycle route from Oregon to Virginia.

Harty and his wife, the former Judy Newman, an occupational therapist at the Robert G. Weiland School for the Mentally Retarded, hope to complete the trip in three months.

They met on a backpacking trip two years ago in Beaver Meadows, below Mt. Evans. He introduced her to cycling "and she really enjoyed it."

Harty said major problems along the way probably will be rain "and getting up some of the hills." He also said they are both "scared of snakes" and that Judy is "deathly afraid of lightning."

Georgia abandons goober giveaway

Atlanta (AP) — A peanut farmer from Georgia may be in the White House, but his home state can't afford to give away any more free goobers.

The Georgia Peanut Commission, which has been providing little packets of peanuts free to tourists, says it can't afford to pick up the $40,000-a-year tab and the state says it has no funds for the project.

Peanuts still will be given free to tourists at the new welcome station in President Carter's home town of Plains, but not at the stations on highways leading into Georgia, the commission said.

Lincoln water rates: no uproar needed

If Lincoln water rates become another celebrated uproar, the City Council and mayor will have no one to blame but themselves. The city has two basic things to remember and if it remembers them, the problems ought to be minimal.

Water rates need to be fair and they need to encourage conservation. Those two objectives ought not to be overly difficult to achieve with something as relatively simple as a municipally owned water system.

The mayor and council should listen to the suggestions of the Chamber of Commerce, as that organization has now volunteered. But the city should follow those suggestions only to the extent that they serve the ends of fairness and conservation.

The chamber appears to be pushing for an old principle in utility affairs — rates closely related to the cost of service. There are a number of faults with that system.

For one thing, the cost of service can be argued until doomsday without everyone coming to agreement on what it is. For another, the principle is not necessarily fair, as it rewards all the big consumers of water and punishes the smaller user. That is not a concept with which everyone will agree on philosophical grounds.

Also, the cost of service principle does nothing to encourage conservation. If your water rate goes down as you use more of the product, you are not inclined to be careful of your usage.

In setting rates, it would behoove the city to take a look, too, at the matter of public understanding. If the people cannot understand what is happening to them in the area of their water bills, they will again be up in arms over the situation, as they were last summer.

There is no need for radical changes in rates that leave people confused, skeptical and angry. If the city cannot establish rates, with periodic adjustments, that meet expenses in an orderly fashion over the years then it simply is incompetent.

The chamber has suggested an outside consultant to study the rates. This doesn't make us jump for joy but if the city is unable to do its own arithmetic, then such a consultant is what we are likely to get.

But if we do, the city should bear in mind that consultants come, too, with their built-in prejudices and notions of the right and wrong ways of doing things. You can bet your bottom dollar that a consultant who believes in the cost of service principle is going to produce the figures to support that principle.

People are slow starters

While the water rate controversy continues in Lincoln, and as water customers here are getting used to the higher billings of the last two years or so, far westerners are laboring under the burden of severely diminished supplies of water and punitive rates for excessive use.

The water problems in the coastal states were brought on by the same general drought conditions affecting much of the American west, but residential users in the far western states are being harder hit at present than customers in our area. For the most part, the victims are behaving admirably in response to the water shortage.

Most of the nation is aware by now of many of the horror stories: dry reservoirs, water piped in from afar, lawns burned brown in the searing heat, thousand-dollar water bills presented small businesses, some of which have closed their doors or limited their hospitality to water-using customers, daily water use quotas. So many gallons are allotted families by size in some areas, and use beyond that quota is severely penalized. If waste continues past a second penalty billing, the authorities come in and turn your water off. Life styles have been altered in small ways (and in some cases, ways not so small). Homemakers stack dirty dishes until there is a full washer load. Clothing is washed less frequently, as are bodies. The kids might skip a bath every other day. Teeth are brushed using a cup of water instead of a running faucet. Guests are reminded of the water problem and advised to use the Navy shower technique. Swimming pools are drained less often and many are not filled. Cars remain caked with the grime of the road. Less meticulous attention is devoted to one's lawn.

For many, life remains much the same, except that it is less comfortable and not so squeaky clean. The water shortage has ruined or severely hurt others.

Two points can be made from this. When conservation is demanded, people come through like champions. Even in affluent Marin County, California, where people are proud and protective of their easy-going, wasteful lifestyles, the water conservation goal is being achieved — and then some.

The second point: you have to hit people on the head to get their attention. In other parts of the west, where rationing is only in the talking stages, efforts are being made to make people aware of the possible need to ration and they are encouraged to conserve voluntarily. But there is generally only a vague awareness of crisis.

Ideally, of course, those who still have plenty of water would learn from those who don't before the shortage hits with full impact. Perhaps then the crisis would not be so severe in impact, either physically or psychologically.

The same would apply to the energy crisis. We know by example that people can conserve — water or gasoline, it makes no difference — when the need arises and still lead a life much like at present. Why wait? Why not, in effect, close the barn door before the critters escape, rather than after?

Carter reneges

Washington — Thus far, President Carter has made 272 high-ranking political appointments. Of that number, only 35 have been women — or just 13 per cent of those named.

This disappointing record is part of a pattern of Administration indifference to persisting legal, economic and social discrimination against women. During his campaign, the President vowed to fight for equal rights for women. Now that he is in office he is treating the problem with little more than benign neglect.

President Carter supports the Equal Rights Amendment, but White House efforts to push the measure in several state legislatures earlier this year were so clumsy they hurt the cause more than they helped. And he rejected pleas from women's groups that he discuss the subject in a televised fireside chat and that he beef up the one-person White House office currently assigned to the amendment.

The White House is not visibly working for any of the major pieces of legislation in Congress which would especially affect women's interests nor has it proposed any major measures of its own in the area.

President Carter said during the campaign he supported a comprehensive child-care bill to ease the burden on working mothers. He has demonstrated no further interest in it, although Vice President Walter Mondale was an original sponsor of the bill.

He has not lobbied for a bill pending in Congress which would expand the scope of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and grant it broader enforcement powers. (He did, however, name the first woman EEOC chairman, after an unbroken string of five black male chairmen.)

He has said he will sign a bill to override a Supreme Court ruling that companies need not include pregnancy in employee disability plans, even if they include male-only disabilities. But he also said he will not lobby for it.

Carter opposes the inclusion of abortion in any new national health insurance plan.

Carter has never issued a new directive for the Justice Department's task force on sex discrimination, set up by President Ford to search out inequitable laws governing all U.S. programs and policies. His Administration requested only sufficient budget for a staff of seven for the office, although the Justice Department estimates it would take a staff of 28 more than two years to do the massive overhaul of the laws.

In summary, President Carter may be sympathetic to women's desire for equal rights but he's apparently not prepared to do a whole heck of a lot about it.

Saturday morning was waking up to distressing news. President Carter, said the papers, wanted to rally public opinion. Rallying public opinion on a weekend in June is almost unheard of. It made you wonder if the President had a firm grip on the calendar.

September is for starting wars, October is for making ridiculous promises, November is for cutting the budget, December is for rebuilding the Cabinet, January is for refusing to keep the promises you made in October, February is for fund-raising dinners and March — March, not June — is for rallying public opinion.

June is for leaving people alone so they can fish, get married, graduate the children, wax the car, watch baseball and make the seasonal switch to gin and tonic. Asking a person to rally his public opinion during the one month allotted to tending to life's necessities is an imposition justifiable only under the gravest circumstances.

And so, on being awakened with the cry, "Rise and rally!" I was inclined to sulk. The truth is that my public opinions have been in pleasantly low supply lately. All through April and May, though constantly exposed to public events, my opinion-formation glands had produced only three or four opinions worth mentioning at the dinner table.

I had thought of consulting a doctor, but decided this wasn't necessary since most of the public events about which I was not having opinions were probably without the slightest significance. What then was so vital that the President wanted to rally me to opinionation in June?

The papers detailed the bad news. It was the energy crisis again. I have struggled for the past four years to have a decent opinion about the energy crisis, without success. Over the years I have had every possible opinion about the energy crisis, and liked none of them. The truth is that having a commendable opinion about the energy crisis is one of those things I am simply unable to do, like waltzing, playing the violin or understanding differential calculus.

When the President asked Congress a few weeks ago for heavy new laws to cope with the energy crisis, I had a terrible feeling that he would eventually ask me to rally my opinion on the matter. Recently, however, a close study of the Washington news had suggested the ordeal might be escapable.

Congress in its preliminary committee work seemed to be doing a splendid job of eliminating the energy crisis. The energy crisis threatened to saddle us with higher gasoline taxes, and one committee had dispelled the threat by refusing to levy these taxes.

The energy crisis had threatened to hold down the profits of our natural gas industry, and a committee had eliminated the threat by freeing gas prices of federal regulation.

The energy crisis had threatened to tax big cars so heavily that only the rich could own a big car, and the committee had reduced the threat by postponing the tax for at least a year.

The situation seemed as harmonious as anything in government ever can be. The President had identified the foremost threat of our age — the energy crisis — and Congress in a few short weeks had made great strides toward eliminating it.

Now, however, President Carter was insulting Congress. Instead of eliminating the crisis, he was saying, Congress had sold out to the oil and auto lobbies. This cruel characterization was said to be the signal for public opinion to rally against what Congress had done so far.

In principle, one should rally, I suppose. Opinion must be rallied, even when opinion is total befuddlement. Still, one feels unfairly treated by being asked to rally in June. The Congressional process is Byzantine in its complications and early committee actions are often nothing more than the staking out of outrageous bargaining positions to be abandoned in the fall.

The President would doubtless like to keep us rallied throughout the summer, but it is a harsh demand. The patience of Congress and its lobbyists is as the patience of the Pentagon. All know how to ride for months, for years if necessary, before storms of rallied public opinion, knowing that they will have their way once the storm is exhausted.

Is it wise for the President to rally us to opinionize so early in the game? And in June, of all seasons? If public opinion spends the summer rallied against the Congress under the power of oil, asphalt, auto and labor, how can the President expect to keep it interested later in the year when he will need it for heavy combat?

The attention span of public opinion these days is roughly five days long. A president rallying it for a 60-day stand is at risk of showing up at Gettysburg with no troops. I am going to wax the gas guzzler and worry later about the energy crisis sending it to the junkyard.

Chicago — A cop is still steaming about something he says he saw during the rioting near Humboldt Park eight days ago.

He and a few other policemen were guarding busted-out stores on Division Street. They were standing near their squad cars chatting with crowds of kids about 9 or 10 years old.

A television crew came walking up, looking for something interesting to videotape. At that moment, though, nothing exciting was happening.

That's the worst thing that a TV crew can find. They need action, movement.

So, the policeman said, somebody in the crew asked if it would be OK for the kids to go in the store, pick up some merchandise, and carry it out.

"At first I wasn't sure what they were talking about," the cop said. "Then I realized that what they wanted were some shots of looters. They wanted the kids to act like they were looting the store.

"We told them to get the hell out of there. But can you imagine something like that? They wanted to fake looting so they'd have something to put on the news show.

"The people would watch the show and wonder what we were doing while it was going on."

The policeman said he didn't recognize any of the people in the TV crew. "I know what most of the anchormen look like and I didn't see any of them," he said.

"When the shift ended and we got back to the station, we squawked about it. We thought there should be some kind of complaint made to the TV station or to someone. I guess nothing was done. But it still bothers me that they'd even ask to do something like that. It makes me wonder how often they fake things."

I doubt if it is done too often, although some instances of outright fakery have been exposed. But the restraint of TV has nothing to do with scruples. They're just afraid of getting caught and drawing heat from the Federal Communications Commission, which licenses TV stations.

The incident does serve to illustrate what the mentality of TV news really is. It has little to do with news. It amounts to show biz.

The actual news presented on the average TV news show would not fill more than a page or two in a comic book, and it wouldn't be much more informative.

When they advertise their news shows, the TV stations gush about how their anchormen are outstanding "newsmen." One of the anchormen is constantly agonizing about how he is overwhelmed with the need to be "out on the street," where things are happening. He does not explain why he doesn't go out on the streets, since he has this craving to be there. I mean, it is no big deal. Millions of ordinary people get out on the street every day. Yet, he remains in the studio, sitting in front of the camera, while allegedly pining away for the street.

The fact is, most of the city's anchormen would not know a news story if it came up and hit them on the ear. Most of them have never been seen covering an actual news event or writing a simple news story.

Their primary talent is being able to speak without stuttering or drooling. If they have a full head of hair, a congenial grin, and the ability to read a simple sentence written by someone else, they are on their way to stardom.

The average TV reporter isn't much more advanced. Once the camera crew has driven him to the story, and the producer has pointed him in the right direction, and he has asked the inevitable first question — "How do you feel about . . . ?" — he begins running out of thoughts.

The best measure of TV news is the deep concern given the weather report. By dialing WE6-1212 in Chicago you can get the same information. On most days you can stick your head out the door and get an idea of what the weather will be.

But at one station the entire executive structure agonized over who would tap a stick against a weather map and deliver a few inanities. They even glued wires to the skins of a sample audience in hopes of determining if a prospective weatherman would arouse the viewers' libido.

There is one thing to keep in mind while watching a television news show. Mary Tyler Moore has gone off the air. But Ted Baxter lives.

Today's Mail

Consumer 'bomb'

Lincoln, Neb.

This is in response to your three editorials in favor of establishing a consumer protection agency.

You say there is no one in Washington to look out for the consumer and no one to fight his battles. What is the existing department of consumer affairs supposed to be doing? What are Nader and his crowd and a whole bunch of other tax exempt "public interest" groups doing? Just ask your friendly congressman. I am sure you will hear that lobbying for the "consumer" is very strong.

You say the proposed new law is aimed at representation in behalf of consumers before regulatory agencies and without it regulatory agencies have no way of hearing the consumers side. Don't these agencies hold public hearings? Are these "public interest" groups prohibited from attending such hearings?

You say regulatory agencies are "stacked" with industry people which we are presumably supposed to regard as some sort of conspiracy. Isn't it possible that by utilizing at least a few industry people that the regulatory agency will thereby have some knowledge of how the industry works and have at least a chance of avoiding harmful blunders?

You ask what it is that leads businessmen to oppose a voice for consumers. The picture that probably comes to the minds of many of your readers is greedy businessmen bulging with illicit profits, cheating the consumer continuously and fighting tooth and nail to keep away the saintly knight on the white horse that wants to come in and save the victims. Isn't it also possible that businessmen do not wish to be regulated by people who seem to range from suspicion and mistrust of the free enterprise system to outright hostility to it?

I don't think anybody has any serious objections to letting consumer advocates present their opinion to any lawmaker or any regulatory agency. I believe what really scares business people is the provision that if the consumer advocates do not get their own way before regulatory agencies, they may then tie the whole thing up in litigation which could be dragged on endlessly with the result that the consumer advocate would have a power almost of life or death over the "enemy". To grant such power to anyone, no matter how good, how wise, how reasonable or how sensible would be a serious mistake.

To give such power to people who at best represent only one segment of "consumers" and who frequently fail to see harmful long term affects of proposals that appear attractive to their precious "consumers" on a short term basis, would be a disaster.

I am extremely gratified that a Congress that is regarded as somewhat liberal can have the good sense to let this bomb die. Perhaps enough of our lawmakers have finally seen some of the harmful effects of government intervention in the market place and have seen enough of the so called consumer advocates and the opinions they hold to be reluctant to give them the power to have their own way or to tie things up in the courts as long as they care to do so if they don't get their own way. Otherwise, why would congress pass up two sure fire crowd pleasers in one package: Anti business and pro consumerism?

It is too bad the average consumer doesn't realize the power he already has when he "votes" with his dollar. By looking for the best deal for himself he can wipe out Edsels, mom and pop grocery stores, fountain pens and mechanical adding machines. He can bring forth industries such as discount stores and fast food outlets.

If this bill actually does die my faith and confidence in the future of America will take an enormous leap upward.

One too many?

Lincoln, Neb.

If Sam Schwartzkopf takes seriously the rumored speculation he should (might?) be considering having another "go" at the mayor's office, he's more to be pitied than censored.

Ring-wise people might speculate that Sam's taken "too many shots to the head" during his "lightweight" contest with Mayor Boosalis, and his subsequent shellacking at the hands of Omaha's ill-fated Big Green Lottery promoters. For Sam's sake, as well as Lincoln's, it's best he stay out of the political ring before he gets to the stage, like many over-the-hill fighters, where he's jumping into a fighting stance and bobbing and weaving, every time he hears a telephone or doorbell ring! Or sniffs an up-coming election.

His head may still be buzzing from those two previous fights (no-contest fiascoes, might be a better description) if he hasn't gotten the message that, it wasn't so much the votes "FOR" that put Mayor Boosalis in office, but the votes "AGAINST" Sam Schwartzkopf that put him down for the "ten-count".

Sam's 3-0 "ring" record (let's see, didn't he also lose out in the primaries for a public service commissioner's seat?) could hardly be considered an exemplary display of judgment or political acumen. Yep, I'm afraid Sam's already had one, if not two fights, too many.

FBC

Justice destroyed

Eagle, Neb.

It's sad that the laws our police were hired to enforce are, many times, not morally enforceable laws. For example, a common law which most are familiar with is the mandatory speed limit and the enforcement practices that go with it. Speed limits are designed to provide a safe maximum speed for autos on roads according to surface, width, location. The law should provide guidelines for safe travel, but just as in a case of criminal justice, should only provide punishment for proveable offenses against another in regard to life, liberty, property.

This is not the procedure, however. Police cunningly construct speed traps designed not to promote justice, but to induce guilt for breaking a non-objective speed law. Enforcement officials and lawmakers try to justify these laws, and others (like OSHA) like them on POTENTIAL harm to life and property (I stress the "potential", because, as in criminal justice, the "potential" and the "actual" are worlds apart: you "potentially" face death every second of your life). It is those of such "potential" mentality who have destroyed the concept of justice.

Asks support

Lincoln, Neb.

I feel it is time the public is made aware of a group of young people proudly representing our city in the Festival of American Community Theaters, June 24-26, 1977, in Spokane, Washington. I am talking of the cast of "The Me Nobody Knows" from our own playhouse.

But it seems due to the lack of support behind this young cast we are short of finances to get our talented cast, crew and orchestra to Spokane. I know the majority of the public is unaware that this group has done all their own fund-raising by special performances and the cutting of a record of the songs of the show. They have worked hard!

I am asking that the citizens of Lincoln support now our Lincoln Community Playhouse and this cast. Somehow we always get the money for Big Red and the University Marching Band, we need that very support from all of you. Please care about us, too.

Lincoln water rates: no uproar needed

If Lincoln water rates become another celebrated uproar, the City Council and mayor will have no one to blame but themselves. The city has two basic things to remember and if it remembers them, the problems ought to be minimal.

Water rates need to be fair and they need to encourage conservation. Those two objectives ought not to be overly difficult to achieve with something as relatively simple as a municipally owned water system.

The mayor and council should listen to the suggestions of the Chamber of Commerce, as that organization has now volunteered. But the city should follow those suggestions only to the extent that they serve the ends of fairness and conservation.

The chamber appears to be pushing for an old principle in utility affairs — rates closely related to the cost of service. There are a number of faults with that system.

For one thing, the cost of service can be argued until doomsday without everyone coming to agreement on what it is. For another, the principle is not necessarily fair, as it rewards all the big consumers of water and punishes the smaller user. That is not a concept with which everyone will agree on philosophical grounds.

Also, the cost of service principle does nothing to encourage conservation. If your water rate goes down as you use more of the product, you are not inclined to be careful of your usage.

But it still bothers me that they'd even ask to do something like that. It makes me wonder how often they fake things."

I doubt if it is done too often, although some instances of outright fakery have been exposed. But the restraint of TV has nothing to do with scruples. They're just afraid of getting caught and drawing heat from the Federal Communications Commission, which licenses TV stations.

The incident does serve to illustrate what the mentality of TV news really is. It has little to do with news. It amounts to show biz.

The actual news presented on the average TV news show would not fill more than a page or two in a comic book, and it wouldn't be much more informative.

When they advertise their news shows, the TV stations gush about how their anchormen are outstanding "newsmen." One of the anchormen is constantly agonizing about how he is overwhelmed with the need to be "out on the street," where things are happening. He does not explain why he doesn't go out on the streets, since he has this craving to be there. I mean, it is no big deal. Millions of ordinary people get out on the street every day. Yet, he remains in the studio, sitting in front of the camera, while allegedly pining away for the street.

The fact is, most of the city's anchormen would not know a news story if it came up and hit them on the ear. Most of them have never been seen covering an actual news event or writing a simple news story.

Their primary talent is being able to speak without stuttering or drooling. If they have a full head of hair, a congenial grin, and the ability to read a simple sentence written by someone else, they are on their way to stardom.

The average TV reporter isn't much more advanced. Once the camera crew has driven him to the story, and the producer has pointed him in the right direction, and he has asked the inevitable first question — "How do you feel about . . . ?" — he begins running out of thoughts.

The best measure of TV news is the deep concern given the weather report. By dialing WE6-1212 in Chicago you can get the same information. On most days you can stick your head out the door and get an idea of what the weather will be.

But at one station the entire executive structure agonized over who would tap a stick against a weather map and deliver a few inanities. They even glued wires to the skins of a sample audience in hopes of determining if a prospective weatherman would arouse the viewers' libido.

There is one thing to keep in mind while watching a television news show. Mary Tyler Moore has gone off the air. But Ted Baxter lives.

Today's Mail

Consumer 'bomb'

Lincoln, Neb.

This is in response to your three editorials in favor of establishing a consumer protection agency.

You say there is no one in Washington to look out for the consumer and no one to fight his battles. What is the existing department of consumer affairs supposed to be doing? What are Nader and his crowd and a whole bunch of other tax exempt "public interest" groups doing? Just ask your friendly congressman. I am sure you will hear that lobbying for the "consumer" is very strong.

You say the proposed new law is aimed at representation in behalf of consumers before regulatory agencies and without it regulatory agencies have no way of hearing the consumers side. Don't these agencies hold public hearings? Are these "public interest" groups prohibited from attending such hearings?

You say regulatory agencies are "stacked" with industry people which we are presumably supposed to regard as some sort of conspiracy. Isn't it possible that by utilizing at least a few industry people that the regulatory agency will thereby have some knowledge of how the industry works and have at least a chance of avoiding harmful blunders?

You ask what it is that leads businessmen to oppose a voice for consumers. The picture that probably comes to the minds of many of your readers is greedy businessmen bulging with illicit profits, cheating the consumer continuously and fighting tooth and nail to keep away the saintly knight on the white horse that wants to come in and save the victims. Isn't it also possible that businessmen do not wish to be regulated by people who seem to range from suspicion and mistrust of the free enterprise system to outright hostility to it?

I don't think anybody has any serious objections to letting consumer advocates present their opinion to any lawmaker or any regulatory agency. I believe what really scares business people is the provision that if the consumer advocates do not get their own way before regulatory agencies, they may then tie the whole thing up in litigation which could be dragged on endlessly with the result that the consumer advocate would have a power almost of life or death over the "enemy". To grant such power to anyone, no matter how good, how wise, how reasonable or how sensible would be a serious mistake.

To give such power to people who at best represent only one segment of "consumers" and who frequently fail to see harmful long term affects of proposals that appear attractive to their precious "consumers" on a short term basis, would be a disaster.

I am extremely gratified that a Congress that is regarded as somewhat liberal can have the good sense to let this bomb die. Perhaps enough of our lawmakers have finally seen some of the harmful effects of government intervention in the market place and have seen enough of the so called consumer advocates and the opinions they hold to be reluctant to give them the power to have their own way or to tie things up in the courts as long as they care to do so if they don't get their own way. Otherwise, why would congress pass up two sure fire crowd pleasers in one package: Anti business and pro consumerism?

It is too bad the average consumer doesn't realize the power he already has when he "votes" with his dollar. By looking for the best deal for himself he can wipe out Edsels, mom and pop grocery stores, fountain pens and mechanical adding machines. He can bring forth industries such as discount stores and fast food outlets.

If this bill actually does die my faith and confidence in the future of America will take an enormous leap upward.

One too many?

Lincoln, Neb.

If Sam Schwartzkopf takes seriously the rumored speculation he should (might?) be considering having another "go" at the mayor's office, he's more to be pitied than censored.

Ring-wise people might speculate that Sam's taken "too many shots to the head" during his "lightweight" contest with Mayor Boosalis, and his subsequent shellacking at the hands of Omaha's ill-fated Big Green Lottery promoters. For Sam's sake, as well as Lincoln's, it's best he stay out of the political ring before he gets to the stage, like many over-the-hill fighters, where he's jumping into a fighting stance and bobbing and weaving, every time he hears a telephone or doorbell ring! Or sniffs an up-coming election.

His head may still be buzzing from those two previous fights (no-contest fiascoes, might be a better description) if he hasn't gotten the message that, it wasn't so much the votes "FOR" that put Mayor Boosalis in office, but the votes "AGAINST" Sam Schwartzkopf that put him down for the "ten-count".

Sam's 3-0 "ring" record (let's see, didn't he also lose out in the primaries for a public service commissioner's seat?) could hardly be considered an exemplary display of judgment or political acumen. Yep, I'm afraid Sam's already had one, if not two fights, too many.

FBC

Justice destroyed

Eagle, Neb.

It's sad that the laws our police were hired to enforce are, many times, not morally enforceable laws. For example, a common law which most are familiar with is the mandatory speed limit and the enforcement practices that go with it. Speed limits are designed to provide a safe maximum speed for autos on roads according to surface, width, location. The law should provide guidelines for safe travel, but just as in a case of criminal justice, should only provide punishment for proveable offenses against another in regard to life, liberty, property.

This is not the procedure, however. Police cunningly construct speed traps designed not to promote justice, but to induce guilt for breaking a non-objective speed law. Enforcement officials and lawmakers try to justify these laws, and others (like OSHA) like them on POTENTIAL harm to life and property (I stress the "potential", because, as in criminal justice, the "potential" and the "actual" are worlds apart: you "potentially" face death every second of your life). It is those of such "potential" mentality who have destroyed the concept of justice.

MARK F. TUCKER

Asks support

Lincoln, Neb.

I feel it is time the public is made aware of a group of young people proudly representing our city in the Festival of American Community Theaters, June 24-26, 1977, in Spokane, Washington. I am talking of the cast of "The Me Nobody Knows" from our own playhouse.

But it seems due to the lack of support behind this young cast we are short of finances to get our talented cast, crew and orchestra to Spokane. I know the majority of the public is unaware that this group has done all their own fund-raising by special performances and the cutting of a record of the songs of the show. They have worked hard!

I am asking that the citizens of Lincoln support now our Lincoln Community Playhouse and this cast. Somehow we always get the money for Big Red and the University Marching Band, we need that very support from all of you. Please care about us, too.

City sells her $30,000 home for $173.70

Los Angeles (AP) — When Willia V. Moore of Watts didn't pay a streetlight assessment, the city in effect sold her $30,000 home for $173.70 and now she faces eviction.

Her plight is stirring a court test of a law which one legal aid lawyer calls "a boondoggle for speculators."

The 66-year-old state law was intended to make street improvement easier. But in the past year alone, the Legal Aid Foundation says, it has cost 143 Los Angeles County residents their homes.

"It's unbelievable that all this is happening," said Mrs. Moore, a 53-year-old hospital clerk who, according to attorney Ron Javor, bought the duplex for $30,000 in 1955 and paid it off in 1962.

"It's like waking up after a dream and all the parts don't fit. I'm praying for my home every day," she said.

Statewide, according to Legal Aid lawyer Stan DiOrio,' "very easily we could be talking about several hundred (home losses) a year."

The problem, says DiOrio, is that the law "does not provide adequate and clear notice for homeowners and taxpayers; (it) provides a boondoggle for speculators."

The Legal Aid Society is helping Mrs. Moore sue the city in county Superior Court on grounds that the Improvement Act of 1911 allows property sales far below real value without enough notice to owners.

The society also says there isn't enough recourse, such as hearings.

Four of Mrs. Moore's six children and two grandchildren live with her. DiOrio said she has dutifully paid property taxes of about $250 a year — even since the house was taken away.

The trouble began when the city put lights on her street in 1971 and assessed the residents. Mrs. Moore said she saw no need for the lights and ignored her bill — originally $121.60.

She says she was told by Councilman John Gibson she would have 10 years to pay, but Gibson's office says it warned her she had to pay.

She ignored foreclosure notices, and the assessment bill was sold in 1974 for $173.70 — the assessment plus such costs as interest — and was later resold to Pauline Rust for $500. Mrs. Moore said she was unaware of either sale until an eviction notice arrived in January.

She has refused to move, and DiOrio says the current owner has now offered to sell the home back to Mrs. Moore for $6,000 rather than market value. "I guess it was her way of being nice," he said.

Under the law, property owners have 30 days to pay an assessment or to make arrangements to pay it in installments over as much as 10 years. If they don't, the city treasurer's office can sell the unpaid bill to anyone interested and must notify the home owner within 30 days of the sale. Full title to the property reverts to the purchaser of the bill if the original owner doesn't buy it back within one to four years — at the price of the assessment plus interest.

Associated Press

Critics of the law say it encourages speculation based on the hope that an unsuspecting homeowner will neglect to buy back the assessment bill and unwittingly lose property worth far more.

Under the law, the original owner must tell the buyer within six months that he intends to buy back the bill. Javor also says a person without legal training would not easily understand the legal notices.

He met Monday with city officials and said they agreed the language should be clearer. But he said the city treasurer would not agree to a moratorium on similar sales until new regulations can be written.

Two months ago, Mrs. Moore mailed a $173 check to the city treasurer in a belated effort to put things right, but he mailed it back.

A Superior Court hearing has been scheduled next Monday.

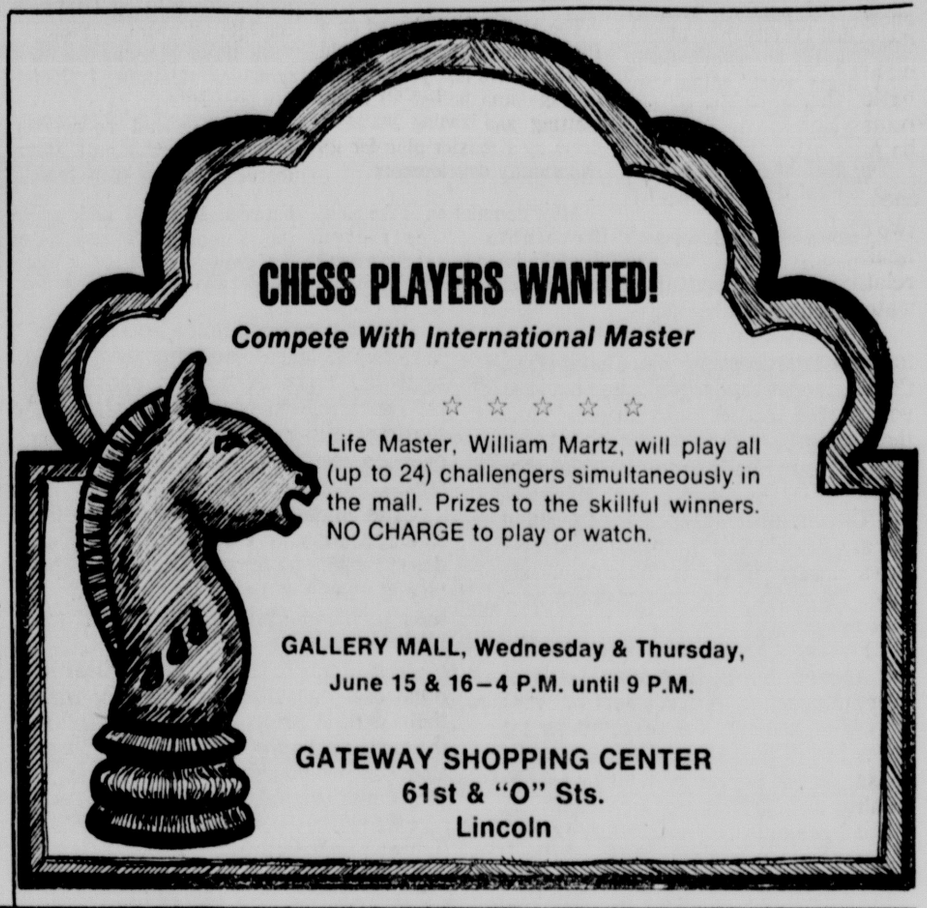
Six-month extension approved by subcommittee

Washington (AP) — A House panel has voted to give 20 states threatened with loss of $142 million in Medicaid payments a six-month extension to comply with federal requirements on reviewing nursing homes that house Medicaid clients.

The extension, until Jan. 1, 1978, was approved Monday by the House Commerce Committee's health and environment subcommittee.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said last week that the law would force him to withhold payments due the states July 1. But he called on Congress to change the law to set new guidelines and to permit the states to get the aid.

Unless Congress approves the extension, Nebraska stands to lose $1,386,147.



Last man who fled with Ray recaptured

Brushy Mountain, Tenn. (AP) — The most extensive manhunt in Tennessee history ended in triumph Tuesday when the same dog handler who ran down James Earl Ray caught the last of six inmates who fled Brushy Mountain Penitentiary with Ray five days before.

Douglas Shelton, 32, was recaptured about 9 a.m. by guard Sammy Joe Chapman. Shelton, Ray and and Ray's cellmate, Earl Hill Jr., are believed by prison officials to have planned the breakout.

But Warden Stonney Lane said in connection with that theory: "I don't think we'll ever know for sure. They are the only ones who really know and they aren't saying anything."

A lawyer for Ray, the confessed slayer of Martin Luther King Jr., said his client denied participation in the planning. The lawyer also said he didn't think Ray had outside help.

Lane said a small map of the immediate area cut out of a state highway map and $290 were found on Ray after his capture Monday.

In Ray's left front pocket, officers found a wad of $80 in a rubber band, Lane said. The remainder was located during a strip search before a physical examination in the prison infirmary.

The warden said inmates are allowed to have up to $70 in cash but guards routinely find more money in cells than the rule allows.

Ray was paid $35 at the first of each month for work in the prison laundry. He was also entitled to draw $35 in the middle of each month from a prison account provided each prisoner for income from relatives and prison work. Money also changes hands among the inmates for various purposes, including gambling, Lane said.

Shelton's capture kept unblemished the maximum security prison's record of no successful escapes. Officials said the hunt had been the biggest in state history, involving 175 searchers and costing $175,000 in overtime pay alone.

Shelton was found after a van he stole in the Beech Fork area of Anderson County ran off a state highway and over an embankment as guards gave chase.

Officials said Larry Phillips, the owner of the van, had just gotten in when he was grabbed from behind and thrown out by Shelton, hiding in the back. Shelton was caught about 18 miles down the winding highway from where Ray was captured and about 7 miles northeast of the prison.

Pork barrel projects win; President loses

Washington (AP) — The House, ignoring President Carter's wishes, rejected a move Tuesday to slash 16 water projects from the $10.2 billion public works appropriation bill.

But the vote against the amendment was 218 to 194, which was a strong showing in defeat for the Carter forces.

The House then passed the bill, 356 to 54, and sent it to the Senate.

The vote cast doubt on whether the water projects' supporters in the House could muster a two-thirds majority to override a presidential veto on the bill.

The White House has indicated Carter may veto the measure if funds are left intact for projects he considers not worth their economic and environmental costs.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said that despite the loss, Carter was pleased by the vote, which Powell said "indicates substantial sympathy" for attempts to hold down spending.

Asked whether the vote showed there was enough support to sustain a veto, Powell said: "I think that's obvious."

But asked whether Carter would veto the measure, he said, "It's certainly our hope he will not be faced with a situation in which he has to exercise the veto."

Safety defects alleged in Toyota, Chrysler models

Washington (AP) — Investigations of alleged safety defects in Toyota and Chrysler Corp. autos were announced Tuesday by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

The Toyota investigation involves potential electrical fires in 1969-1972 Corona Mark II models with automatic transmissions. The problem in the Chrysler cars is engine stalling in the 1975-1977 Dart, Valiant, Aspen and Volare models.

The safety administration has received reports of 22 Toyota fires, one involving a death, and it estimates that 100,000 cars may be subject to the problem.

According to the agency, the fires may begin when the vehicles are shifted into park, causing a short. The fire can quickly spread to the console between the front seats which houses the automatic transmission shift lever.

The agency has received 114 owner complaints about the Chrysler engine-stalling problem. There have been no reports of injuries, but two accidents are believed related to the trouble.

Most owner complaints reported several unsuccessful attempts to have the stalling corrected by dealers. The agency estimates more than one million autos might be subject to the investigation.

Town of Elkhorn may declare homebuilding moratorium

Elkhorn (AP) — Elkhorn Mayor William Kohlhaase told about 100 persons Monday night that the city may adopt a moratorium on homebuilding and begin work within two weeks on a restrictive growth ordinance.

The goal, he said, is to slow and control development, not to stop it.

Landowners and developers with property outside the city objected to the proposals at the city council's public hearing on the so-called Petaluma ordinance.

The ordinance is based on a Petaluma, Calif., plan upheld by the courts last year. Under it, Petaluma halted all home platting and zoning while it drew up a master plan for its community development.

After completion of the plan, Petaluma restricted homebuilding to a certain level during a given year.

Springfield in Sarpy County adopted a restrictive growth plan recently which stopped subdivision building. Gretna is considering a similar plan.

All three communities face problems stemming from urban sprawl.

Kohlhaase said the number of building permits in Elkhorn increased more than tenfold between 1965 and 1975, while the community's population has grown from 1,100 to more than 1,600 in the past five years.

In addition, there now are some 1,200 lots platted in the Elkhorn School District.

The mayor said the growth has put a strain on city services, such as a new sewer plant installed in 1975 which was supposed to handle city needs until 1985. It already sometimes runs at capacity, Kohlhaase said.

Planning adviser Mits Kawamoto outlined the Elkhorn proposal and said it would apply only to the city and its one-mile zoning limit.

He said there would be a "statement of moratorium" on the platting and zoning of new homes "for a long enough period of time to achieve a control level." He said the moratorium might be for 6 to 12 months.

During that period, he said, the city would update its subdivision and zoning regulations, plot its service needs and determine the number and kind of houses to be built.

Kawamoto suggested a five-year program during which a 20-year program also would be devised.

Developer Robert Gottsch plans to build about 70 homes north of Elkhorn.

He said the proposed city move "would only add fuel to the fire. You would have more development outside the zoning limits. We don't need a planner. We need business and we need industry."

Attorney Harry Farnham, who owns land south of Elkhorn, said the proposal would penalize landowners within the Elkhorn zoning limits. He said it would be senseless to adopt the proposal without county assistance.

Kohlhaase and Kawamoto agreed. They said they had been told the county is taking an interest.

Kawamoto said Douglas County's planning commission is approving no new home plats or zoning in its limits.

He said the county is working on two proposals, one of which would allow no developments unless they were within the jurisdiction of a city. The other would allow developments only if they provided full services or could be hooked properly to existing ones.

Ecology class project turned into Utica park

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Utica — Deciding two years ago that ecology class "should be more than just studying about plants," two high school sophomores decided to do more than just complain.

They wound up building a park.

In downtown Utica, next to the Burlington Northern Railroad tracks, is the result: the trees and flowers of Centennial Park, dedicated on Utica's 100th anniversary.

The students now are graduates. But Bonnie Tomes and Cindy Rathje still have the pleasure of driving past their school project and calling it "our park."

Ecology class teacher Arvon Engel credits the girls with getting the old park renovated. "They saw the weeds and the mess and wanted to do something about it," said Engel, who also is a member of the village board.

During the 1975 ecology class, Bonnie and Cindy urged Engel to allow his students to undertake class projects as part of their assignments. Most turned in term papers or photo presentations, but the girls thought those "boring."

"We wanted to do something to help clean up the town," Bonnie said. "We wanted something everyone could enjoy."

The two drew up plans for the renovation of a square-block area alongside the tracks.

Decades ago, Engel said, the area was carefully tended by the depot manager, who planted trees and kept a flower garden. But eventually the depot was closed and demolished and the weeds took over.

Once their plans were drawn, Cindy and Bonnie had to present the idea to the village board. "That was so scary," Bonnie recalled. "I thought, I'm going in there and if they don't like it I'm going to crawl out."

But the board liked the idea "and a lot of people got interested in the project," Cindy said.

The girls, plus plenty of volunteers, cleaned up the abandoned park area, planted grass and several trees that were donated by the Henry Field Nurseries.

They also constructed an elevated flower garden from discarded railroad ties, and Utica's garden club donated the first flowers. All the work followed the design created by Cindy and Bonnie.

"They had kind of decided to aim for the (town's) centennial celebration," said Engel. "And I'll tell you, if they hadn't pushed it, it probably wouldn't have happened.

Today, the girls are hoping for renovation of a second square-block area near their park, and perhaps a small fish pond.

"If we could just get some more things done," Bonnie said, "that would be great."

Engel said the project proved worthwhile, and not only to ecology class students. "They could see that something was being accomplished — not just the kids but the whole town."

Yet one thing remains that brings a momentary frown to Bonnie and Cindy: "Mr. Engel only gave us a B (on the park project)."

The teacher has promised to check the records on that.

Spanish center requests funds

Grand Island (UPI) — A request from the La Raza Cultural Center for $10,000 to hire a director received a luke warm reception Tuesday from the Hall County Board.

The request was referred to the board's finance committee whose chairman, Bernie Crick, said he personally felt "if the county agrees to fund the director we will have to contend with similar requests from various minorities."

Moses Cavazos, the planner for the Grand Island Coalition for Spanish Speaking Citizens, told the borad La Raza was trying to become more community oriented and help all low income families instead of just Mexican Americans.

Cavazos said the U.S. Agriculture Department in Denver contacted the center Tuesday concerning a lunch program for Grand Island low income families.

Since a federal grant to fund the community center recently expired, the center has approached the county board and city council but neither group has approved funding.

Board Chairman Ralph Herndon noted "when I came on the board 11 years ago we didn't have anything like this."

"Somehow we got along," Herndon said, "and now this board and city government and every other political entity has got to establish priorities and tighten up somewhere."

Town of Elkhorn may declare homebuilding moratorium

Elkhorn (AP) — Elkhorn Mayor William Kohlhaase told about 100 persons Monday night that the city may adopt a moratorium on homebuilding and begin work within two weeks on a restrictive growth ordinance.

The goal, he said, is to slow and control development, not to stop it.

Landowners and developers with property outside the city objected to the proposals at the city council's public hearing on the so-called Petaluma ordinance.

The ordinance is based on a Petaluma, Calif., plan upheld by the courts last year. Under it, Petaluma halted all home platting and zoning while it drew up a master plan for its community development.

After completion of the plan, Petaluma restricted homebuilding to a certain level during a given year.

Springfield in Sarpy County adopted a restrictive growth plan recently which stopped subdivision building. Gretna is considering a similar plan.

All three communities face problems stemming from urban sprawl.

Kohlhaase said the number of building permits in Elkhorn increased more than tenfold between 1965 and 1975, while the community's population has grown from 1,100 to more than 1,600 in the past five years.

In addition, there now are some 1,200 lots platted in the Elkhorn School District.

The mayor said the growth has put a strain on city services, such as a new sewer plant installed in 1975 which was supposed to handle city needs until 1985. It already sometimes runs at capacity, Kohlhaase said.

Planning adviser Mits Kawamoto outlined the Elkhorn proposal and said it would apply only to the city and its one-mile zoning limit.

He said there would be a "statement of moratorium" on the platting and zoning of new homes "for a long enough period of time to achieve a control level." He said the moratorium might be for 6 to 12 months.

During that period, he said, the city would update its subdivision and zoning regulations, plot its service needs and determine the number and kind of houses to be built.

Kawamoto suggested a five-year program during which a 20-year program also would be devised.

Developer Robert Gottsch plans to build about 70 homes north of Elkhorn.

He said the proposed city move "would only add fuel to the fire. You would have more development outside the zoning limits. We don't need a planner. We need business and we need industry."

Attorney Harry Farnham, who owns land south of Elkhorn, said the proposal would penalize landowners within the Elkhorn zoning limits. He said it would be senseless to adopt the proposal without county assistance.

Kohlhaase and Kawamoto agreed. They said they had been told the county is taking an interest.

Kawamoto said Douglas County's planning commission is approving no new home plats or zoning in its limits.

He said the county is working on two proposals, one of which would allow no developments unless they were within the jurisdiction of a city. The other would allow developments only if they provided full services or could be hooked properly to existing ones.

Ecology class project turned into Utica park

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Utica — Deciding two years ago that ecology class "should be more than just studying about plants," two high school sophomores decided to do more than just complain.

They wound up building a park.

In downtown Utica, next to the Burlington Northern Railroad tracks, is the result: the trees and flowers of Centennial Park, dedicated on Utica's 100th anniversary.

Recreation problems at prison confirmed

The complaints of two former athletic directors at the Nebraska Penal Complex may have had some substance.

Andy Alexander resigned as inside athletic director at the penitentiary in April. In May his successor, Ed Golden, quit. Golden called the job "Frustration, Inc."

Correctional Services Director Joe Vitek acknowledged Monday there have been problems, "mostly with equipment," in the prison athletic programs. Shortage of good equipment, due to "hard use and some larceny" has plagued the program, he added.

Vitek said that in all his years of corrections work there always have been problems with athletic programs and in dining rooms, and Nebraska is no exception. The fault, he noted, was partially with the inmates, partially with the directors and partially with the prison administration.

Alexander said it's not the convicts that bother you, "It's the people up front."

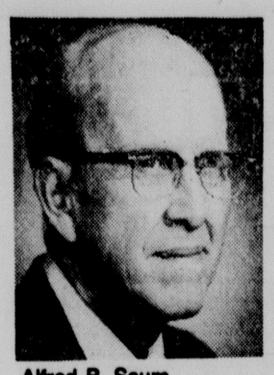
Golden charged "outright harrassment and bias toward the athletic director" by the guards.

"We need to establish closer accountability of recreation equipment and scheduling games both with outside and intramural teams," Vitek said.

He said that some states have tried an all-inmate run program, but that has some snags. "Any way you slice it, this equipment gets hard use and disappears," he added.

Alexander and Golden said they spent some of their own money for equipment. Alexander said he talked himself out of quitting several times.

Vitek said that Warden Robert Parratt has made the largest expenditure ever to upgrade athletic programs in the past six months. He noted that the Legislature has appropriated $75,000 for improvement of recreation.



Alfred B. Saum
... new grand master

Nebraska Masons elect

Alfred B. Saum of Kearney has been elected grand master of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Nebraska, succeeding T. Leo Stines of Central City. The election and installation took place during the group's annual meeting in Lincoln.

Other state officers of the Grand Lodge include:

Jack H. Hendrix of Trenton, deputy grand master; Warren D. Lichty of Lincoln, senior warden; Byron C. Jenkins of Omaha, junior warden; Norris W. Lallman of Omaha, secretary; the Rev. J. Dallas Gibson of Lincoln, chaplain; Bevin B. Bump of Chardon, orator; Gladwyn A. Youngs of Lincoln, historian; Ralph W. Gerry of Omaha, custodian; Robert A. Metcalf of Lincoln, marshal; Harold C. Wurdeman of Columbus, senior deacon; Paul R. Pierce of Hastings, junior deacon; and Wayne G. Luenenborg of North Platte, tyler.

Cattle on feed up 4% from 1976 levels

Nebraska cattle feeders had 1,280,000 cattle on feed June 1, the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Tuesday. The current inventory is up 4% from 1976 and up 32% from the low level of 1975.

Marketings of fed cattle during May by Nebraska feeders totaled $320,000, the same as a year ago, but 31% above two years ago.

Placements of cattle into feedlots during May totaled 285,000, up 15% from last year and up 4% from two years ago.

Exon aid quits for Wyoming post

Gov. J. James Exon announced Tuesday the resignation of one of his top aids, W. Don Nelson, director of the State Office of Planning and Programming.

Nelson, 33, will leave next month to head a new social service agency for Wyoming Gov. Edgar Herschler.

Exon said he accepted Nelson's resignation "with deep regrets at his leaving, recognizing that his contribution to state government will be long remembered."

Recreation problems at prison confirmed

The complaints of two former athletic directors at the Nebraska Penal Complex may have had some substance.

Andy Alexander resigned as inside athletic director at the penitentiary in April. In May his successor, Ed Golden, quit. Golden called the job "Frustration, Inc."

Correctional Services Director Joe Vitek acknowledged Monday there have been problems, "mostly with equipment," in the prison athletic programs. Shortage of good equipment, due to "hard use and some larceny" has plagued the program, he added.

Vitek said that in all his years of corrections work there always have been problems with athletic programs and in dining rooms, and Nebraska is no exception. The fault, he noted, was partially with the inmates, partially with the directors and partially with the prison administration.

Alexander said it's not the convicts that bother you, "It's the people up front."

Golden charged "outright harrassment and bias toward the athletic director" by the guards.

"We need to establish closer accountability of recreation equipment and scheduling games both with outside and intramural teams," Vitek said.

He said that some states have tried an all-inmate run program, but that has some snags. "Any way you slice it, this equipment gets hard use and disappears," he added.

Alexander and Golden said they spent some of their own money for equipment. Alexander said he talked himself out of quitting several times.

Vitek said that Warden Robert Parratt has made the largest expenditure ever to upgrade athletic programs in the past six months. He noted that the Legislature has appropriated $75,000 for improvement of recreation.

Alfred B. Saum

Nebraska Masons elect

Alfred B. Saum of Kearney has been elected grand master of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Nebraska, succeeding T. Leo Stines of Central City. The election and installation took place during the group's annual meeting in Lincoln.

Other state officers of the Grand Lodge include:

Jack H. Hendrix of Trenton, deputy grand master; Warren D. Lichty of Lincoln, senior warden; Byron C. Jenkins of Omaha, junior warden; Norris W. Lallman of Omaha, secretary; the Rev. J. Dallas Gibson of Lincoln, chaplain; Bevin B. Bump of Chardon, orator; Gladwyn A. Youngs of Lincoln, historian; Ralph W. Gerry of Omaha, custodian; Robert A. Metcalf of Lincoln, marshal; Harold C. Wurdeman of Columbus, senior deacon; Paul R. Pierce of Hastings, junior deacon; and Wayne G. Luesenborg of North Platte, tyler.

Cattle on feed up 4% from 1976 levels

Nebraska cattle feeders had 1,280,000 cattle on feed June 1, the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Tuesday. The current inventory is up 4% from 1976 and up 32% from the low level of 1975.

Marketings of fed cattle during May by Nebraska feeders totaled 320,000, the same as a year ago, but 31% above two years ago.

Placements of cattle into feedlots during May totaled 235,000, up 15% from last year and up 4% from two years ago.

Exon aid quits for Wyoming post

Gov. J. James Exon announced Tuesday the resignation of one of his top aids, W. Don Nelson, director of the State Office of Planning and Programming.

Nelson, 33, will leave next month to head a new social service agency for Wyoming Gov. Edgar Herschler.

Exon said he accepted Nelson's resignation "with deep regrets at his leaving, recognizing that his contribution to state government will be long remembered."

Mrs. Jensen likes those steaks.

Native Dane still loves Nebraska

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Fairbury — She's a world traveler, retired now in her native Denmark after three decades-plus of living in Hollywood.

She's visited every state in the America she adopted back in 1924. But for a few weeks, Mrs. Karen Jensen is back in "the place I like best of all — Nebraska."

"Oh, the peacefulness and the fresh air you have here and the people are so genuine," said the visitor. "And I do like those Nebraska steaks."

All these and more she has found on each of her Fairbury stays, which is every year since she returned to Denmark in 1967. She is the house guest of the Bud Boydens and "my beautiful friend for 40 years," Mrs. Eva Boyden.

Petite at a bright-eyed 77, she retains the spark which had made her a teen-age motorcyclist "way back in 1916." At that time even the idea was daring for a girl, let alone the actual deed.

"My family called me crazy, so what did I do next?" she reflected, pausing. "I got a motor car license, the second issued to a woman in all Denmark — I was right behind the Princess."

She was dwarfed by the family's monstrous Audi tourister, originally a personal staff car of the German Kaiser. The prestigious acquisition came through a friend who was a car importer.

An interesting life at the fringe of moviedom came through her husband's unusual work with several studios, particularly 20th Century Fox. Experience as a Danish sailor helped toward his career as a model shipmaker.

"Charles did the sailing vessels for 'Mutiny on the Bounty' as well as all of Lord Nelson's fleet," she reflected. "It was an interesting life, getting to know people like Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charlie Chaplin."

Cecil B. DeMille was another acquaintance, though not a favorite "because of his foul mouth."

After the loss of her husband 20 years ago, Mrs. Jensen at first moved to Sun City, Ariz. She now lives at Odense, "the home town of Hans Christian Andersen."

An American citizen, she proudly wears a tiny lapel flag about that city.

"Sometimes an American tourist notices the flag and approaches me," she beamed. "That's the only time I get to speak English now except for my trips back here."

Patrol investigating fight's role in death

Beaver Crossing (UPI) — An autopsy was conducted Tuesday to determine if a Beaver Crossing man died of injuries suffered in a fight at a local tavern.

Richard Wambold, 42, a fur buyer, died en route to a hospital Monday night, Seward County Attorney Randy Stoll said.

Captain Lynn Parks, head of the State Patrol's criminal investigation division, said Wambold apparently had a heart problem and may have died of natural causes.

Parks said the incident was being investigated as a homicide, however, until results of the autopsy were known.

A spokesman for the Seward County sheriff's office said the fight was minor. Wambold returned to his home before his family called a rescue squad.

The results of the autopsy won't be known until Wednesday or Thursday, Still said.

Wambold's survivors include his wife, Artis; children, Robin, Robert, James and Angela, all at home; and his mother, Mrs. Tillie Wambold of Beaver Crossing.

Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Thursday at the Beaver Crossing Christian Church.

Retardation group sees fund surplus

Omaha (AP) — Spokesmen said Monday the Eastern Nebraska Community Office of Retardation (ENCOR) should finish the fiscal year with about a $350,000 surplus, The budget was $5.6 million.

Ray Christensen, executive director of the Eastern Nebraska Human Service Agency (ENHSA), which includes INCOR, said he expects the budget next year to be about $6 million, up about 7 per cent.

He said the total will depend on how much money member counties allocate when they make up their budgets in August.

ENCOR cut its staff by about 100 a year ago and some programs were dropped following a lengthy public wrangle with state officials and the budget finally was balanced.

Christensen and Michael Albert, ENHSA board chairman, viewed the surplus as a sign of ENCOR's fiscal health and the stability the program has gained.

"You need a certain surplus in any agency to have a cash flow position," Albert said. "Otherwise you end up with a deficit."

Disagreement was expressed by Thomas Miller, executive director of the Greater Omaha Association for Retarded Citizens.

Miller said if there is extra money it should be spent for programs and services, not used for a financial reserve.

He said parents helped fight for an increase in state money for ENCOR and should be consulted on how any additional money should be spent.

Christensen said the state has allocated $2.4 million for next year, a $600,000 increase. ENCOR will get $400,000 in Title 20 Welfare Social Service money, a $210,000 decrease.

City worker trash pickup considered

Omaha (AP) — City Finance Director George Richardson said Monday he's looking into the possibility of using city employes to collect some of Omaha's garbage.

The garbage is currently collected under contract with National Disposal Co., for $3.8 million this year. But it was noted that cities such as Minneapolis and Oklahoma City are dividing the work between their employes and contractors — each taking a different neighborhood.

City employe, Larry Brisby, 25, is driving Mayor Al Veys, since the mayor's eyesight prevents him from getting behind the wheel of a car. Brisby, a security officer, gets about $800 a month.

Brisby picks up the mayor at home in the morning, takes him to functions during the day and then home again in the evening.

Officials said Brisby handles security work in the city-county building when not serving as the mayor's driver.

NU law college will establish water law study

A permanent Water Law Research Program will be established this month within the University of Nebraska's College of Law.

As a preliminary step toward the preparation of a Nebraska Water Plan, the operation is financed by a $38,580 grant from the University Foundation's Richard H. Larson Fund. Larson, of Lincoln, is a former State Railway Commissioner.

The staff will include co-director Prof. Richard S. Harnsberger of the UNL Law College and an attorney to be appointed.

The program will analyze major problems in preparing a State Water Plan and prepare alternative proposals for citizens and officials to consider.

Among the projects will be a book entitled, "Nebraska Water Law, Planning and Policy." The book will help the Legislature analyze provisions in the Model Water Code, Model Water Use Act and the Missouri River Basin Commission's Platte River Basin.

Retardation group sees fund surplus

Omaha (AP) — Spokesmen said Monday the Eastern Nebraska Community Office of Retardation (ENCOR) should finish the fiscal year with about a $350,000 surplus. The budget was $5.6 million.

Ray Christensen, executive director of the Eastern Nebraska Human Service Agency (ENHSA), which includes ENCOR, said he expects the budget next year to be about $6 million, up about 7 per cent.

He said the total will depend on how much money member counties allocate when they make up their budgets in August.

ENCOR cut its staff by about 100 a year ago and some programs were dropped following a lengthy public wrangle with state officials and the budget finally was balanced.

Christensen and Michael Albert, ENHSA board chairman, viewed the surplus as a sign of ENCOR's fiscal health and the stability the program has gained.

"You need a certain surplus in any agency to have a cash flow position," Albert said. "Otherwise you end up with a deficit."

Disagreement was expressed by Thomas Miller, executive director of the Greater Omaha Association for Retarded Citizens.

Miller said if there is extra money it should be spent for programs and services, not used for a financial reserve.

He said parents helped fight for an increase in state money for ENCOR and should be consulted on how any additional money should be spent.

Christensen said the state has allocated $2.4 million for next year, a $600,000 increase. ENCOR will get $400,000 in Title 20 Welfare Social Service money, a $210,000 decrease.

City worker trash pickup considered

Omaha (AP) — City Finance Director George Richardson said Monday he's looking into the possibility of using city employes to collect some of Omaha's garbage.

The garbage is currently collected under contract with National Disposal Co., for $3.8 million this year. But it was noted that cities such as Minneapolis and Oklahoma City are dividing the work between their employes and contractors — each taking a different neighborhood.

City employe, Larry Brisby, 25, is driving Mayor Al Veys, since the mayor's eyesight prevents him from getting behind the wheel of a car. Brisby, a security officer, gets about $800 a month.

Brisby picks up the mayor at home in the morning, takes him to functions during the day and then home again in the evening.

Officials said Brisby handles security work in the city-county building when not serving as the mayor's driver.

NU law college will establish water law study

A permanent Water Law Research Program will be established this month within the University of Nebraska's College of Law.

As a preliminary step toward the preparation of a Nebraska Water Plan, the operation is financed by a $38,580 grant from the University Foundation's Richard H. Larson Fund. Larson, of Lincoln, is a former State Railway Commissioner.

The staff will include co-director Prof. Richard S. Harnsberger of the UNL Law College and an attorney to be appointed.

The program will analyze major problems in preparing a State Water Plan and prepare alternative proposals for citizens and officials to consider.

Among the projects will be a book entitled, "Nebraska Water Law, Planning and Policy." The book will help the Legislature analyze provisions in the Model Water Code, Model Water Use Act and the Missouri River Basin Commission's Platte River Basin.

Safe containing $3,000 hauled from fire ruins

Chadron (UPI) — A heavy black safe containing $3,000 has been pulled from the ruins of a fire which destroyed a half-block area in Chadron's downtown business district Sunday.

The safe was on the ground floor of the H and E Auto Supply firm when the fire broke out. Flames gutted the first floor, sending the safe plunging into the basement below.

Wrecking crews used a crane to haul the safe out of the debris late Monday.

Authorities said the money and business records inside the safe escaped damage from the fire.

Other businesses in the three buildings destroyed by the fire were the Broken Wheel Saloon, Jack and Joe's Cafe and Gene's Auto Machine Shop.

Authorities have yet to determine a cause for the fire which left damage estimates as high as $750,000.

Investigation efforts were delayed Monday while workmen leveled the second story wall of the saloon, where authorities believed the fire started. The wall started swaying in the wind.

Harold Eleson, H and E manager, said many individuals including his competitors have offered to help him restart his business but he was having a problem finding a site.

"There aren't any buildings here in Chadron, so possibly we might build one," Eleson said. "We plan at this time to get back into business as soon as possible, but it may not be for two or three months."

Gene Kriz, owner of Gene's Auto Machine Shop, said he was in the process of constructing a new building which should be completed within two months.

Jack Elwood, operator of Jack and Joe's Cafe, said he could be back in business within a month if a site were obtained.

State Digest

Swim pool proposed

Cozad — Residents here will go to the polls Tuesday, June 28, to vote on a $125,000 swimming pool bond issue. If approved, the new pool will be constructed in Muni Park, site of the present pool built in 1947.

Cozad has been okayed by the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation for 50% matching federal funds to finance the new pool, estimated to cost $250,000.

Heating bill aid okd

Washington (AP) — The Community Services Administration says Nebraska is eligible for $2.3 million in federal funds to help the state's poorest people pay last winter's unusually high heating bills. Nationally, the agency is making about $200 million available through August.

A spokeswoman said the formula for each state is based on weather conditions, as determined by heating degree days above the normal; fuel price factors and the number of households at the poverty income level.

Tuition rates hiked

McCook (AP) — The McCook Board of Education has approved $530 per student increase in non-resident tuition at McCook High School.

The newly-adopted rate for students in grades 9-12 is $1,920, an increase of nearly 39% over last year's rate of $1,382.

Bargaining due

Omaha (AP) — Western Electric in Omaha and Local 1974 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers are to begin bargaining today on "non-economic" local issues, according to White Clark, local vice president. The local represents about 3,700 employes.

Reservoir inspected

Brainard (UPI) — Officials of the Lower Platte South Natural Resources District made the final inspection Tuesday of another flood control structure in the North Oak Watershed project.

The structure, two miles southeast of here, is dam 6-C and will be developed for public access. NRD general manager Hal Schroeder said the reservoir will have a pool of 36 surface acres when filled.

The structure cost $100,000 and the district spent another $98,000 acquiring 160 acres.

Seed firm expanding

Omaha (AP) — The Douglas County Board Tuesday approved a $740,000 Industrial Development Act bond issue for Robinson Seed Co. to expand its building and operations at Waterloo.

Arson suspected

Omaha (AP) — District Fire Chief Bart McElligott said arson is the suspected cause of a blaze which caused an estimated $5,000 damage at a portable classroom building at Sherman Elementary School Monday night.

Customers urged to curtail electricity use

Columbus (AP) — The Nebraska Public Power District is asking its customers to avoid using electricity between 10 a.m. and 8 p.m. on days when the temperature is forecast to reach 88 degrees or higher.

An NPPD program called "Condition 88" is designed to save ratepayers money and avoid a demand for massive building expenses for generating units, the district said.

The district suggested such activities as washing, drying and ironing clothes; running dishwashers; bathing and using electric stoves be curtailed during peak hours. It also urged customers to set air conditioning thermostats at 78 degrees or higher.

Similar usage patterns also are encouraged by the Lincoln Electric System, but no new promotion is under way, according to spokesperson Pat Smith.

She said, however, that LES does not ask people to avoid using electricity until after 2 p.m. Use of electricity on hot days means LES is forced to turn to standby generators which burn costly oil to meet the peak demands.

Farmers must plan, regulate farm production

At a summer workshop of Nebraska educators at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Gov. J. James Exon spoke on "Concepts and Careers in an Agricultural State."

Exon said agriculture needs to regulate production with long-term planning that allows mistakes in production to be corrected. Agriculture should take a clue in planning from the auto industry, he said.

In order to take out the extreme ups and downs of farm commodity prices, Exon said, the farmer needs more than historical facts. He needs planning so that he may receive a stable, dependable income, he said.

"We should develop a better information system under our U.S. government," he said. "Perhaps, Exon said, sample farms in each state could collect data to feed into a central computer on every phase of agriculture, such as planning how much to plant, what and when. All information from each state could be compiled to aid planning. The same could be done for livestock, he said.

How to attack cholesterol.

You have one weapon in your hand every time you sit down to eat. Your fork.

But taking the advice of many doctors and restricting the amount of saturated fat and cholesterol in your diet isn't always easy.

It usually means cutting back on your favorite meats.

On bacon. On sausage. On ham. Breakfast foods you've always loved and hate to give up.

But Morningstar Farms® wants you to know that you don't have to give up the taste of any of your favorite breakfast foods just because you want to give up the cholesterol in them. We've developed a whole freezer shelf full of delicious breakfast foods made with textured vegetable protein.

There are crisp Breakfast Strips with the subtle, smokey taste of bacon. For those of you who love pork sausage, we've cooked up delicious Breakfast Links and Patties. Pick your favorite. They'll make your mouth water as they pop and sizzle in the the pan. The special taste of ham? We've got it. Try our Breakfast Slices. There's absolutely no cholesterol or animal fat in any Morningstar Farms product. Tomorrow morning, sit down to a breakfast just as good as your breakfasts used to be. Job may last just an hour

By Harry Jackson
Star Staff Writer

If you like to change jobs on a daily basis and sometimes not work at all, oddly enough there's a place for you.

It's called the Spot Labor Office and it's run by the Nebraska Job Service at 317 S. 11th.

"It should be called the casual labor office," said Henry Troutman, manager of the office. "We supply jobs that last one hour to one day, and now and then there'll be jobs lasting three days to a week."

The average job lasts about four hours, he said.

The facility is a clearinghouse for employers needing temporary workers and for temporary workers needing temporary jobs.

Applying for work there is the same as in the Job Service office. A prospective worker fills out an application and checks in when he or she feels like working.

Troutman says he gets as few as two and as many as 35 applicants a day, although the average is about 10.

The applicants are matched with about three or four employers who call in each day for temporary workers.

Most of the jobs involve unloading trucks, Troutman said, either from plumbing or electrical supply warehouses or from vegetable or meat suppliers.

The most frequent employer will call in about once a week on the average and ask for two to three workers.

Workers earn $2.50 per hour and up, depending on the job and even the time of day.

"If the truckers are pressed for time, they'll pay more," Troutman said.

If a trucker has a load of perishable goods parked at a warehouse that will close in two hours, he'll offer more money for workers.

If the job is early in the morning and there are several hours left in the workday, he may pay about $3 per hour, he said. And that's usually the case because the office is only open 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. Monday through Friday and that's when most of the calls come in.

People seek work through the Spot Labor Office for a variety of reasons, Troutman said.

Some clients are travelers.

"They come into town and need some kind of work so they can move on," Troutman said. "A while back, one guy said he was a lawyer and was on his way back to Las Vegas. I never did figure that out."

Some are persons who just don't like steady jobs.

"They work when they need money and don't when they don't," Troutman said. "Who am I to say what's the right kind of life to live."

Others may need extra money.

"We get people who have jobs already but want some extra work," Troutman said. "I've been here six years and I think I've seen every type of profession come through here except, maybe a medical doctor."

And even some rarities come to mind.

"One man was an engineer just separated from his wife. Every place he worked, she'd nave his wages garnished," he said. "Well, he just said to hell with it and started working here. You can't garnish wages on a day-by-day job."

Other clients work seasonal jobs and need work during the off season.

Troutman said he gets the most activity during the spring and summer. The least is from Christmas through January when inventories are taken and business is slow.

Corporate managers divided into four types

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

Book Review

One day at lunch another reporter on the staff told us of a sociological perspective in which people are divided into two categories.

According to this theory, developed by an ad man, people are either mammanoids, who strive for power and security, or tediophobes, who spend their lives trying to avoid tedium and boredom.

It made for an interesting minute or two of luncheon conversation before we passed on into a discussion of the blandness of the quiche Lorraine and the need for another glass of Chablis to break the tedium.

People have always been interested in this sort of categorization and it is the appeal of "The Gamesman" by Michael Maccoby.

According to Maccoby, corporate managers can be divided into four major types: the craftsmen, the jungle fighters, the company men and the gamesmen.

He forms this conclusion on the basis of interviews with 250 corporate managers (and some of their families) from 12 major companies, some of them referred to as "elite corporations" by Maccoby.

The craftsmen, Maccoby says, are quiet, sincere, modest and practical, who enjoy the process of making something, but who usually are too self-contained to rise high in the corporate structure.

"The jungle fighter's goal is power. He experiences life and work as a jungle (not a game) where it is eat or be eaten, and the winners destroy the losers," Maccoby says. This type flourished in the days of Andrew Carnegie, but are not doing so well in today's corporate atmosphere, where they are often seen as destructive to the team spirit.

The company men are the "organization men" described by William Whyte Jr. in the 1950s. His identity is based on being part of the powerful, protective company. In today's business climate, according to Maccoby, the company men are not rising beyond middle management positions because they are seen as lacking in risk-taking ability, toughness, detachment, confidence and self-control and energy to reach the top.

The gamesmen, according to Maccoby, are the new corporate leaders, typified in public life by John F. Kennedy. "He responds to life and work as a game. The contest hypes him up and he communicates his enthusiasm, thus energizing others . . . He is a team player whose center is the corporation."

After describing these character types in detail, Maccoby goes on to urge that corporate structures be redefined in such a way that the gamesmen of America are encouraged to develop qualities of the heart, as well as the head.

The social character typing that is the meat of "The Gamesman" presumably has value in helping people understand human reality. And perhaps it does in a rough sense. But the reader must have a great predisposition toward this sort of thing to stay with it for an entire book.

Maccoby has a little trouble sustaining the approach himself. At one point his work sounds like something lifted from a work on astrological signs.

Consider: "He is idealistic, yet shrewd and pragmatic; cooperative, yet highly competitive; enthusiastic, yet detached; earnest, yet evasive; graceful, yet restless; energetic, yet itchy."

This method of description can be applied to "The Gamesman." It is interesting, yet boring. It is illuminating, yet shallow. It is perceptive, yet obvious. It will be discussed by scholars, but serves as a topic for luncheon conversation. The latter quality is its chief value for most readers.

Opening lead — ten of hearts.

Let's assume you're in six hearts. If you make the slam, you score 700 points for winning the rubber, 750 for the slam, 100 honors, and 180 for the tricks — a total of 1,730 points.

Now let's suppose — unhappy thought — that you go down one. In that case, there's no score. So, the difference between making the slam and going down one is 1,730 points. That's a lot of points in bridge, even if you're playing for only ten pins a point.

Let's also assume you have a chance to make an extra trick in the slam. If you make it, you gain 30 points. Not to be sneezed at, of course, but a drop in the bucket compared to 1,730 points. All of which is a prelude to the misfortune that befell South on this deal. He got to six hearts, which was surely a reasonable contract. West led a trump and South cashed three high trumps.

He next cashed the A-K-Q of diamonds, discarding a spade from his hand, after which he stewed for quite a while, not knowing which one of his A-Q's to finesse. He finally tried the spade finesse and went down one.

What South should have done, after drawing trumps, was lead the diamond five and follow low from dummy! True, this would amount to losing a diamond trick even though he had no diamond loser, but South could easily afford to be magnanimous with this 30-point trick.

By deliberately conceding a diamond trick, South could nail down the slam even if the suit proved to be divided 4-1. This was surely not much of a premium to pay for trying to insure the slam. At most, it would cost him three hundred pins!

Job may last just an hour

By Harry Jackson
Star Staff Writer

If you like to change jobs on a daily basis and sometimes not work at all, oddly enough there's a place for you.

It's called the Spot Labor Office and it's run by the Nebraska Job Service at 317 S. 11th.

"It should be called the casual labor office," said Henry Troutman, manager of the office. "We supply jobs that last one hour to one day, and now and then there'll be jobs lasting three days to a week."

The average job lasts about four hours, he said.

The facility is a clearinghouse for employers needing temporary workers and for temporary workers needing temporary jobs.

Applying for work there is the same as in the Job Service office. A prospective worker fills out an application and checks in when he or she feels like working.

Troutman says he gets as few as two and as many as 35 applicants a day, although the average is about 10.

The applicants are matched with about three or four employers who call in each day for temporary workers.

Most of the jobs involve unloading trucks, Troutman said, either from plumbing or electrical supply warehouses or from vegetable or meat suppliers.

The most frequent employer will call in about once a week on the average and ask for two to three workers.

Workers earn $2.50 per hour and up, depending on the job and even the time of day.

"If the truckers are pressed for time, they'll pay more," Troutman said.

If a trucker has a load of perishable goods parked at a warehouse that will close in two hours, he'll offer more money for workers.

If the job is early in the morning and there are several hours left in the workday, he may pay about $3 per hour, he said. And that's usually the case because the office is only open 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. Monday through Friday and that's when most of the calls come in.

People seek work through the Spot Labor Office for a variety of reasons, Troutman said.

Some clients are travelers.

"They come into town and need some kind of work so they can move on," Troutman said. "A while back, one guy said he was a lawyer and was on his way back to Las Vegas. I never did figure that out."

Some are persons who just don't like steady jobs.

"They work when they need money and don't when they don't," Troutman said. "Who am I to say what's the right kind of life to live."

Others may need extra money.

"We get people who have jobs already but want some extra work," Troutman said. "I've been here six years and I think I've seen every type of profession come through here except, maybe a medical doctor."

And even some rarities come to mind.

"One man was an engineer just separated from his wife. Every place he worked, she'd have his wages garnished," he said. "Well, he just said to hell with it and started working here. You can't garnish wages on a day-by-day job."

Other clients work seasonal jobs and need work during the off season.

Troutman said he gets the most activity during the spring and summer. The least is from Christmas through January when inventories are taken and business is slow.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Please rush me 10 "Do's and Don'ts" on how to get my husband back. He hasn't actually left me, he's just not here. I am 26 and Jeff is 28, and he hasn't even held my hand since last December!

We have two adorable children. We planned to have four, but if I'm going to have any more, I will have to look into artificial insemination. I've been complaining about this for a long time, but it hasn't done me much good. Jeff says he's "tired" (But he's not too tired to play two hours of tennis every Sunday!)

Then it suddenly hit me. I guess I don't appeal to him anymore. I don't know why. I'm the same girl he chased all over the campus at Boulder, Colorado eight years ago. I haven't let myself go to seed, and I know there's nobody else. I just hate to be the aggressor, but if I wait for Jeff to make the first move, nothing will ever happen. Besides, I have my pride. So please be a pal, Abby, and send me those 10 Do's and Don'ts" on how to get my husband back. Thank you.

RUTHIE

DEAR RUTHIE: I wish there were 10 "Do's and Don'ts" on how to revive a marriage. But there aren't. Every marriage is different. (And so is every Jeff.)

Face your problem squarely, and tell it to Jeff. Don't play a waiting game, and forget your pride. He obviously has a problem. It could be physical. Or emotional. In any case he has cooled off far too much for a young man who is still on the sunny side of 30. Get counseling!

DEAR ABBY: How do you think our young people compare with the generation before them?

INTERESTED

DEAR INTERESTED: Despite all the crime, violence and rebellion that has surfaced today, I have seen more compassion, love and caring and less bigotry, prejudice and selfishness than was evidenced 20 years ago.

DEAR ABBY: I foolishly married for a second time, thinking I would have companionship for the rest of my life, but I was wrong. All Abe wanted was a cook and housekeeper.

He only wants to go to visit HIS children and grandchildren. Never mine. Not only that, he is very close with a dollar. He has a lot more than I have, but he doesn't spend any of his. Only mine. We live in MY house, and I pay the taxes and upkeep while he hangs on to his money, which he will leave to HIS children.

At age 64 would you advise a separation?

SARAH

DEAR SARAH: I would advise a separation — of money, first. If Abe has money, let him spend it. Talk in money syllables. If he isn't any happier with this arrangement than you are, separate everything else.

At age 64 would you advise a separation?

SARAH

DEAR SARAH: I would advise a separation — of money, first. If Abe has money, let him spend it. Talk in money syllables. If he isn't any happier with this arrangement than you are, separate everything else.

Doctor-patient communication is an ancient health problem

To Your Good Health

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read your column and find it interesting and informative. There's one thing I cannot for the life of me understand.

Why would a grown person pay good money to see a physician or specialist concerning an illness and still feel so uninformed about a problem to write you for further information? I imagine there are doctors who won't take the time to explain. Or is it that the patient doesn't ask?

I was always afraid to insist on such information until I realized that often you must be firm and see to it that all your questions are answered. The general questions in your column are fine, but maybe you could help these people by printing a set of guidelines on how to ask and get answers from a physician. — A Reader.

The problem of communication between doctors and patients is as old as medicine itself.

The answer is not as simple as it first appears. Most physicians agree with you that an informed patient is a better patient. But the barriers to full understanding are formidable. In the first place, diagnosis is often a long procedure. There are times when the doctor does not know or is unsure about things. At times he (or she) may feel he knows but is not sure enough to say. Often the patient is reluctant to seek information for a variety of reasons. He may be unequipped to understand medical terms or may not want to know.

The doctor may be hard put to explain in understandable non-technical language just what is wrong or what he suspects is wrong. Often he may not have enough time for a detailed explanation.

Signs warn of 'turtle crossing'

Avalon, N.J. (AP) — Motorists here have been asked to obey "turtle crossing" signs.

The Avalon Conservation Commission said the annual turtle migration has begun from back bay marshlands to sand dunes, increasing the risk of turtles being run over.

The turtles lay their eggs in the warm sand.

Health Tip

Alcoholism today is much more common in women than most people realize.

Most medical people now think of alcoholism as a sickness, no more shameful than flu, says the Nebraska Medical Association.

The average woman alcoholic tasted her first drink before the age of 20. The final "loss of control," the advanced and final stage of alcoholism, happened at about age 42. In between, there was a slow deterioration from regular drinking in moderation, to frequent drunkenness at parties, to secret drinking and prolonged bouts of intoxication. Sometimes in her mid-40s, this composite woman found her life coming apart.

Alcoholism is defined as "an illness characterized by preoccupation with alcohol and loss of control over its consumption, a type of drug dependence that can harm a person's health and interfere with the individual's ability to work and get along with people. The key factor is loss of control and craving for the drug, alcohol."

Stock split 3-for-2

New York (AP) — Shareholders of PPG Industries Inc. approved a 3-for-2 stock split. The split is effective June 23 with distribution on July 22. The large Pittsburgh-based glass manufacturer said cash will be distributed in lieu of fractional shares.

Swift Premium

"No, thanks. I don't wanna swap my *Swift Premium."

No way, Jimmy! Some things just aren't as tempting as others. And it's pretty hard to beat a delicious deal like Swift Premium.

Regular or Beef Franks, for instance—with no fillers to come between you and the taste of all that good meat.

And Swift Premium Cold Cuts. A whole yummy assortment—from bologna to salami, and plenty more besides. All super for sandwiches and after-school snacks.

Or how about Hostess Ham? Consistently lean and luscious, because it is prepared from one cut of meat.

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — Each day 3000 Americans retire. "And now, Joe, we end a happy and prosperous relationship. To you we do not say 'Farewell.' For you are always in our hearts and in our thoughts."

The President of Knuckle Underwear then hands Joe a wrapped gift. Joe unties the string. What ho! A South Bend fishing rod and spinning reel.

"Catch a big one for us, Joe," cry the boys at the dinner party. (Tears, laughter and martinis. Mix six-to-one.)

Three thousand every blooming day?

What if you don't like fishing?

There's a medic down in Kentucky who says we are TOO retiring. "Old age never killed anybody," says the doctor. "It's the side effects."

He expects that soon people will live to be 150 years old.

Modern medicine. The shifty stuff medics are slipping into pills. Diet and weight control.

"We shall work out a regime that should allow any normal person to live at least twice as long as the expected lifetime today."

The dice are always against you, 1.414 no matter how you play them. Nick the Greek bet the back line — against the shooter, with the house.

Still he died broke. A friend of mine interviewed The Greek for a magazine story. He asked Nick if he said lucky things when he rolled.

Like, "Come on, baby!" Or, "My old lady needs a diamond ring!"

The Athenian philosopher said: "The dice don't know who's talking to them."

Nick said life is "6-5 against. Even if you play the back line and take the odds."

(But it's the only game in town, Stranger.)

The odds on dice (1.414), 5.19 against you in roulette, was given to me by Mert Wertheimer. He was the genial host at the Riverside in Reno.

"But," said Mert, "there is always a chance somebody will accidentally drop his poke on the floor. If you can get your foot on it, you have improved your winnings considerably.

Mert was kidnapped by the Purple Gang. They sent word to his brother: "Ransom for Mert, $250,000. Unmarked bills. Don't get cute."

Mert said: "They treated me all right. Why not? I was their cash register."

To pass time, he played cards with the chief kidnapper, Big Louie.

"We played hearts," said Mert. "I got him pretty good. Finally, he owed me a quarter of a mil. So I said: 'Big Louie. Suppose I give back your markers — which is the amount of the ransom — and I walked out of here.'

"He said to me: 'Mert, what kind of gambler ARE you? You want to quit while you're ahead?' "

The let's-live-forever doctor is against retiring. He said: "Retirement presently is premature. It puts a dangerous period to productive life.

"If retirement is desirable, it should be done gradually. With much preparation."

Before they hand you the farewell fishing rod, Joe, cut bait.

Nebraska senators split vote on plan

Washington (AP) — The Senate voted 50-43 Tuesday to reject a proposal to require U.S. representatives to international lending institutions to vote against loans to countries that persistently violate human rights.

Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., voted for the proposal, and Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., voted against it.

By Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — Each day 3000 Americans retire. "And now, Joe, we end a happy and prosperous relationship. To you we do not say 'Farewell.' For you are always in our hearts and in our thoughts."

The President of Knuckle Underwear then hands Joe a wrapped gift. Joe unties the string. What ho! A South Bend fishing rod and spinning reel.

"Catch a big one for us, Joe," cry the boys at the dinner party. (Tears, laughter and martinis. Mix six-to-one.)

Three thousand every blooming day?

What if you don't like fishing?

There's a medic down in Kentucky who says we are TOO retiring. "Old age never killed anybody," says the doctor. "It's the side effects."

He expects that soon people will live to be 150 years old.

Modern medicine. The shifty stuff medics are slipping into pills. Diet and weight control.

"We shall work out a regime that should allow any normal person to live at least twice as long as the expected lifetime today."

The dice are always against you. 1.414 no matter how you play them. Nick the Greek bet the back line — against the shooter, with the house.

Still he died broke. A friend of mine interviewed The Greek for a magazine story. He asked Nick if he said lucky things when he rolled.

Like. "Come on, baby!" Or, "My old lady needs a diamond ring!"

The Athenian philosopher said: "The dice don't know who's talking to them."

(But it's the only game in town, Stranger.)

The odds on dice (1.414), 5.19 against you in roulette, was given to me by Mert Wertheimer. He was the genial host at the Riverside in Reno.

"But," said Mert, "there is always a chance somebody will accidentally drop his poke on the floor. If you can get your foot on it, you have improved your winnings considerably.

In the lively days of Prohibition, the Wertheimers ran gambling games in Detroit.

Mert was kidnapped by the Purple Gang. They sent word to his brother: "Ransom for Mert, $250,000. Unmarked bills. Don't get cute."

Mert said: "They treated me all right. Why not? I was their cash register."

To pass time, he played cards with the chief kidnapper, Big Louie.

"We played hearts," said Mert. "I got him pretty good. Finally, he owed me a quarter of a mil. So I said: 'Big Louie. Suppose I give back your markers — which is the amount of the ransom — and I walked out of here.'

"He said to me: 'Mert, what kind of gambler ARE you? You want to quit while you're ahead?' "

The let's-live-forever doctor is against retiring. He said: "Retirement presently is premature. It puts a dangerous period to productive life.

"If retirement is desirable, it should be done gradually. With much preparation."

Before they hand you the farewell fishing rod, Joe, cut bait.

Nebraska senators split vote on plan

Washington (AP) — The Senate voted 50-43 Tuesday to reject a proposal to require U.S. representatives to international lending institutions to vote against loans to countries that persistently violate human rights.

Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., voted for the proposal, and Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., voted against it.

'New Glory' will wave indoors, inventor says

Palo Alto, Calif. (UPI) — Flag Day was marked Tuesday by the introduction of a commercial plastic flag which the producer says will wave indoors.

"Frozen flags are like frozen smiles," said Leonard Lorch, the inventor.

He said his new flag "moves constantly, endlessly, responding to the least noticeable air currents.

"It sways gently indoors with a sense of life that no other plastic flag could hope to match."

Lorch calls his flag "New Glory."

To ask a question, call 477-2121 or write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, Neb. 68501.

Caught by net

— B.R., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: A spokesman for the NU entomology department tells us that butterfly nets are occasionally sold in hobby shops but advises the netting material may be too coarse. He suggests you hand-fashion one from strong wire, a broom handle and some fine netting material. Several books in the library or local bookstores can give you detailed instructions on how to make the net. Happy hunting.

Moans over phones

Recently, I had the unfortunate opportunity of dealing with the Lincoln Telephone Company. My roomate and I are both listed in the phone book but the billing was coming in her name. When she moved out, I had the billing switched to my name. Although nothing was done to the phone, it cost me a $10 installation charge. The only answer I got was that it was company policy and "policies are policies." Where can I write about this situation?

— F.K., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The first place to direct your complaints is to the phone company. Like any business, they are interested in ways to improve service. If you want to complain further, you can address your comments to The Public Service Commission, at 301 Centennial Mall, Lincoln, which regulates telephone companies.

Impersonal personal

Why is it that the Lincoln Journal and Star do not run ads such as "want to meet . . ." and describing a certain kind of girl?

— R.L., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Journal-Star Want Ads Advertising Manager Bud Callahan advises us that each ad submitted is judged on an individual basis, and in your instance, the department chose "not to accept the advertisement."

Still checking files

ACTION LINE UPDATE: A few weeks ago, we contacted Mutual of Omaha about a missing check sent back to the firm by R.L.M, Lincoln. A Mutual spokesman tells us they are still checking some 50 pieces of correspondence with R.L.M. in recent years and will be writing to him for additional information. International Mail Order Co., of Norman, Okl., through counsel, has written to let us know the firm has offered a full refund to Mrs. B.G., of Utica.

ACTION LINE UPDATE: The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) has just completed a second brochure which focuses on consumers' rights and remedies under the Fair Credit Billing Act. If you are having questions about your credit rights, write for the free pamphlet c/o of the FDIC Publications and Graphics Service Branch, 550 17th, N.W., Room 825, Washington D.C., 20429.

Lethal pesticides stolen

Kansas City (AP) — A large quantity of pesticides, stolen over the weekend from an exterminating company, could spell disaster if found by children or unsuspecting adults, a federal official said Tuesday.

John Wicklund, director of the Environmental Protection Agency, said two of the chemicals stolen from the Getz Exterminating Co. pose an extreme danger if found by persons not familiar with them.

A similar warning came from Thomas Stickney, Getz manager, who told police that some of the chemicals are "so intense that a small portion could reach a large number of persons" — with fatal results.

Wicklund said one of the chemicals, phostoxin pellets, are in a canister and form an extremely dangerous gas lethal to humans in very small doses when exposed to air. He said the chemical is used to fumigate closed spaces, such as buildings or rail cars, after precautions have been taken to keep humans and animals from being exposed.

Wicklund said the second chemical, methyl bromide, is lethal to humans if inhaled at a concentration of 200 parts gas in a million parts of air.

He said the gravest danger would be if the chemicals were discarded and found by children.

Action Line

To ask a question, call 477-2121 or write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, Neb. 68501.

Caught by net

— B.R., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: A spokesman for the NU entomology department tells us that butterfly nets are occasionally sold in hobby shops but advises the netting material may be too coarse. He suggests you hand-fashion one from strong wire, a broom handle and some fine netting material. Several books in the library or local bookstores can give you detailed instructions on how to make the net. Happy hunting.

Moans over phones

Recently, I had the unfortunate opportunity of dealing with the Lincoln Telephone Company. My roomate and I are both listed in the phone book but the billing was coming in her name. When she moved out, I had the billing switched to my name. Although nothing was done to the phone, it cost me a $10 installation charge. The only answer I got was that it was company policy and "policies are policies." Where can I write about this situation?

— F.K., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The first place to direct your complaints is to the phone company. Like any business, they are interested in ways to improve service. If you want to complain further, you can address your comments to The Public Service Commission, at 301 Centennial Mall, Lincoln, which regulates telephone companies.

Impersonal personal

Why is it that the Lincoln Journal and Star do not run ads such as "want to meet . . ." and describing a certain kind of girl?

— R.L., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Journal-Star Want Ads Advertising Manager Bud Callahan advises us that each ad submitted is judged on an individual basis, and in your instance, the department chose "not to accept the advertisement."

Still checking files

ACTION LINE UPDATE: A few weeks ago, we contacted Mutual of Omaha about a missing check sent back to the firm by R.L.M, Lincoln. A Mutual spokesman tells us they are still checking some 50 pieces of correspondence with R.L.M. in recent years and will be writing to him for additional information. International Mail Order Co., of Norman, Okl., through counsel, has written to let us know the firm has offered a full refund to Mrs. B.G., of Utica.

ACTION LINE UPDATE: The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) has just completed a second brochure which focuses on consumers' rights and remedies under the Fair Credit Billing Act. If you are having questions about your credit rights, write for the free pamphlet c/o of the FDIC Publications and Graphics Service Branch, 550 17th, N.W., Room 825, Washington D.C., 20429.

Lethal pesticides stolen

Kansas City (AP) — A large quantity of pesticides, stolen over the weekend from an exterminating company, could spell disaster if found by children or unsuspecting adults, a federal official said Tuesday.

John Wicklund, director of the Environmental Protection Agency, said two of the chemicals stolen from the Getz Exterminating Co. pose an extreme danger if found by persons not familiar with them.

A similar warning came from Thomas Stickney, Getz manager, who told police that some of the chemicals are "so intense that a small portion could reach a large number of persons" — with fatal results.

Wicklund said one of the chemicals, phostoxin pellets, are in a canister and form an extremely dangerous gas lethal to humans in very small doses when exposed to air. He said the chemical is used to fumigate closed spaces, such as buildings or rail cars, after precautions have been taken to keep humans and animals from being exposed.

Wicklund said the second chemical, methyl bromide, is lethal to humans if inhaled at a concentration of 200 parts gas in a million parts of air.

He said the gravest danger would be if the chemicals were discarded and found by children.

ASU, Cal State win key games

By Virgil Parker
Sports Editor

Omaha — Three-time NCAA champion Arizona State recorded an 8-4 victory to sideline Minnesota, another three-time titlist, and California State-Los Angeles eliminated Clemson, 1-0, in the College Baseball World Series at Rosenblatt Stadium here Tuesday night.

ASU's Sun Devils stayed alive in this double-elimination tournament with aggressive play at the plate and on the base paths, while Cal St.-LA displayed a big league defense to blank Clemson.

Arizona State, which plays as many games a season as many minor league teams, ran its record to 54-12 with its triumph over the Gophers.

The well-played nightcap, which saw Clemson shut out for the first time in its last 167 games and just the second time in the past 217 games, was completed in just one hour and 48 minutes.

Cal St.-LA's Mike Sutherland threw just 94 pitches while notching his seventh victory against a single loss for the season.

Sutherland received super support from his infield as he had the Clemson batters hitting first and second-pitch grounders.

Second baseman Drew McAuley charged a slow roller, made a bare-handed pickup and an across-the-chest throw for one sterling play, while third baseman Marty Shepherd later duplicated the effort on what appeared to be a perfect drag bunt down the line.

The LA club, which never figured on gaining this tourney until knocking off ten-time champion Southern California in regional play, turned in three double plays to greatly aid Sutherland gain his shutout.

Cal State, displaying a carefree attitude in previous games ("We didn't figure on being here anyway so we might as well have some fun while we're here," coach John Deutsch had said,), didn't show its "phantom ball" warmup routine used in other games, much to the disappointment of the crowd of 8,405.

Clemson's Ron Musselman pitched well enough to win, striking out 13 while giving up just four hits — the same number collected by his club.

Neither team threatened until the fifth frame, when Cal State got a runner to third with one out but couldn't get him home.

Clemson staged its only threat in the sixth, getting runners to first and second, but that was it.

Cal State scored the game's only run in the eighth inning when left fielder Rob Hayne bounced a single to center, stole second, moved to third on a wild pitch and then scored when right fielder Gary Adair singled behind second base against a drawn-in infield.

Arizona State banged out 14 hits — two of them homers — had speedy centerfielder Rick Peters gain base twice via the hit-by-pitcher route, and added two stolen bases.

Minnesota, which won the championship here in 1956, '60 and '64, jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning, but the Sun Devils countered with three tallies in the second frame and were never headed.

ASU second baseman Bob Horner added another run when he led off the third inning with a booming home run over the left field wall. It was his 22nd round-tripper of the year, which leads the nation and is just one shy of the NCAA record.

Minnesota closed the gap to a 4-3 count in the bottom of the third on a strange, seldom-seen play.

With the bases loaded and one out, Gopher second baseman Ken Mauer — with two strikes on him — swung at a wild pitch in the dirt. The ball got away from ASU catcher Chris Bando, younger brother of major leaguer Sal.

One run scored, but Mauer, who dashed off to first, was called out — after a long argument — since the bases were full at the time of the strikeout.

ASU put the game out of reach in the next inning, scoring three runs after two were out. Peters was hit for the second time — the 18th time that's happened to him this year — then stole second. It was his 46th theft of the current campaign.

Two doubles and a single followed and the Sun Devils had an insurmountable 7-3 lead.

ASU shortstop Mike Henderson led the winner's barrage at the plate. He had the Sun Devils' other home run, added two doubles and was four-for-five on the night.

Wednesday night's action will feature the only unbeaten teams remaining — Southern Illinois and South Carolina — in a single game starting at 7:40.

Thursday night, Arizona State, which won the CWS in 1965, '67 and '69 and was the runnerup in both 1972 and '73, will meet South Carolina.

Gene Bartow leaves UCLA's 'kitchen'

Los Angeles (AP) — Gene Bartow didn't realize what kind of pressure-cooker he was getting into when he followed the legendary John Wooden as basketball coach at UCLA, both a Bruin player and a rival coach said Tuesday.

Bartow, under increasing fire from the media and Bruin basketball fans, took Harry Truman's advice and moved out of "the kitchen" and to the lowkey post of athletic director at the University of Alabama-Birmingham.

The move to a school with no existing athletic program, first rumored last week, became official Monday.

"I was really surprised when Coach Bartow first told me he was considering the job," said Marques Johnson, UCLA's All-American senior forward. Johnson, who was in New York with Bartow to receive a Most Valuable Player award last week, said, "He talked about it with my Father (Jeff) and me. I was surprised at first, but after talking with him, I understood how he felt."

Bob Boyd, the basketball coach at arch-rival Southern California, said, "I think it's fair to say Gene was uncomfortable coaching at UCLA.

"In college coaching, there's a lot of deviousness, and I found Gene Bartow not to be in the least devious," the USC coach said, not elaborating. "I think he misjudged the impact of being the new coach at UCLA, particularly being an outsider taking the job."

Bartow had a 52-9 record and won Pacific-8 championships both of his two years at UCLA, but the Bruins failed to win the national championship, a feat Wooden's teams accomplished 10 times in his last 12 years at the school.

Johnson said Bartow had trouble making the adjustment from comparably low-pressure coaching jobs at Illinois and Memphis State to the Bruins' job in media-rich and victory-conscious Los Angeles.

"I think the fans were a little harsh on him, as was the press," Johnson said. "Just look at our record. I think the players expected the criticism because we didn't go all the way, but he was surprised it was so strong.

"Some of us had been around during the Wooden years, and I remember even he drew a lot of criticism a couple of years ago when we lost two straight in Oregon."

Bartow's decision to take the Alabama-Birmingham job, Johnson said, was capped by the media attention after it was disclosed he was talking with Alabama-Birmingham.

Gary Cunningham, a former Wooden assistant at UCLA and considered one of the top candidates to succeed Bartow, said he could cope with the pressure at UCLA, but added that he wasn't sure he wanted to.

Confidence rewarded by Petty Theft

Omaha — Danny Whited and Gary Thomas had nothing but confidence about their colt, Petty Theft.

"I felt pretty good about him. If he didn't have any bad luck, I knew he'd win," said Whited after riding Petty to an impressive seven-length triumph in Tuesday's $26,275 Laddie Stakes here at Ak-Sar-Ben.

Thomas, Petty's trainer, was less sure, but he was still confident in the 5½-furlong chase that lured 12 2-year-old Nebraska-bred colts and geldings.

"I thought he'd win, but not that easy. I think he's a pretty good Nebraska-bred," Thomas said.

Whited broke from the ninth post position in front by one length, withstood an early challenge from Mrs. Bernice Chaffee's Fella's Folly to lead by three entering the stretch and then raced to the wire easily.

"He broke good, I figured he'd win easy," Whited added. "I hit him three or four times down the lane just to keep him ahead."

Thomas said owner B. R. Evans of Tulia, Tex., purchased both the mare and colt from Harry J. Farnham of Elkhorn after she foaled.

In running a 1:05 3-5 clocking, Petty Theft returned $7.40, $5.20 and $4.80. The Kemling brothers Prom Crasher, part of a three-horse entry, placed under Rob Williams for $7.60 and $5.20. Fella's Folly, ridden by Sam Maple, showed for $8.80.

The 1.70-1 favorite, Bernice M. Gedwaki's Sparky D'Or and Foreign Gold were never in contention. Sparky finished seventh and Foreign Gold was last.

Rider Dave King and Hazel R. Smith's Roman Buck apparently escaped serious injury when both went to the ground in the stretch run near the sixteenth-pole of the 6-furlong fifth race.

King appeared uninjured. Roman, after struggling to his feet for a few minutes, finally regained his balance and walked away.

The race's eventual winner, Pete Anderson's Pete's Hubby, ridden by Nels Peterson, was disqualified from first to last for what the stewards ruled was interference in the stretch run.

That advanced E. C. Cashman's Gonzago, a nose behind Pete's Hubby, to first.

'Amateurs' too expensive

Miami (AP) — A Miami club says it canceled plans for a track meet after learning it would cost up to $1,000 plus expenses for each of the amateur track stars invited.

"The amateurs are pricing themselves right out of the market," an official of a Miami Optimist club complained. "We couldn't afford them."

The club reported that it recently canceled plans for the track meet after learning that such top amateurs as Dwight Stones and Filbert Bayi would cost the promoters $1,000 each, plus expenses.

Jimmy Carnes, track and field chairman for the Amateur Athletic Union, admitted that athletes are getting high fees and other "under-the-table" payments.

Carnes said that AAU rules allow athletes to accept money to cover expenses, including air fare and hotel rooms, but forbid other payments from track promoters and sports equipment companies.

"We hear it all the time. We hear 'so and so got $1,000 to run, so and so got $500 to run,'" Carnes said. "You'd have to have a force of people out to stop them."

Carnes said that there is no way to prove such violations because the athletes, promoters and equipment manufacturers deny that any illegal money changed hands.

The Internal Revenue Service is reportedly investigating the allegations.

One world-class athlete, French hurdler Guy Drut, announced recently that he had been receiving under-the-table payments for years.

As a result, International AAU President Adrian Paulen told Carnes last week that as far as he is concerned Drut has forfeited his amateur status.

Kenyan half-miler Mike Boit called the charge about illegal under-the-table payoffs to amateur athletes "ridiculous and unfair."

"I wouldn't say that they (other track and field stars) take a lot of money from promoters," Boit said. "What we are provided with most of the time is a ticket to go to the track meet and to return to the place you left from, plus $3 to $5 every day for expenses."

Last year, sprinter Houston McTear was invited to run in Miami. His coach accepted the invitation under the condition that a $500 check be sent to cover airfare from Pensacola, Fla., according to The Miami News. The round-trip fare for McTear and his coach was less than $300.

"Plus, they made us pay their expenses in Miami," the promoter told the News. "The hotel bill (for two days) came to $144."

To alleviate the problem of under-the-table payments, Carnes said he is attempting to recruit industries and large companies to sponsor track and field teams.

"How else can a guy survive in the United States (with no subsidy) when he has to train three and four and five hours a day?" Carnes said.

Grid legend Fleming, 58, dies in Omaha

Omaha — Don Fleming, a football legend in Nebraska and Iowa for more than three decades, died early Tuesday afternoon of an apparent heart attack.

Fleming, 58, was due to report to Ak-Sar-Ben for work as the operator of the electronic horse race timer when his wife, Helen, informed officials her husband had suffered an apparent heart attack. Officials reported he died before he arrived at a local hospital.

Don Fleming
. . . Holy Name Coach

Fleming was the nation's leading football ground gainer for Creighton University in 1940 and was captain of Creighton's National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball team in 1941.

He served as an assistant football coach at Marquette University in Milwaukee and was an assistant football coach at the University of Washington under his brother-in-law, Howie Odell.

He coached state championship high school football teams at Creighton Prep in Omaha, Don Bosco High School in Milwaukee, Sioux City Heelan and Nebraska City Lourdes.

At the time of his death, he was athletic director and head football coach at Omaha Holy Name.

Fleming, who was this area's talent scout for the Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League, also served as head coach for the now defunct Omaha Mustangs professional football team.

Fleming worked at Ak-Sar-Ben in admissions before becoming head usher for the horse race meet for five years. He was in his first year as operator of the electronic horse timer.

"Don was an excellent employe. We all were very shocked and sad today," said Ak-Sar-Ben executive director and general manager Dick Becker. "He was a good worker for Ak-Sar-Ben, but he was better known as an outstanding coach."

Fleming was honored a year ago by being inducted in the Creighton Athletic Hall of Fame and the Iowa High School Basketball Hall of Fame during the 1977 Iowa State High School Basketball Tournament.

Super Bowls go to Miami and Pasadena

New York (UPI) — National Football League owners, sticking to sites which have been successful in the past, Tuesday voted to play the 1979 Super Bowl in Miami's Orange Bowl and the 1980 game at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif.

The announcement marks the first time the NFL has chosen sites for two games. In the past, single Super Bowl sites have been announced two years in advance.

League owners also refused to act on compensation for teams who lost players after playing out their options. After a lengthy discussion which carried over from the winter meetings in Phoenix, the owners decided to let individual clubs work out their own compensation problems.

The owners also made some minor decisions regarding tie-breaking procedures in the draft, starting times for games and preseason schedules

The owners ruled that in the future, ties in the draft among teams from the same division would be broken under the formula used to determine league champions rather than putting a team playing the weaker schedule ahead of another.

They also decided that beginning in 1978, all games would start at one minute after the hour to provide uniformity and avoid delay in doubleheaders. Also starting in 1978 when the 16-game regular season goes into effect, each team must schedule two preseason opponents outside its conference before playing the other two games against conference clubs.

Miami, which will be the Super Bowl site for the fifth timer, and Pasadena, which played host to the title game before a record crowd of 103,000 last January, were chosen after presentations from eight cities. Los Angeles, Houston and New Orleans, all previous Super Bowl sites, and Seattle, Pontiac, Mich., and Dallas, bidding to hold the game for the first time, lost out.

Super Bowl XIII, which will be played in the 80,000-seat Orange Bowl in Miami, is scheduled for Jan. 21, 1979. Super Bowl XIV, set for the 104,000-seat Rose Bowl in Pasadena, will be played on Jan. 20, 1980. No starting times were announced.

Frank Rose

Anyone who is a horoscope fanatic should find Frank Rose an interesting case to study.

Whether the moon and stars can take the credit, Rose has compiled an amazing "odd year" record as a golfer.

The Fairbury native and ex-University of Nebraska golfer won the 1977 Kansas State amateur championship Sunday. It was his fourth title. He claimed his other Jayhawk State crowns in 1971, '73 and '75.

To carry the "odd year" success even further, Rose won the Nebraska amateur championship in 1969.

Rose, who now lives in Topeka where he is an insurance actuary, became only the second golfer in the 57-year history of the Kansas event to win the championship four times.

Short stretch

Even more amazing is the short period of time in which Rose has accomplished the feat. He has lived in Kansas just seven summers. In six of his seven tries he's reached the finals of the match play event.

Rose is the only player in Kansas history to make the finals that many times.

The 29-year-old Topekan crushed 20-year-old Dennis Kay of Kansas City 9 and 8 in the 36-hole title match Sunday.

He whipped Dave Dennis of Independence by that same count when he won his first championship in 1971. He defeated Charles VanDyne of KC 3 and 1 in 1973 and Paul Anderson of Manhattan 7 and 5 in 1975.

Incidentally, the only year he failed to make the finals — being eliminated in the second round — he hurried up to Grand Island in time to enter AND WIN the Tournament of Champions.

Steady player

A magacian with the wedge, Rose banged his approach shots stiff to the pin with such regularity in his final match this year that he played the final 23 holes in seven under par.

On the front side during the afternoon round, Rose recorded four birdies and five pars. He won six of the nine holes.

It is interesting to note that Rose's seven-year match play record in the Kansas tournament stands at 29-3. He has beaten 29 different opponents.

The only player he has ever met twice was Gary Navarro of Wichita. Frank defeated him the first time, then lost in '74, the year he came up to win the T of C in Grand Island.

Stickler on the rules

The officials who follow each match at the Kansas event are obviously careful to enforce all the rules of the game.

Kay, Rose's Sunday opponent in the finals, got some help in his semifinal match when the match official awarded Kay a hole after his opponent was called for tamping down the grass behind his ball with his putter when it was on the fringe of the green.

Many golfers — Kay included — didn't know there was such a rule.

Nebraska's state match play championships comes up next weekend at the Omaha Country Club. Though it is considered one of the state's top events, the Cornhusker State golfers still place the greatest importance on the medal play test which will be in the Capital City at Hillcrest in late July.

Kansas doesn't have a medal play tourney, but it's nice to report on an ex-Nebraskan who is dominating the game down there.

Dodgers, Braves enter into Seaver bidding

New York (UPI) — Other clubs, including the Los Angeles Dodgers and Atlanta Braves, have now entered into the bidding for Tom Seaver, and with the trading deadline rapidly approaching, the possibility increased the three-time Cy Young Award winner may remain with the New York Mets because they were unable to make an equitable deal.

Seaver already has given his consent to a proposed deal with the Cincinnati Reds — orally. However, if the Mets decide to trade him to Cincinnati for unsigned relief pitcher Rawley Eastwick, utility infielder Doug Flynn and another player, he still must give his consent in writing for the deal to be consummated.

He might have some second thoughts about that, just as the Mets themselves have been mulling over the question whether to trade him or not. Seaver is currently in the second season of a three-year, $225,000 per annum contract with the Mets.

The major league trading deadline is Wednesday midnight.

"As a 5-and 10-year man (the last five years with the same club and 10 years in the majors), "it's Tom's decision to accept or turn down any trade that is offered," said Board Chairman M. Donald Grant. "He has steadfastly refused to register his desire to stay with the club unless we are willing to renegotiate his contract. This leaves us no alternative but to grant him his request and make the best deal we can."

Cincinnati has been the dominant club mentioned in dealings on Seaver. Reds' third baseman Pete Rose said Monday night "the deal for Seaver has been made." Cincinnati President Bob Howsam refuses to admit that a trade for Seaver is even being discussed.

"We're talking to a lot of clubs just as we do at this time of the year every season," said Howsam.

Seaver said in Atlanta Monday night that Rose "is being premature. I believe I would know."

Cincinnati relief specialist Eastwick, the most prominent of the players mentioned in trade talks, was given a letter of permission by the Reds to talk to the Mets. He said Joe McDonald called him Sunday evening to discuss a contract, but the ace reliever told the Mets' general manager he wanted to consult with his agent, Jerry Kapstein, before reaching any agreement with the New York club.

"I'm not sure I even want to pitch in New York," Eastwick contended.

The Mets' home office has been deluged by phone calls from fans pleading with the club to keep Seaver.

"The calls are 100 per cent against trading Seaver," said Whitney de Roulet, an assistant director of public relations with the Mets, who fielded many of the calls Tuesday. "They say they want to register their protest against trading Seaver.

ASU, Cal State win key games

Omaha — Three-time NCAA champion Arizona State recorded an 8-4 victory to sideline Minnesota, another three-time titlist, and California State-Los Angeles eliminated Clemson, 1-0, in the College Baseball World Series at Rosenblatt Stadium here Tuesday night.

ASU's Sun Devils stayed alive in this double-elimination tournament with aggressive play at the plate and on the base paths, while Cal St.-LA displayed a big league defense to blank Clemson.

Arizona State, which plays as many games a season as many minor league teams, ran its record to 54-12 with its triumph over the Gophers.

The well-played nightcap, which saw Clemson shut out for the first time in its last 167 games and just the second time in the past 217 games, was completed in just one hour and 48 minutes.

Cal St.-LA's Mike Sutherland threw just 94 pitches while notching his seventh victory against a single loss for the season.

Fleming, who was this area's talent scout for the Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League, also served as head coach for the now defunct Omaha Mustangs professional football team.

Fleming worked at Ak-Sar-Ben in admissions before becoming head usher for the horse race meet for five years. He was in his first year as operator of the electronic horse timer.

"Don was an excellent employe. We all were very shocked and sad today," said Ak-Sar-Ben executive director and general manager Dick Becker. "He was a good worker for Ak-Sar-Ben, but he was better known as an outstanding coach."

Fleming was honored a year ago by being inducted in the Creighton Athletic Hall of Fame and the Iowa High School Basketball Hall of Fame during the 1977 Iowa State High School Basketball Tournament.

Super Bowls go to Miami and Pasadena

New York (UPI) — National Football League owners, sticking to sites which have been successful in the past, Tuesday voted to play the 1979 Super Bowl in Miami's Orange Bowl and the 1980 game at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif.

The announcement marks the first time the NFL has chosen sites for two games. In the past, single Super Bowl sites have been announced two years in advance.

League owners also refused to act on compensation for teams who lost players after playing out their options. After a lengthy discussion which carried over from the winter meetings in Phoenix, the owners decided to let individual clubs work out their own compensation problems.

The owners also made some minor decisions regarding tie-breaking procedures in the draft, starting times for games and preseason schedules

The owners ruled that in the future, ties in the draft among teams from the same division would be broken under the formula used to determine league champions rather than putting a team playing the weaker schedule ahead of another.

They also decided that beginning in 1978, all games would start at one minute after the hour to provide uniformity and avoid delay in doubleheaders. Also starting in 1978 when the 16-game regular season goes into effect, each team must schedule two preseason opponents outside its conference before playing the other two games against conference clubs.

Miami, which will be the Super Bowl site for the fifth timer, and Pasadena, which played host to the title game before a record crowd of 103,000 last January, were chosen after presentations from eight cities. Los Angeles, Houston and New Orleans, all previous Super Bowl sites, and Seattle, Pontiac, Mich., and Dallas, bidding to hold the game for the first time, lost out.

Super Bowl XIII, which will be played in the 80,000-seat Orange Bowl in Miami, is scheduled for Jan. 21, 1979. Super Bowl XIV, set for the 104,000-seat Rose Bowl in Pasadena, will be played on Jan. 20, 1980. No starting times were announced.

Frank Rose

Anyone who is a horoscope fanatic should find Frank Rose an interesting case to study.

Whether the moon and stars can take the credit, Rose has compiled an amazing "odd year" record as a golfer.

The Fairbury native and ex-University of Nebraska golfer won the 1977 Kansas State amateur championship Sunday. It was his fourth title. He claimed his other Jayhawk State crowns in 1971, '73 and '75.

To carry the "odd year" success even further, Rose won the Nebraska amateur championship in 1969.

Rose, who now lives in Topeka where he is an insurance actuary, became only the second golfer in the 57-year history of the Kansas event to win the championship four times.

Short stretch

Even more amazing is the short period of time in which Rose has accomplished the feat. He has lived in Kansas just seven summers. In six of his seven tries he's reached the finals of the match play event.

Rose is the only player in Kansas history to make the finals that many times.

The 29-year-old Topekan crushed 20-year-old Dennis Kay of Kansas City 9 and 8 in the 36-hole title match Sunday.

He whipped Dave Dennis of Independence by that same count when he won his first championship in 1971. He defeated Charles VanDyne of KC 3 and 1 in 1973 and Paul Anderson of Manhattan 7 and 5 in 1975.

Incidentally, the only year he failed to make the finals — being eliminated in the second round — he hurried up to Grand Island in time to enter AND WIN the Tournament of Champions.

Steady player

A magacian with the wedge, Rose banged his approach shots stiff to the pin with such regularity in his final match this year that he played the final 23 holes in seven under par.

On the front side during the afternoon round, Rose recorded four birdies and five pars. He won six of the nine holes.

It is interesting to note that Rose's seven-year match play record in the Kansas tournament stands at 29-3. He has beaten 29 different opponents.

The only player he has ever met twice was Gary Navarro of Wichita. Frank defeated him the first time, then lost in '74, the year he came up to win the T of C in Grand Island.

Stickler on the rules

The officials who follow each match at the Kansas event are obviously careful to enforce all the rules of the game.

Kay, Rose's Sunday opponent in the finals, got some help in his semifinal match when the match official awarded Kay a hole after his opponent was called for tamping down the grass behind his ball with his putter when it was on the fringe of the green.

Many golfers — Kay included — didn't know there was such a rule.

Nebraska's state match play championships comes up next weekend at the Omaha Country Club. Though it is considered one of the state's top events, the Cornhusker State golfers still place the greatest importance on the medal play test which will be in the Capital City at Hillcrest in late July.

Kansas doesn't have a medal play tourney, but it's nice to report on an ex-Nebraskan who is dominating the game down there.

Dodgers, Braves enter into Seaver bidding

New York (UPI) — Other clubs, including the Los Angeles Dodgers and Atlanta Braves, have now entered into the bidding for Tom Seaver, and with the trading deadline rapidly approaching, the possibility increased the three-time Cy Young Award winner may remain with the New York Mets because they were unable to make an equitable deal.

Seaver already has given his consent to a proposed deal with the Cincinnati Reds — orally. However, if the Mets decide to trade him to Cincinnati for unsigned relief pitcher Rawley Eastwick, utility infielder Doug Flynn and another player, he still must give his consent in writing for the deal to be consummated.

He might have some second thoughts about that, just as the Mets themselves have been mulling over the question whether to trade him or not. Seaver is currently in the second season of a three-year, $225,000 per annum contract with the Mets.

The major league trading deadline is Wednesday midnight.

"As a 5-and 10-year man (the last five years with the same club and 10 years in the majors), "it's Tom's decision to accept or turn down any trade that is offered," said Board Chairman M. Donald Grant. "He has steadfastly refused to register his desire to stay with the club unless we are willing to renegotiate his contract. This leaves us no alternative but to grant him his request and make the best deal we can."

Cincinnati has been the dominant club mentioned in dealings on Seaver. Reds' third baseman Pete Rose said Monday night "the deal for Seaver has been made." Cincinnati President Bob Howsam refuses to admit that a trade for Seaver is even being discussed.

"We're talking to a lot of clubs just as we do at this time of the year every season," said Howsam.

Seaver said in Atlanta Monday night that Rose "is being premature. I believe I would know."

Cincinnati relief specialist Eastwick, the most prominent of the players mentioned in trade talks, was given a letter of permission by the Reds to talk to the Mets. He said Joe McDonald called him Sunday evening to discuss a contract, but the ace reliever told the Mets' general manager he wanted to consult with his agent, Jerry Kapstein, before reaching any agreement with the New York club.

"I'm not sure I even want to pitch in New York," Eastwick contended.

The Mets' home office has been deluged by phone calls from fans pleading with the club to keep Seaver.

"The calls are 100 per cent against trading Seaver," said Whitney de Roulet, an assistant director of public relations with the Mets, who fielded many of the calls Tuesday. "They say they want to register their protest against trading Seaver.

Rams trade Harris to Chargers

Los Angeles (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams, who recently acquired veteran Joe Namath from the New York Jets as a free agent, traded quarterback James Harris to the San Diego Chargers Tuesday night for an undisclosed number of future draft choices.

The trade leaves young Pat Haden, who replaced Harris as the starting quarterback in the final games of last season, as the No. 1 quarterback on the NFL National Conference Western Division champions.

Besides Haden, the Rams also have Nebraska quarterback Vince Ferragamo.

Rams trade Harris to Chargers

Los Angeles (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams, who recently acquired veteran Joe Namath from the New York Jets as a free agent, traded quarterback James Harris to the San Diego Chargers Tuesday night for an undisclosed number of future draft choices.

The trade leaves young Pat Haden, who replaced Harris as the starting quarterback in the final games of last season, as the No. 1 quarterback on the NFL National Conference Western Division champions.

Besides Haden, the Rams also have Nebraska quarterback Vince Ferragamo.

No rest for Lincoln area golfers this summer

By Chuck Sinclair
Staff Sports Writer

For those who thought the summer months were strictly for rest and relaxation, take a second guess if your desires include holding a golf club in your hands.

With the variety of activities slated for the state of Nebraska the next week and a half, there are no exemptions for age or sex ranging from the Lincoln junior boys city tournament to the women's state medal tournament at Columbus and the men's state match play at Omaha Country Club.

But is you're still inclined towards leisure you don't even have to play to enjoy the game as golf's incomparable Jack Nicklaus flies in from the U.S. Open in Tulsa for a Heart Assn. benefit at Omaha's Applewood Golf Course on Monday.

A 1 p.m. clinic is scheduled to be followed by an 18-hole match with Nicklaus, Pioneers Park pro Dave Oliphant, Omaha amateur Tom Sieckmann and Applewood's Gene Johnson.

Tickets are available at Omaha area golf courses and at Applewood the day of the exhibition.

Here is a rundown of the tournaments scheduled:

—The Country Club of Lincoln is holding its 24th annual Swingfest for members and their visiting guests beginning Wednesday with a practice round and running through Saturday.

Thursday's play will include a Scotch two-ball with the main event, a two-man best ball, to be contested Friday and Saturday.

—Entries are still open for the Lincoln Junior Boys Tournament beginning Monday at the Country Club of Lincoln and progressing to Hillcrest Country Club on Tuesday, Pioneers Park Wednesday and finishing Thursday at Holmes Park.

Last year's champion Mike Schuchart is over the age limit and can't compete this year, assuring a new champion.

Entries will be accepted until Saturday night with tickets available at either Holmes or the Junior Golf Course for boys who haven't reached their 16th birthday by the opening of the tournament.

—Some 40 junior boys and girls entries are expected Friday for local qualifying in the Chevrolet PGA junior tournament at Holmes Park.

—The women's state medal tournament at Columbus is scheduled for next Wednesday and Thursday and the men's state match play for next Thursday through Saturday at Omaha Country Club.

Lincoln's Ed Smith fired an even par 72 to win one of the state's top charity events Friday, the Swing Against Cancer at Hillcrest Country Club, bettering a field of 103 golfers.

Smith's score was good enough for a five-shot winning margin over Bill Jennings, Dr. Tom Ludwick and Gordon Saffer who each shot 77.

Low net went to Lincoln realtor Tom Cronin, as he posted a six-under-par 66.

Barrys drops two contests

Barrys dropped a pair of games and Waverly Stans split two games Tuesday night in Al Hawthorne Softball League action at Elk's Field.

Barrys lost, 8-4, to Ace TV in the first game and then dropped a 6-3 decision to Waverly Stans in the second contest, despite Dave Berklund's home run.

Six errors victimized Waverly's chances for a sweep in the nightcap as Wentz won the contest 17-7. Wentz's Bob McIntyre hit the only homer of the game.

No rest for Lincoln area golfers this summer

By Chuck Sinclair
Staff Sports Writer

For those who thought the summer months were strictly for rest and relaxation, take a second guess if your desires include holding a golf club in your hands.

With the variety of activities slated for the state of Nebraska the next week and a half, there are no exemptions for age or sex ranging from the Lincoln junior boys city tournament to the women's state medal tournament at Columbus and the men's state match play at Omaha Country Club.

But is you're still inclined towards leisure you don't even have to play to enjoy the game as golf's incomparable Jack Nicklaus flies in from the U.S. Open in Tulsa for a Heart Assn. benefit at Omaha's Applewood Golf Course on Monday.

A 1 p.m. clinic is scheduled to be followed by an 18-hole match with Nicklaus, Pioneers Park pro Dave Oliphant, Omaha amateur Tom Sieckmann and Applewood's Gene Johnson.

Tickets are available at Omaha area golf courses and at Applewood the day of the exhibition.

Here is a rundown of the tournaments scheduled:

—The Country Club of Lincoln is holding its 24th annual Swingfest for members and their visiting guests beginning Wednesday with a practice round and running through Saturday.

Thursday's play will include a Scotch two-ball with the main event, a two-man best ball, to be contested Friday and Saturday.

—Entries are still open for the Lincoln Junior Boys Tournament beginning Monday at the Country Club of Lincoln and progressing to Hillcrest Country Club on Tuesday, Pioneers Park Wednesday and finishing Thursday at Holmes Park.

Last year's champion Mike Schuchart is over the age limit and can't compete this year, assuring a new champion.

Entries will be accepted until Saturday night with tickets available at either Holmes or the Junior Golf Course for boys who haven't reached their 16th birthday by the opening of the tournament.

—Some 40 junior boys and girls entries are expected Friday for local qualifying in the Chevrolet PGA junior tournament at Holmes Park.

—The women's state medal tournament at Columbus is scheduled for next Wednesday and Thursday and the men's state match play for next Thursday through Saturday at Omaha Country Club.

Lincoln's Ed Smith fired an even par 72 to win one of the state's top charity events Friday, the Swing Against Cancer at Hillcrest Country Club, hettering a field of 103 golfers.

Smith's score was good enough for a five-shot winning margin over Bill Jennings, Dr. Tom Ludwick and Gordon Saffer who each shot 77.

Low net went to Lincoln realtor Tom Cronin, as he posted a six-under-par '66.

Barrys drops two contests

Barrys dropped a pair of games and Waverly Stans split two games Tuesday night in Al Hawthorne Softball League action at Elk's Field.

Barrys lost, 8-4, to Ace TV in the first game and then dropped a 6-3 decision to Waverly Stans in the second contest, despite Dave Berklund's home run.

Six errors victimized Waverly's chances for a sweep in the nightcap as Wentz won the contest 17-7. Wentz's Bob McIntyre hit the only homer of the game.

PBS plans to give Cavett a new show

Lincoln's homegrown television personality, Dick Cavett, is going back on national television, a Public Broadcasting Service official said Tuesday.

Cavett, a former writer and talk show host, begins an interview show in October for the national educational television network, according to Chloe Aaron, PBS senior vice president of programming.

Recently, Cavett has been seen on the PBS network's Live from Lincoln Center involving interviews with classical concert artists on Sunday afternoons.

Ms. Aaron said the program's format is still being discussed but would probably deal with cultural materials.

The announcement was made during a press conference for three PBS officials including Ms. Aaron, Lawrence Grossman, president of PBS, and William T. Reed, PBS vice president of station relations. They are in Lincoln for the Central Educational Network's annual meeting.

Two officials of the CEN announced that the Nebraska Educational Television Network's general manager, Jack McBride, was elected chairman of the CEN board of directors. The term lasts for one year and involves policy-making for the 10-state, 51-station CEN.

Grossman told the press conference that since PBS weathered the Nixon storm, which saw its multimillion dollar budget request vetoed by the White House about five years ago, it has gained new respect in Washington.

He also said he's confident the Carter administration will try to adhere to suggestions by a new Carnegie Commission which is looking into the future of American public television.

The first Carnegie Commission at one time recommended a $500 million program budget for PBS but the suggestion was ignored by three presidents.

"This should be a billion dollar system," Grossman said. "That's if we're going to provide alternative programming that's not out of Los Angeles or New York."

He said the commission also is looking into alternative funding methods for public television so the fund-raising aspects can be downplayed.

Tuesday night CEN officials and the PBS executives gave Hartford N. Gunn Jr., one of the PBS founders, the DEN 1977 award for Exceptional Service to Public Broadcasting.

South Sioux City Star and editor are sued

Omaha (AP) — A libel suit asking $510,000 in damages has been filed by a former South Sioux City police dispatcher against the South Sioux City Star newspaper and editor Henry Trysla.

In the suit filed in U.S. District Court in Omaha, attorneys for June Davis say a story the paper printed last September about her dismissal from her job contained erroneous information.

According to the suit, the newspaper reported that Miss Davis had emotional problems and was hospitalized when she was dismissed. That information was not correct, the suit said.

The paper's story said Miss Davis, a resident of Iowa, attempted to gain unemployment insurance from Nebraska through using the address of a South Sioux City councilman.

South Sioux City Star and editor are sued

Omaha (AP) — A libel suit asking $510,000 in damages has been filed by a former South Sioux City police dispatcher against the South Sioux City Star newspaper and editor Henry Trysla.

In the suit filed in U.S. District Court in Omaha, attorneys for June Davis say a story the paper printed last September about her dismissal from her job contained erroneous information.

According to the suit, the newspaper reported that Miss Davis had emotional problems and was hospitalized when she was dismissed. That information was not correct, the suit said.

The paper's story said Miss Davis, a resident of Iowa, attempted to gain unemployment insurance from Nebraska through using the address of a South Sioux City councilman.

Blinded U.S. President brought home

Editor's Note: Vasily Nikolayev, Soviet Foreign Minister, plotted the assassination of Soviet Chairman Alexei Kolkov and American President Sven Ericson in a helicopter over the Crimea to avert their cosying up to an Oriental axis of China and Japan. Kolkov dies, but Ericson is saved by his Secret Service guard when a wild boar attacks the assassins. William Safire unfolds the tale in the second excerpt from his book, "Full Disclosure."

By William Safire

"We are leaving right now, Vasily."

"Not right away."

The secretary of state felt a wave of fury surge in him and said nothing until it had passed. They were in the hospital administrator's office, originally a waiting room in the Czar's Palace, which the foreign minister had taken over as his command post. Upstairs, the President of the United States lay, alive, conscious, unable to see, in need of the best medical attention in the world. Down the hall from the President's room, Agent Bok occupied a huge ward, his condition unknown, but paralysis likely; he was sedated now, out of pain, but in need of a surgeon they could all trust. On the top floor, being photographed now, were the bodies of Soviet General Secretary Kolkov, his guards and his Chinese assassins.

George Curtice looked at his watch again: 12:30 P.M. Yalta time, three solid hours since the aerial ambush, one hour since the President opened his eyes and said his first shattering words, "Am I alive?" To have him lying there, attended by a couple of unknown Soviet doctors and his own half-competent personal physician was an impossible situation.

"You cannot keep this bottled up for five more minutes," Curtice said, his voice under control. "The President's life comes before any other consideration. You have helicopters at the airfield; I saw them when we got in," Curtice insisted, knowing the Russian was deliberately dragging a foot. "Delay is dangerous. You — and I hold you personally responsible for this — you are endangering the life of the President."

Nikolayev rose. "Do no say what is not true. I have ordered the helicopter. I have ordered the airport sealed off and secured. But I must make absolutely certain that the men we use to fly the plane are loyal, and not allied with the Chinese assassins."

"How long will that take?"

"Four hours. If it protects your President's life, the time is well spent."

"Unacceptable." Curtice knew exactly what Nikolayev was doing, and might have done the same in his shoes: freezing the situation, blacking out all news reports, until his fellow leaders in the Politburo could be informed and an immediate policy decided upon. Nikolayev was under enormous pressure: the slightest omission, the failure to act precisely as the man at the center would expect him to act, would open him to charges of misfeasance at a crucial moment.

Campaign injury comes back to haunt President

"Your formal protest is noted," said the Russian.

"For Crissake, Vasily," Curtice almost shouted across the desk, "this is no formality, this is —" he groped before lamely settling for "— life and death." More than that, Curtice's reputation rested on his ability to negotiate them out of here posthaste, with the news blackout lifted. Every action, every movement, every moment's delay would be analyzed by reporters and historians for years, and the blame, he was determined, would not be laid at his door. He felt a twinge of conscience at thinking of how he would look in this situation later, and returned to the pressure: "Every moment you sit on this powderkeg, the worse the explosion will be when the story breaks. Don't you see? You're making it worse."

"The general secretary is dead," said the foreign minister. "What could be worse?" Curtice thought it best not to make a quick reply, and Nikolayev answered his own question: "It could be worse if your President were dead, I know. But he is not dying. In terms of his own life, which as you say is paramount, the needs of security are greater at the moment than the need for medical specialists."

"We're not sure we're safe right here," Curtice pressed, a sense of helplessness mounting in the face of Nikolayev's rigid line. "What about an attack on the hospital? It could happen. They could burst in at any moment; you don't have 20 men guarding this place." It was hopeless; this was fencing, Curtice knew. The Russian was operating on a timetable of communication; after he knew the initial power lines were laid, the story would be made known, the President permitted to leave. The delays were "unavoidable", any objections would be politely listened to but not heard. And Nikolayev had an edge; America's first black secretary of state had to show himself as calm and cool, with no bombast. The explosion that might be allowed a white would be criticized in a black; a subtle edge, but one the Soviet foreign minister was ready to exploit.

Nikolayev, he knew, would not be pushed further, but four hours would not satisfy Lucas Cartwright, the President's chief of staff, or Ericson, and he was beginning to worry more all the time about how he would be savaged by the American press for conceling the biggest news of the generation. Curtice could think of no other way out. He told himself that he was acting in the interests of getting the wounded President adequate medical care and of making public the facts. He played his hole card.

In a different voice, he said, "I have just come from the bedside of the injured Secret Service agent, Bok." Curtice walked to the window and reminded himself that his words were probably being recorded, so he chose them with care. "Agent Bok is not sure of his memory of the moments on the ground, as the attackers charged his position. His uncertainty is understandable, since he was bleeding from the grenade wounds, and everything was happening so fast." Curtice paused to let that element of uncertainty sink in.

"He is not sure," Curtice said slowly, "but he indicated that he thinks he remembers Secretary Kolkov crawling over to the President who was unconscious in the ditch. He thinks he recalls the secretary lying on top of the President, shielding him with his own body."

"He remembers that?" Nikolayev was weighing the possibilities in his mind.

"His memory is hazy — after all, the agent is in pain, partly sedated. When he's better, it could be he will remember that

Full Disclosure

Secretary Kolkov died an heroic death saving President Ericson's life. Or —" Curtice shrugged — "he will remember that the secretary just died."

He let the Russian think it over. Curtice knew that the card he was playing was attractive to the foreign minister. If Kolkov died a hero, then Nikolayev, Kolkov's chosen successor, would be strengthened inside the Soviet Union. The American secretary of state could not pretend to know what machinations were going on in Moscow at that moment, or the relative weight of the need for time against the introduction of the fact of Kolkov's herosim. Maybe, he allowed himself to worry, Nikolayev wanted to discredit Kolkov, that no herosim was desired.

"Ninety minutes," said Nikolayev.

"Immediately," snapped Curtice. He had won.

"Thirty minutes."

"Done."

Seven hours out of Yalta, as Air Force One began its descent toward Lajes Field in the American Azores, Dr. Herbert Abelson gave a nervous start when the buzzer on his wristwatch went off. He had promised Ericson he would wake him a half-hour before arrival, and only with that promise had the President taken the sedation he needed.

He had been wrong to take this job, Abelson thought. This was exactly the kind of life he had decided not to live, the reason why he had set aside the practice of medicine a few years back for the more orderly life of medical editor. He should never have let Ericson talk him into the political life in the first place. "C'mon, Herb," the candidate had said. "It's just for the campaign. You'll see the play of power from the inside, and it's fascinating." And the campaign manager, that bastard Leigh, had assured him "the only thing you'll have to had out is aspirin and cold pills." Like a dope, Abelson thought, he had gone along for the ride.

The most intolerable part of the situation to Abelson was the knowledge that only he, of the people around the President, knew of the worst part of the problem. Not the medical part, the political part. With Harry Bok flat on his back in Yalta — poor bastard, he'd walked his last — only Herb Abelson carried the weight of guilty knowledge around with him.

He had to share it; he would not bear it alone. That was why he was looking forward to seeing Hennessy, along with the doctors at Lajes. He would give the political secret to Hennessy and then the responsibility would be out of his hands. Then he would give the medical secret to the Bethesda team, so that the medical responsibility for the patient would be where it belonged.

Ericson was in pain, brow furrowed, eyes staring ahead, his fingers lightly touching the bandages around his head to find out how bound up he was. "I'm a little dizzy, and I feel sick, and my head hurts," he reported.

He was lucid, the doctor noted; the complaints were differentiated. "You're lucky to be alive, Sven."

"You're right. How's Harry?"

"He'll be okay." Abelson did not think it was a good time to suggest paralysis; the President had enough on his mind. "We left him in the hospital there, along with the big, blonde nurse, and we're sending doctors." There was silence.

"All right, Herb, what do you think?" the President asked.

The doctor passed his hands across the patient's eyes, back and forth a few times. No blinking. "You're stirring up a wind in front of my face, Herb, what do you think?"

"Can you tell light from dark — I mean, the window's to your left, there's a lot of sun, but over here it's darker. Can you tell the difference?"

"I can't see a thing," the President said. "Not a goddam thing."

"We'll be landing in the Azores in a minute," Abelson said quickly, "and the ophthalmologist from Bethesda is there waiting for us. He'll give us a diagnosis, we'll know a lot more. Concussion like this, could be a couple of days, you'll be as good as new."

"How long was the last time?"

"Forty-one hours."

"The second time lasts longer?"

"Jesus, Sven, I wish I knew," said the doctor. "The way it was was such a big secret, I was afraid to ask around. That's a very specialized field, a whole different branch of medicine."

"We'll have to tell the truth about my condition when we land at Andrews," the President said. "In a calm way, just the temporary effect of the concussion. And in a couple of days I'll be out of it. That's not the problem. The problem is the last time."

"You mean you don't want to tell the eye doctor about the last time?"

"Not a word, Herb. I know what I'm doing. No hints, nothing. Ever. Let's go over who else knows."

"Buffie was in the compartment with you. She knows, and she's been very good. You and I know. And Harry Bok. And that bastard Leigh knew. That's all." Then he went over the people who probably should have been told but from whom it had been kept. "Not even an eye doctor was told. Cartwright, Hennessey, Smitty, Melinda — not one of them knows. I haven't said a word."

"Keep it that way," the President said, in a presidential-order voice. "I'm going to tell Hennessy about the last time. Second thought, you do it, when Hennessy comes aboard now. And Herb—" he reached behind him for a pillow, and the doctor moved to give his head the support he wanted — "if you have any questions ever about what to do, and you can't reach me for any reason, work with Hennessy."

"You have to know something," Abelson said to Hennessy urgently when the special counsel and the medical party met Air Force One at Lajes. "The President has a problem."

"It's this blindness business," said Hennessy, helping him along.

"No. I mean, God knows that's problem, but there's something else that wasn't important before that makes everything worse. You remember the campaign train back in September, that great idea of that bastard Leigh to go back to politicking in the old style?"

Mark Hennessy remembered it well but could not see how it was relevant at a moment like this, and he said so.

"It's relevant as hell, counselor," the doctor said. "You remember how we canceled the schedule for the next two days while the candidate recuperated from his laryngitis? What happened was that Ericson was in his upper berth with Buffie, the photographer, between stops. When the damn engineer slammed on the brakes, Sven smashed his head into the end of the berth. Buffie started hollering and waving a naked arm through the curtains of the berth. Harry Bok was right there, in the corridor, and he shut her up and got her out and came for me."

"So?" Hennessy couldn't get aggravated about the beginnings of an Ericson affair.

"The candidate was unconscious for about an hour, and Leigh and Bok and I just sat around, they wouldn't let me call a hospital. Leigh insisted everybody freeze. He wouldn't even tell Smitty. He said he didn't want him to have to lie. Me, he let lie. Finally, the spirits of ammonia got some results and Ericson came to. But he couldn't see. We thought he'd gone blind. The first day, he could tell light from dark and the second day the pressure came off the nerve when the swelling went down, and he could see as well as ever.

"This time he can't tell light from dark yet. And when these things happen more than once, it's not good. That's why I said the hell with it, this time I'd get an eye doctor before anybody stopped me. Cartwright passed the message on to Bethesda without arguing; he didn't know the background. Doesn't even now. The President said you were the only one to know, that you would be the honcho on this."

"I have not even spoken to the President about this," Hennessey said slowly after a moment's thought, "but from what you tell me he told you, it seems that he is concerned that his enemies might use the campaign incident to try to drive him from office. It was unimportant then, but it becomes important now, as you said at the beginning. Very important. I'm not suggesting what you do, only that you think about it." He looked for another handle to help Herb shut up about this. "Think about the medical ethics, of telling outsiders more than your patient wants you to tell them about confidences vouchsafed to you under the doctor-patient relationship."

Hennessy felt the enormity of the President's triple problem beginning to grip him. The threat of upheaval in the Soviet Union, or the threat of vengeance against the people who would be blamed for the assassination, had to be foremost in the mind of the man elected to protect the nation's survival.

And that was only the beginning of the problem for the President, Hennessy thought, putting himself in Ericson's shoes. He was blinded — temporarily, probably, judging from the previous experience — but even for a few days, he would have to grope around physically as well as mentally, giving the appearance of disability, even paralysis, at a time when the situation cried out for the appearance of supreme ability.

And then the complication: the concealment of the previous blindness. Hennessy turned that over and examined it: on the campaign train, it would have seemed vital to hide the fact that the President was playing around with a girl between whistle stops. At this stage he could downplay the sex angle; after all the candidate was a divorcee or widower — depending on how you characterized the survivor of a woman who committed suicide on the day of her divorce.

But that innocent concealment of the affair was not a suspicious concealment of a "previous blindness", inviting the charge that Ericson had failed to fully disclose his health before the election. That was no peccadillo, to be brushed off as fuel for gossips, but a substantive complaint about a false basis for assuming the reins of power.

That reminded the lawyer of Roy Bannerman, the treasury secretary, who had been Ericson's rival for power in the party. If Bannerman were to learn of the previous blindness, perhaps he would be inclined to mount a challenge to the President while he was still blinded, getting him to step aside, invoking the terms of the Letter to the Vice President, or even invoking the 25th Amendment.

10 from region indicted in farm implement theft

Kansas City (AP) — Nine Kansas City area residents have been indicted by a federal grand jury in Brownsville, Tex. as alleged participants in an international farm implement theft ring, FBI agents said here Tuesday.

The nine local residents and one from Iowa were among 16 persons indicted as part of a conspiracy to steal tractors, backhoes and other valuable equipment in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Arkansas. Authorities said their plan was to sell them to buyers in Mexico and Guatemala through connections in Texas towns along the Mexican border.

Among those named in the 29-count indictment were: John Shockey, James Eggleston, Joseph W. King, Frank Kolisek Jr. and Robert J. Martin of Kansas City, Kan.; Ralph B. Hufford, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; Carl L. Drake and Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Denny of Bonner Springs, Kan. and Ray Wagner of Oakland, Iowa.

situation, blacking out all news reports, until his fellow leaders in the Politburo could be informed and an immediate policy decided upon. Nikolayev was under enormous pressure: the slightest omission, the failure to act precisely as the man at the center would expect him to act, would open him to charges of misfeasance at a crucial moment.

"Your formal protest is noted," said the Russian.

"For Crissake, Vasily," Curtice almost shouted across the desk, "this is no formality, this is —" he groped before lamely settling for "— life and death." More than that, Curtice's reputation rested on his ability to negotiate them out of here posthaste, with the news blackout lifted. Every action, every movement, every moment's delay would be analyzed by reporters and historians for years, and the blame, he was determined, would not be laid at his door. He felt a twinge of conscience at thinking of how he would look in this situation later, and returned to the pressure: "Every moment you sit on this powderkeg, the worse the explosion will be when the story breaks. Don't you see? You're making it worse."

"The general secretary is dead," said the foreign minister. "What could be worse?" Curtice thought it best not to make a quick reply, and Nikolayev answered his own question: "It could be worse if your President were dead, I know. But he is not dying. In terms of his own life, which as you say is paramount, the needs of security are greater at the moment than the need for medical specialists."

"We're not sure we're safe right here," Curtice pressed, a sense of helplessness mounting in the face of Nikolayev's rigid line. "What about an attack on the hospital? It could happen. They could burst in at any moment; you don't have 20 men guarding this place." It was hopeless; this was fencing, Curtice knew. The Russian was operating on a timetable of communication; after he knew the initial power lines were laid, the story would be made known, the President permitted to leave. The delays were "unavoidable", any objections would be politely listened to but not heard. And Nikolayev had an edge; America's first black secretary of state had to show himself as calm and cool, with no bombast. The explosion that might be allowed a white would be criticized in a black; a subtle edge, but one the Soviet foreign minister was ready to exploit.

Nikolayev, he knew, would not be pushed further, but four hours would not satisfy Lucas Cartwright, the President's chief of staff, or Ericson, and he was beginning to worry more all the time about how he would be savaged by the American press for conceling the biggest news of the generation. Curtice could think of no other way out. He told himself that he was acting in the interests of getting the wounded President adequate medical care and of making public the facts. He played his hole card.

In a different voice, he said, "I have just come from the bedside of the injured Secret Service agent, Bok." Curtice walked to the window and reminded himself that his words were probably being recorded, so he chose them with care. "Agent Bok is not sure of his memory of the moments on the ground, as the attackers charged his position. His uncertainty is understandable, since he was bleeding from the grenade wounds, and everything was happening so fast." Curtice paused to let that element of uncertainty sink in.

"He is not sure," Curtice said slowly, "but he indicated that he thinks he remembers Secretary Kolkov crawling over to the President who was unconscious in the ditch. He thinks he recalls the secretary lying on top of the President, shielding him with his own body."

"He remembers that?" Nikolayev was weighing the possibilities in his mind.

"His memory is hazy — after all, the agent is in pain, partly sedated. When he's better, it could be he will remember that Secretary Kolkov died an heroic death saving President Ericson's life. Or —" Curtice shrugged — "he will remember that the secretary just died."

Full Disclosure

He let the Russian think it over. Curtice knew that the card he was playing was attractive to the foreign minister. If Kolkov died a hero, then Nikolayev, Kolkov's chosen successor, would be strengthened inside the Soviet Union. The American secretary of state could not pretend to know what machinations were going on in Moscow at that moment, or the relative weight of the need for time against the introduction of the fact of Kolkov's herosim. Maybe, he allowed himself to worry, Nikolayev wanted to discredit Kolkov, that no herosim was desired.

"Ninety minutes," said Nikolayev.

"Immediately," snapped Curtice. He had won.

"Thirty minutes."

"Done."

Seven hours out of Yalta, as Air Force One began its descent toward Lajes Field in the American Azores, Dr. Herbert Abelson gave a nervous start when the buzzer on his wristwatch went off. He had promised Ericson he would wake him a half-hour before arrival, and only with that promise had the President taken the sedation he needed.

He had been wrong to take this job, Abelson thought. This was exactly the kind of life he had decided not to live, the reason why he had set aside the practice of medicine a few years back for the more orderly life of medical editor. He should never have let Ericson talk him into the political life in the first place. "C'mon, Herb," the candidate had said. "It's just for the campaign. You'll see the play of power from the inside, and it's fascinating." And the campaign manager, that bastard Leigh, had assured him "the only thing you'll have to had out is aspirin and cold pills." Like a dope, Abelson thought, he had gone along for the ride.

The most intolerable part of the situation to Abelson was the knowledge that only he, of the people around the President, knew of the worst part of the problem. Not the medical part, the political part. With Harry Bok flat on his back in Yalta — poor bastard, he'd walked his last — only Herb Abelson carried the weight of guilty knowledge around with him.

He had to share it; he would not bear it alone. That was why he was looking forward to seeing Hennessy, along with the doctors at Lajes. He would give the political secret to Hennessy and then the responsibility would be out of his hands. Then he would give the medical secret to the Bethesda team, so that the medical responsibility for the patient would be where it belonged.

Ericson was in pain, brow furrowed, eyes staring ahead, his fingers lightly touching the bandages around his head to find out how bound up he was. "I'm a little dizzy, and I feel sick, and my head hurts," he reported.

He was lucid, the doctor noted; the complaints were differentiated. "You're lucky to be alive, Sven."

"You're right. How's Harry?"

"He'll be okay." Abelson did not think it was a good time to suggest paralysis; the President had enough on his mind. "We left him in the hospital there, along with the big, blonde nurse, and we're sending doctors." There was silence.

"All right, Herb, what do you think?" the President asked.

The doctor passed his hands across the patient's eyes, back and forth a few times. No blinking. "You're stirring up a wind in front of my face, Herb, what do you think?"

"Can you tell light from dark — I mean, the window's to your left, there's a lot of sun, but over here it's darker. Can you tell the difference?"

"I can't see a thing," the President said. "Not a goddam thing."

"We'll be landing in the Azores in a minute," Abelson said quickly, "and the ophthalmologist from Bethesda is there waiting for us. He'll give us a diagnosis, we'll know a lot more. Concussion like this, could be a couple of days, you'll be as good as new."

"How long was the last time?"

"Forty-one hours."

"The second time lasts longer?"

"Jesus, Sven, I wish I knew," said the doctor. "The way it was was such a big secret, I was afraid to ask around. That's a very specialized field, a whole different branch of medicine."

"We'll have to tell the truth about my condition when we land at Andrews," the President said. "In a calm way, just the temporary effect of the concussion. And in a couple of days I'll be out of it. That's not the problem. The problem is the last time."

"You mean you don't want to tell the eye doctor about the last time?"

"Not a word, Herb. I know what I'm doing. No hints, nothing. Ever. Let's go over who else knows."

"Buffie was in the compartment with you. She knows, and she's been very good. You and I know. And Harry Bok. And that bastard Leigh knew. That's all." Then he went over the people who probably should have been told but from whom it had been kept. "Not even an eye doctor was told. Cartwright, Hennessey, Smitty, Melinda — not one of them knows. "Keep it that way," the President said, in a presidential-order voice. "I'm going to tell Hennessy about the last time. Second thought, you do it, when Hennessy comes aboard now. Interest rate is cut, stock mart advances

Dow Ind. +10.17

New York (AP) — The stock market staged its strongest advance in more than two months Tuesday, inspired by an unexpected prime rate cut at a leading New York bank.

Depressed glamor issues scored some notable gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 10.17 to 922.57, for its sharpest rise since it climbed 13.06 points on April 12.

Gainers outnumbered losers by better than a 5-2 spread on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume reached its busiest level in almost four weeks at 25.39 million shares, up from 20.25 million Monday.

The catalyst for the rally was provided by Morgan Guaranty Trust of New York late Monday when the bank lowered its prime lending rate from 6¾ to 6½ per cent.

No other major banks showed any haste to match the reduction. But analysts said it nevertheless came as a kind of official stamp for recent evidence that interest rates were easing off after rising for most of the spring.

Only last Friday Citibank of New York had changed its formula for computing the prime to avoid an increase to 7 per cent.

Brokers said the market also benefited from hopes that recent declines in many commodity prices signaled a lessening of inflationary pressures on food prices.

On Tuesday afternoon the Agriculture Department said prospects remained bright for another bumper world grain crop in the coming year.

The Dow rose 6 at the outset, pulled back to about the plus-2 level by noontime, and then resumed its climb. In so doing, it broke loose from the 898-914 range in which it had been fluctuating weakly since late May.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials vaulted 1.31 to 110.18, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 1.12 at 99.86.

Among glamor issues, which have borne the brunt of the pressure on the market in recent months, IBM showed a 4½-point gain at 258 as of the 4 p.m. close in New York; Burroughs rose 1½ to 61½; Xerox gained 1⅜ to 48⅛, and Eastman Kodak was up 1⅞ at 60½.

Actively traded blue chips included General Motors, ahead 1 at 69⅜; Exxon, up 1 at 52⅜, and American Telephone & Telegraph, ½ higher at 63.

Texaco was the volume leader, unchanged at 28 on turnover of more than 320,000 shares.

In the over-the-counter market, the NASDAQ composite index closed at 97.70, up .42.

Omaha is eligible for $18 million

Omaha Neb. (AP) — The City of Omaha, which asked for $8.3 million in federal Public Works money, is trying to find ways to spend the $17.8 million for which it is now eligible.

"I'm sure we can find a lot of needed projects," said Mayor Al Veys.

Former Omaha Mayor Robert Cunningham and other mayors went to Washington, D.C., to complain after their cities didn't get any of the $2 billion distributed to high unemployment areas. The regulations subsequently were changed.

Kiburz is elected

Toronto (UPI) — The general manager of the Loup Public Power District in Columbus, Neb., Tuesday was elected president of the American Public Power Association during its 34th annual conference.

Max E. Kiburz succeeds Charles E. Duckworth, city manager of Garland, Tex., in the association's top post.

In addition, Mrs. Rosemary M. Skrupa, Omaha Public Power District President, was one of five new members elected to the association's board of directors.

Hogs, cattle mostly lower

Omaha, Neb. (AP) — Omaha Livestock Exchange quotations Tuesday listed barrows and gilts at 25 to 50 cents lower, except for those over 300 pounds, which were largely $1.00 lower.

Sows were 25 to 75 cents lower. Those weighing 300-600 pounds sold for $36.00-36.50.

There were 6,400 cattle and calves on offer. Steers were moderately active and steady to 25 cents lower, instances 50 cents lower. Heifers were moderately active, steady to weak, instances 25 cents lower. Cows were mostly $1.00 lower, some $1.25-1.50 lower.

There were 600 sheep on offer. Slaughter spring lambs were 25 cents higher. Slaughter ewes were mostly $1.00 higher. Choice and prime spring slaughter lambs weighing 95-115 pounds sold for $54.00-55.00. Utility and good shorn ewes sold for $11.50-12.25.

The U.S.D.A. estimated receipts Wednesday at 5,000 cattle and calves; 4,000 hogs; 400 sheep.

Interest rate is cut, stock mart advances

New York (AP) — The stock market staged its strongest advance in more than two months Tuesday, inspired by an unexpected prime rate cut at a leading New York bank.

Depressed glamor issues scored some notable gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 10.17 to 922.57, for its sharpest rise since it climbed 13.06 points on April 12.

Gainers outnumbered losers by better than a 5-2 spread on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume reached its busiest level in almost four weeks at 25.39 million shares, up from 20.25 million Monday.

The catalyst for the rally was provided by Morgan Guaranty Trust of New York late Monday when the bank lowered its prime lending rate from 6¾ to 6½ per cent.

No other major banks

Dow Ind. +10.17

showed any haste to match the reduction. But analysts said it nevertheless came as a kind of official stamp for recent evidence that interest rates were easing off after rising for most of the spring.

Only last Friday Citibank of New York had changed its formula for computing the prime to avoid an increase to 7 per cent.

Brokers said the market also benefited from hopes that recent declines in many commodity prices signaled a lessening of inflationary pressures on food prices.

On Tuesday afternoon the Agriculture Department said prospects remained bright for another bumper world grain crop in the coming year.

The Dow rose 6 at the outset, pulled back to about the plus-2 level by noontime, and then resumed its climb. In so doing, it broke loose from the 898-914 range in which it had been fluctuating weakly since late May.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials vaulted 1.31 to 110.18, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 1.12 at 99.86.

Among glamor issues, which have borne the brunt of the pressure on the market in recent months, IBM showed a 4½-point gain at 258 as of the 4 p.m. close in New York; Burroughs rose 1½ to 61½; Xerox gained 1⅜ to 48¼, and Eastman Kodak was up 1⅝ at 90½.

Actively traded blue chips included General Motors, ahead 1 at 69⅜; Exxon, up 1 at 52⅜, and American Telephone & Telegraph, ½ higher at 63.

Texaco was the volume leader, unchanged at 28 on turnover of more than 320,000 shares.

In the over-the-counter market, the NASDAQ composite index closed at 97.70, up .42.

Omaha is eligible for $18 million

Omaha Neb. (AP) — The City of Omaha, which asked for $8.3 million in federal Public Works money, is trying to find ways to spend the $17.8 million for which it is now eligible.

"I'm sure we can find a lot of needed projects," said Mayor Al Veys.

Former Omaha Mayor Robert Cunningham and other mayors went to Washington, D.C., to complain after their cities didn't get any of the $2 billion distributed to high unemployment areas. The regulations subsequently were changed.

Kiburz is elected

Toronto (UPI) — The general manager of the Loup Public Power District in Columbus, Neb., Tuesday was elected president of the American Public Power Association during its 34th annual conference.

Max E. Kiburz succeeds Charles E. Duckworth, city manager of Garland, Tex., in the association's top post.

In addition, Mrs. Rosemary M. Skrupa, Omaha Public Power District President, was one of five new members elected to the association's board of directors.

Dividend declared

The Board of Directors of NBC Co. declared a devidend of $.11 per common share according to President James Stuart, Jr. The dividend will be payable June 30, to stockholders on record June 27.

NBC Co., a one-bank holding company, owns the National Bank of Commerce, NBC Center Building, Mutual Saving Company of Lincoln and Omaha, Nebraska Savings Company, Scottsbluff; NBC Leasing Co. and NBC Credit Insurance Agency, Inc.

NBC Co. is listed locally on the over-the-counter market and was bid at $12¼ June 12.

Pathfinder hearing keys on poll

Fremont (AP) — Dodge County District Court Judge Mark Fuhrman heard arguments on a public opinion poll Tuesday before scheduling Aug. 23 action on a change of venue sought by E.I. du Pont de Nemours in 37 lawsuits filed in the Fremont Pathfinder Hotel explosion.

The Jan. 10, 1976, explosion killed 18 persons outright and damaged much of downtown Fremont.

Du Pont, a codefendant with Nebraska Natural Gas Co., cited widespread publicity in requesting the change in trial location.

Federal investigators determined the explosion occurred when a two-inch piece of plastic pipe, manufactured by du Pont and installed by Nebraska Natural Gas Co., pulled away from a metal coupling. Du Pont is seeking a third-party complaint against Norton McMurray Manufacturing Co. of Geneva, Ill., manufacturer of the coupling.

The focus of the hearing was on a poll paid for by du Pont to determine if Dodge County residents had an opinion on who to blame for the explosion.

A 10-member staff headed by professional pollster Joe B. Williams of Elmwood questioned 200 registered voters.

Judge Fuhrman ordered attorneys and others involved not to divulge percentages that might prejudice potential jurors. Before the order, Williams said 77 per cent of those polled had decided who to blame and 23 per cent had no opinion.

Arguments from attorneys for Nebraska Natural Gas and Norton McMurray challenged the relevance, necessity, accuracy and possible bias of the poll.

Fremont attorney John Kerrigan, representing six of the 37 plaintiffs, argued that the poll had been "vastly overemphasized."

Kerrigan said the case should remain in Dodge County for the convenience of all parties involved, especially elderly plaintiffs who "find it difficult even to come to the courthouse."

Plaintiffs' attorneys also claimed the Pathfinder disaster drew statewide and national attention and that other such polls could show similar bias in many other counties.

Attorneys also took issue with submission of a du Pont file of Fremont Tribune articles on the explosion.

Canadian authorities want to see him now

Robert Morrison, the hungry Canadian who found a free meal at the Lincoln City Jail Sunday after attracting attention, has attracted some more attention.

Morrison, 34, was jailed after he threw four wooden street barricades through the windows of two downtown businesses in the wee hours Sunday. He told police he hadn't eaten for two days and knew he'd get fed in jail.

Authorities Tuesday learned the Canadian officials would like to question Morrison about a parole violation. He was recently released from Kingsport Prison in Ontario where he had served time on an assault charge.

Extraditing Morrison to Canada may involve some "higher ups," according to Deputy Sheriff Vincent McNeil. McNeil said the last time such an estradition was made was in 1958, and the order had to be signed by President Dwight Eisenhower and some British officials.

It isn't clear if Jimmy Carter and Queen Elizabeth will get in on the Morrison story since the procedure might have changed in recent years. Besides, any fugitive action will have to wait until the local charges are cleared, McNeil said.

63-year-old woman conned out of $22,000

A 63-year-old Lincoln woman was conned out of $22,000 by two women Monday afternoon in what police call "the old pigeon drop scheme."

The woman said she met the pair at Gateway Shopping Center and they told her they had found $30,000 in a hollowed-out book. They promised her a share of the money if she'd put up some good faith money, which she did.

She was told to wait at the shopping center where she would be contacted with her share of the $30,000 and her good faith money. When the pair failed to return, she called police.

Iowa youth pleads innocent to two charges of burglary

The arrest of an 18-year-old Iowa youth may clear up at least eight recent house burglaries on the outskirts of Lincoln, according to Lancaster County sheriff's officials.

Gregory W. Myers, a Lincoln resident for about one month, was charged Monday with two counts of burglary in county court. He pleaded innocent but was ordered in lieu of $5,000 bond pending a preliminary hearing.

Myers was arrested at his home Friday night. Several thousand dollars worth of television sets, radios, guns and watches were recovered, authorities said.

Among the victims of the burglaries was County Commissioner Bob Colin.

Preliminary hearing July 20 for man charged with robbery

A 37-year-old Illinois man charged with the May 29 robbery of a Lincoln Safeway store faces a July 20 preliminary hearing on three felony counts stemming from the incident.

Rudy Helenick has been charged with robbery, the use of a firearm to commit a felony and fleeing to avoid arrest. He was arrested by police following a high speed chase after he alleged robbed employes of the Piedmont Shopping Center Safeway and locked them in a milk cooler.

Police reportedly recovered about $5,000 taken in the robbery.

Arson hearing not slated yet

A preliminary hearing date will be set June 28 in Lancaster County Court for a 27-year-old Lincoln man charged with four counts of arson.

Paul J. Von Busch was arrested in the vicinity of a fire he allegedly set June 5. Authorities said the arrest possibly cleared four similar fires, two near downtown and two in the Belmont area.

Man in diversion program

A 48-year-old Lincoln man charged with debauching two teen-agers last December has been accepted into the Lancaster County pre-trial diversion program.

Richard Vaughn, of 2540 Park Blvd., was accepted into the program which offers counseling from three months to a year for persons convicted of nonviolent felonies.

Gunshot wound finally fatal

Dan D. Sperry, of 6326 Gladstone, died at St. Elizabeth's Health Center where he was taken following the shooting.

Water rules delay development

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

The Lancaster County Board has been postponing approval of rural subdivision development because a proposed water quantity standard has not yet been approved.

Tuesday the board deferred action on an application by Harold Heiser to develop about 55 acres along West Fletcher St., just north of Pawnee Lake.

The subdivision, "Pawnee Estates," would contain 14 lots — "a rather small development," said Heiser's attorney Jack Wolfe.

The board earlier deferred action on two similar subdivisions: Savage Acres at 84th and Davey Rd. and Finnigan's subdivision at 84th and Waverly Rd.

The delays have occurred because the board, at the instigation of Commissioner Bob Colin, has asked for an amendment to the county land subdivision resolution requiring proof that a subdivision will not use water at the expense of its neighbors.

Heiser attempted to comply with a preliminary draft of the proposed regulation by hiring John Addink of Addink Engineering Co., a water consultant, to study the proposed plat.

Addink told the commissioners that test wells showed a flow of eight to nine gallons per minute on the land to be developed, and he said neighbors' wells have an even better flow.

"This thing's going to have water 100 years from now," Addink said.

The area is not suitable for irrigation, he noted, so farmers should not experience adverse effects.

Despite Addink's evidence, however, the commissioners voted unanimously to defer action until the new requirement is on the books.

"It's difficult to say yes to this one when we've hung two others up," chairman Bruce Hamilton said.

The proposed water regulation may be ready for approval at next Tuesday's board meeting, according to Deputy County Attorney Mike Heavican.

In other action, the board approved three bids for work at Lancaster Manor. Two contracts were awarded to Donley Medical Supply Co., 2425 O St.; $20,376 for various tables and chairs and $7,482 for "miscellaneous nursing services." A contract for $6,924 was awarded to B & B Locksmiths, 6220 Havelock Ave., for a security lock system.

An additional $1,340 was awarded to E.O. Peters, Inc., for work on the County-City boiler plant. A steam pipe was relocated to avoid a gas main.

The board approved a resolution confirming Sunday beer sales at Austin's Silver Spur in Martell.

A June 28 hearing has been set for a Sunday beer sales application by Paul Wilcoxen, owner of Lee's Restaurant at Coddington and W. Van Dorn.

Different wage hikes may mean dilemma

It's too early to predict, but Lancaster County commissioners are emitting warning signals about an across-the-board raise for county employes.

The county's tradition of matching the city's pay hike may not be continued this year, commissioners indicate.

A 6½% wage and benefit package has been accepted by some city employe groups, but rejected by others.

The City Employes Association, which represents workers in some agencies jointly financed by the city and county, particularly the Health Department, has accepted the offer.

If the city adopts a 6½% raise for all employes, and the county is unable to match that without breaking through its tax ceiling of 14.28 mills, it will cause some juggling of figures for those whose salaries are jointly financed.

The county should not pick up the tab for any increase to the jointly financed salaries above what the county is able to grant its own employes, commissioner Jan Gauger said Monday.

The board will not rule on a pay increase until after next fiscal year's budget has been approved and the mill levy computed. The board will grant only what increase is possible without going over the taxing limit.

Whether that amount will be 6½%, or a percentage point or two less, will remain an unanswered question until the county budget process is completed.

If the board is true to its form of past years, the budget won't be approved and the mill levy set until late August.

Welch, Omaha native, candidate to head FBI

Omaha (AP) — One of President Carter's candidates for FBI director is an Omaha native.

Neil John Welch, 50, a graduate of the former University of Omaha and the Creighton University Law School, is one of five possible nominees named Monday by Carter.

Welch currently heads the FBI's Philadelphia office.

Starting his FBI career in 1951, Welch was appointed assistant agent in charge of the bureau's first office in Jackson, Miss., in 1964. A year later, he was transferred to Washington, D.C., as an inspector.

In 1966, Welch was put in charge of the field office at Buffalo, N.Y. Four years later, he became special agent in charge of the Detroit office. He was moved to Philadelphia two years ago.

Decline forecast

Washington (AP) — This season's orange harvest is expected to produce 250.6 million boxes, a 2% decline from 254.6 million forecast in May, the Agriculture Dept. reported.

Neighborhood park still undecided

A park for the Salt Valley View neighborhood is still in the talking stage, Lincoln Board of Education members told a Salt Valley View association Tuesday.

The neighborhood group asked the board to continue working with the city to establish a five-acre park on the school-owned land. The group also wants the board to keep the rest of the lot's 12 acres for a possible future elementary school.

The land, south of S. 1st and S. 14th streets and north of the Highway 2 cutoff, is now a weed problem and has not been mowed in several months, according to Tom Engstrom, chairman of the neighborhood association.

Board members did ask school administrators to look into the mowing problem but gave no hint about any change in a decision on a future school building in that neighborhood.

Current plans are to sell the land not used as a park to private buyers.

Negotiations continue with the city on the purchase of the land for a park, Supt. of Schools John Prasch told the group.

In other business, a combined program for about 500 junior and senior high school youth, called the special vocational needs program, will cost about $480,000 next year, according to an administration report.

The program combines special counseling for potential dropouts in two junior high schools and Lincoln High School; the Lincoln Learning Center, an alternative program for senior high school students; a similar program for junior high school students; and the citywide work-study program.

The alternative schools for the junior and senior high school students and possibly the work-study staff will be in the Whittier School, Prasch said.

Lincoln schools hope for about $241,000 in federal and state funds for the combined programs, he said.

The only reservation about the programs was expressed by board member Lou Roper who said, "I want to make sure it (the alternative school program) is not a copout to academic learning."

In other action, the board appointed Calvert Elementary School teacher Dean H. Faubel as assistant principal at Meadow Lane Elementary School.

The school system still has three or four elementary school vacancies for next fall and about a dozen vacancies in the secondary schools, said Carroll Sawin, assistant superintendent for personnel.

Prepared Boy Scout foils bear

Jackson, Wyo. (UPI) — A Nebraska Boy Scout, confronted by a bear Tuesday in Grand Teton National Park, played dead and received only a puncture wound from the animal, park officials said.

The incident marked the first human injury sustained this season from a bear in the park.

Johnathan Gould was hiking in a park canyon about eight miles north of Jenny Lake with a companion, Larry Johnson, when they spotted the bear. The Omaha Boy Scouts dropped their packs and fell to the ground to play dead, according to Joseph Shellenberger, park information officer.

The bear inspected a pack and then "sniffed around Gould's leg and put a single puncture wound about a quarter of an inch deep," Shellenberger said. The boy was later treated for the minor wound, he said.

Shellenberger said the incident could have been caused by a bear suspected of tearing though packs left by rock climbers in the Garnet Canyon area of the park. That canyon has been closed for more than a week.

Malone plan opposed

A Malone-area resident Tuesday night launched a petition drive seeking to halt plans which he says will turn the area into a neighborhood of multiple-unit dwellings.

Tony Esquival, 2330 R. St., says federal urban development funds earmarked for the Malone area should be used to help homeowners repair dilapidated housing.

Esquival said all six alternative plans submitted by consultants call for construction of townhouses and other multiple-unit dwellings in the area bound by 27th St., Rock Island Railroad tracks on the west, O Street and Missouri Pacific tracks on the north.

An Urban Development Department survey shows that 30% of the residences in the area are owner-occupied, he said. Of those, he said, the survey determined that 92% could be adequately rehabilitated with improvements costing $4,000 or less.

Judging from experience, he said, homeowners are likely to get "peanuts" in return for their property and will have few alternative places to relocate.

Esquival said the petition will be presented to city officials, including Mayor Helen Boosalis. But he said federal Housing and Urban Development officials also would have to be swayed if plans are to be changed.

Easing of retirement plan urged

About a half-dozen persons Tuesday night, spoke for liberalization of the county employes retirement plan, but County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton said the county is fiscally incapable of meeting all the requests.

In a public hearing on proposed changes in the retirement plan, spokesmen urged that the minimum retirement age be lowered or eliminated, Hamilton said.

Under proposed changes, anyone who is 55 years old and has participated in the retirement plan from time of eligibility and for 20 consecutive years may retire and draw from the fund.

Also urged was an easing of the requirement that, in order to collect county contributions to the fund, the individual must have participated in the plan for 20 years.

Hamilton said "some good questions" were raised and that the retirement plan would be placed on the board's agenda.

Bike rider hurt in crash

A 12-year-old Lincoln boy suffered an apparent concussion in a car-bike accident on 9th St. between Hill and Van Dorn.

Carl J. Burgeson, son of Mr. & Mrs. Orville C. Burgeson of 2735 S. 9th St., was in fair condition at Lincoln General Hospital with head injuries.

Police said a motorist was passing Carl, who was riding his bike along 9th St., at a low speed. The driver told police she felt a slight bump when she passed the bicycle, and looked back to find Carl and his bike down in the street.

No citations were given.

Motorcyclist's condition fair

An 18-year-old motorcyclist was in fair condition Tuesday night at Lincoln General Hospital after his motorcycle collided with a car on 40th Street.

James S. Hammond, 4211 Spruce, suffered head and foot injuries when his cycle collided with a car turning left on 40th between Lake St. and Normal Blvd., police said.

The driver of the car, Ben H. Myers, 67, of 4030 C St., was ticketed for failure to yield the right of way, police said.

Safety awards given

Rutherford, N.J. (AP) — The Becton Dickinson Plant in Columbus, Neb., and the Santee Sioux Becton Dickinson Plant in Knox County, Neb., will receive the "award of honor" from the National Safety Council in recognition of five million man hours without a disabling injury a spokesman for the company said Tuesday.

The spokesman said the award is the highest given by the National Safety Council. Only about 5% of the nation's industry achieves this high level of safety.

The spokesman said the Columbus and Santee Sioux plants are the only ones in Nebraska to be so honored. The award will be made June 23 at the Columbus plant.

Man bound over for robbery

An Omaha man charged with four felony counts stemming from the Feb. 17 robbery of a Lincoln couple was bound over to district court Tuesday.

Dana R. Rankin, 23, faces two counts of robbery and two counts of using a firearm to commit a felony. Those charges will be heard July 13 in the higher court.

Neighborhood park still undecided

A park for the Salt Valley View neighborhood is still in the talking stage, Lincoln Board of Education members told a Salt Valley View association Tuesday.

The neighborhood group asked the board to continue working with the city to establish a five-acre park on the school-owned land. The group also wants the board to keep the rest of the lot's 12 acres for a possible future elementary school.

The land, south of S. 1st and S. 14th streets and north of the Highway 2 cutoff, is now a weed problem and has not been mowed in several months, according to Tom Engstrom, chairman of the neighborhood association.

Board members did ask school administrators to look into the mowing problem but gave no hint about any change in a decision on a future school building in that neighborhood.

Current plans are to sell the land not used as a park to private buyers.

Negotiations continue with the city on the purchase of the land for a park, Supt. of Schools John Prasch told the group.

In other business, a combined program for about 500 junior and senior high school youth, called the special vocational needs program, will cost about $480,000 next year, according to an administration report.

The program combines special counseling for potential dropouts in two junior high schools and Lincoln High School; the Lincoln Learning Center, an alternative program for senior high school students; a similar program for junior high school students; and the citywide work-study program.

The alternative schools for the junior and senior high school students and possibly the work-study staff will be in the Whittier School, Prasch said.

Lincoln schools hope for about $241,000 in federal and state funds for the combined programs, he said.

The only reservation about the programs was expressed by board member Lou Roper who said, "I want to make sure it (the alternative school program) is not a copout to academic learning."

In other action, the board appointed Calvert Elementary School teacher Dean H. Faubel as assistant principal at Meadow Lane Elementary School.

The school system still has three or four elementary school vacancies for next fall and about a dozen vacancies in the secondary schools, said Carroll Sawin, assistant superintendent for personnel.

Prepared Boy Scout foils bear

Jackson, Wyo. (UPI) — A Nebraska Boy Scout, confronted by a bear Tuesday in Grand Teton National Park, played dead and received only a puncture wound from the animal, park officials said.

The incident marked the first human injury sustained this season from a bear in the park.

Johnathan Gould was hiking in a park canyon about eight miles north of Jenny Lake with a companion, Larry Johnson, when they spotted the bear. The Omaha Boy Scouts dropped their packs and fell to the ground to play dead, according to Joseph Shellenberger, park information officer.

The bear inspected a pack and then "sniffed around Gould's leg and put a single puncture wound about a quarter of an inch deep," Shellenberger said. The boy was later treated for the minor wound, he said.

Shellenberger said the incident could have been caused by a bear suspected of tearing though packs left by rock climbers in the Garnet Canyon area of the park. That canyon has been closed for more than a week.

Malone plan opposed

A Malone-area resident Tuesday night launched a petition drive seeking to halt plans which he says will turn the area into a neighborhood of multiple-unit dwellings.

Tony Esquival, 2330 R. St., says federal urban development funds earmarked for the Malone area should be used to help homeowners repair dilapidated housing.

Esquival said all six alternative plans submitted by consultants call for construction of townhouses and other multiple-unit dwellings in the area bound by 27th St., Rock Island Railroad tracks on the west, O Street and Missouri Pacific tracks on the north.

An Urban Development Department survey shows that 30% of the residences in the area are owner-occupied, he said. Of those, he said, the survey determined that 92% could be adequately rehabilitated with improvements costing $4,000 or less.

Judging from experience, he said, homeowners are likely to get "peanuts" in return for their property and will have few alternative places to relocate.

Esquival said the petition will be presented to city officials, including Mayor Helen Boosalis. But he said federal Housing and Urban Development officials also would have to be swayed if plans are to be changed.

Easing of retirement plan urged

About a half-dozen persons Tuesday night, spoke for liberalization of the county employes retirement plan, but County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton said the county is fiscally incapable of meeting all the requests.

In a public hearing on proposed changes in the retirement plan, spokesmen urged that the minimum retirement age be lowered or eliminated, Hamilton said.

Under proposed changes, anyone who is 55 years old and has participated in the retirement plan from time of eligibility and for 20 consecutive years may retire and draw from the fund.

Also urged was an easing of the requirement that, in order to collect county contributions to the fund, the individual must have participated in the plan for 20 years.

Hamilton said "some good questions" were raised and that the retirement plan would be placed on the board's agenda.

Bike rider hurt in crash

A 12-year-old Lincoln boy suffered an apparent concussion in a car-bike accident on 9th St. between Hill and Van Dorn.

Carl J. Burgeson, son of Mr. & Mrs. Orville C. Burgeson of 2735 S. 9th St., was in fair condition at Lincoln General Hospital with head injuries.

Police said a motorist was passing Carl, who was riding his bike along 9th St., at a low speed. The driver told police she felt a slight bump when she passed the bicycle, and looked back to find Carl and his bike down in the street.

No citations were given.

Motorcyclist's condition fair

An 18-year-old motorcyclist was in fair condition Tuesday night at Lincoln General Hospital after his motorcycle collided with a car on 40th Street.

James S. Hammond, 4211 Spruce, suffered head and foot injuries when his cycle collided with a car turning left on 40th between Lake St. and Normal Blvd., police said.

The driver of the car, Ben H. Myers, 67, of 4030 C St., was ticketed for failure to yield the right of way, police said.

Planned budget cuts draw winces

By Joe Hudson
Star Staff Writer

Pre-trial diversion Director Eric McMasters explained Tuesday night how $30,000 to $40,000 might best be trimmed from his program's budget.

As he explained, some members of the program's steering committee winced at the prospect of the budget cut, requested Monday by the Lancaster County Board.

County Atty. Ron Lahners said he'd "rather not be associated with a program that cannot perform its function," hinting that the cut may cripple the program.

The pre-trial diversion program is designed to reduce court and jail costs by rehabilitating first-time offenders outside normal judicial channels. Another aim is to reduce the likelihood of first-timers returning to crime.

"I wouldn't try to run my office with just three lawyers," Lahners said. "If we cut too much . . . we may as well revert to the former system."

Under McMasters' plan, a now-vacant counseling position would be eliminated, and a person hired to evaluate the impact of the program would finish his work in December — about six months earlier than originally planned.

Cuts in training and travel accounts would amount to savings of less than $10,000, McMasters said.

If necessary, the program's supervisor of counselors would be demoted to a lower-paid counselor, and McMasters himself would take a lower position and salary.

Program officials had requested a $206,281 budget for fiscal 1977-78, but the County Board requested the cuts be made and that the program "still survive."

"You've got to have qualified people to run the program," Lahners said. "Without that, you've got a hodgepodge."

Steering committee members said the benefits of the program aren't appreciated. For instance, they said, it is nearly impossible to calculate the savings to society of diverting an individual from a life of crime.

And, it was noted, the program suffers from an image problem; many persons don't like the idea of a criminal getting off "scot-free" without a jail sentence.

"If they'd rather spend more on jails and courts," Lahners said, "then that is the will of the policy-makers."

Tornado misses Bayard but damages two farms

United Press International

A tornado that was on the ground for about 30 minutes returned to the sky just before reaching the town of Bayard, but caused "extensive damage" to two farms in its path, the State Patrol said Tuesday.

There were no reports of injuries late Tuesday night, but the patrol and the Morrill County sheriff were checking on farms in the area.

The National Weather Service said the tornado could be observed from Alliance, about 26 miles from Bayard.

"The tornado kicked back up several times and we really couldn't tell where it was going. It was on the ground about a half hour," a weather service employe said.

"We have reports of baseball-size hail that may have caused some crop damage. There were also reports of wind damage in Scottsbluff and Gering, but no estimates are available yet," he said.

Winds up to 55 miles per hour were recorded at the Scottsbluff airport.

There were several confirmed reports of tornadoes and funnel clouds southeast of Scottsbluff, and a twister between Minatare and Melbeta "stayed on the ground a while," the weather service said.

Walnut-size hail was reported around Lake Alice near Scottsbluff.

The weather service said thunderstorms in the Panhandle would creep eastward across Nebraska during the night, expected in the central and east parts of the state Wednesday.

Scottsbluff nixes park, fire station

Defeated by a 1,652-758 unofficial margin was a $650,000 bond issue to finance construction of a new fire station. A $900,000 bond issue for the same purpose lost by 38 votes last November.

The city said its fire, police and building and zoning departments have outgrown their present buildings.

Voters turned down the wilderness park proposal by an 1,858-516 margin.

The city currently has a Housing and Urban Development grant for $76,000 to buy part of the 250-acre park site. Voter approval was sought to purchase the entire area eventually.

Uranium drilling up

Grand Junction, Colo. (AP) — Uranium exploration worldwide increased 37% during 1976, according to a government survey, and companies in the field expect to increase drillings by about 41% this year.

Train mishap hospitalizes transient, 43

A 43-year-old transient was listed in serious condition Tuesday night after catching his foot in the coupling mechanism of a railroad car east of Waverly.

James Day was spotted by the engineer of a passing train at about 7:15 p.m. on tracks near 162nd St. and Highway 6, sheriff's deputies said.

Day was lying on a flatbed car, his foot crushed in the coupling mechanism, deputies said.

It was now known how long Day had been caught there before being rescued. He was taken to St. Elizabeth Health Center.

Steel production falls

New York (AP) — Steel production fell to 2,674,000 net tons in the week ended June 11, a decrease of 2.1% from the preceding week's 2,732,000 net tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported.

Pre-trial diversion Director Eric McMasters explained Tuesday night how $30,000 to $40,000 might best be trimmed from his program's budget.

As he explained, some members of the program's steering committee winced at the prospect of the budget cut, requested Monday by the Lancaster County Board.

County Atty. Ron Lahners said he'd "rather not be associated with a program that cannot perform its function," hinting that the cut may cripple the program.

The pre-trial diversion program is designed to reduce court and jail costs by rehabilitating first-time offenders outside normal judicial channels. Another aim is to reduce the likelihood of first-timers returning to crime.

"I wouldn't try to run my office with just three lawyers," Lahners said. "If we cut too much . . . we may as well revert to the former system."

Under McMasters' plan, a now-vacant counseling position would be eliminated, and a person hired to evaluate the impact of the program would finish his work in December — about six months earlier than originally planned.

Cuts in training and travel accounts would amount to savings of less than $10,000, McMasters said.

If necessary, the program's supervisor of counselors would be demoted to a lower-paid counselor, and McMasters himself would take a lower position and salary.

Program officials had requested a $206,231 budget for fiscal 1977-78, but the County Board requested the cuts be made and that the program "still survive."

"You've got to have qualified people to run the program," Lahners said. "Without that, you've got a hodgepodge."

Steering committee members said the benefits of the program aren't appreciated. For instance, they said, it is nearly impossible to calculate the savings to society of diverting an individual from a life of crime.

And, it was noted, the program suffers from an image problem; many persons don't like the idea of a criminal getting off "scot-free" without a jail sentence.

"If they'd rather spend more on jails and courts," Lahners said, "then that is the will of the policy-makers."

Tornado misses Bayard but damages two farms

United Press International

A tornado that was on the ground for about 30 minutes returned to the sky just before reaching the town of Bayard, but caused "extensive damage" to two farms in its path, the State Patrol said Tuesday.

There were no reports of injuries late Tuesday night, but the patrol and the Morrill County sheriff were checking on farms in the area.

The National Weather Service said the tornado could be observed from Alliance, about 26 miles from Bayard.

"The tornado kicked back up several times and we really couldn't tell where it was going. It was on the ground about a half hour," a weather service employe said.

"We have reports of baseball-size hail that may have caused some crop damage. There were also reports of wind damage in Scottsbluff and Gering, but no estimates are available yet," he said.

Winds up to 55 miles per hour were recorded at the Scottsbluff airport.

There were several confirmed reports of tornadoes and funnel clouds southeast of Scottsbluff, and a twister between Minatare and Melbeta "stayed on the ground a while," the weather service said.

Walnut-size hail was reported around Lake Alice near Scottsbluff.

The weather service said thunderstorms in the Panhandle would creep eastward across Nebraska during the night, expected in the central and east parts of the state Wednesday.

Scottsbluff nixes park, fire station

Defeated by a 1,652-758 unofficial margin was a $650,000 bond issue to finance construction of a new fire station. A $900,000 bond issue for the same purpose lost by 38 votes last November.

The city said its fire, police and building and zoning departments have outgrown their present buildings.

Voters turned down the wilderness park proposal by an 1,858-516 margin.

The city currently has a Housing and Urban Development grant for $76,000 to buy part of the 250-acre park site. Voter approval was sought to purchase the entire area eventually.

Uranium drilling up

Grand Junction, Colo. (AP) — Uranium exploration worldwide increased 37% during 1976, according to a government survey, and companies in the field expect to increase drillings by about 41% this year.

Steel production falls

New York (AP) — Steel production fell to 2,674,000 net tons in the week ended June 11, a decrease of 2.1% from the preceding week's 2,732,000 net tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported.

Train mishap hospitalizes transient, 43

A 43-year-old transient was listed in serious condition Tuesday night after catching his foot in the coupling mechanism of a railroad car east of Waverly.

James Day was spotted by the engineer of a passing train at about 7:15 p.m. on tracks near 162nd St. and Highway 6, sheriff's deputies said.

Day was lying on a flatbed car, his foot crushed in the coupling mechanism, deputies said.

It was now known how long Day had been caught there before being rescued. He was taken to St. Elizabeth Health Center.

Iowan to plead guilty of theft

Omaha (UPI) — An Oakland, Iowa, resident told U.S. Magistrate Richard C. Peck Tuesday that he planned to plead guilty to being involved in a heavy equipment theft ring covering at least four states.

Assistant U.S. Attny. Thomas Thalken said Ray Wagner, 32, was indicted with 15 others by a federal grand jury in Brownsville, Tex., June 7 in the interstate transportation of stolen heavy duty equipment, including backhoes and tractors, and disposing of them.

Thalken said the alleged operation covered Texas, Kansas, Iowa and Arkansas.

Thalken said Wagner voluntarily surrendered in Omaha Thursday and was freed on a $10,000 signature bond pending his retaining an attorney.

Wagner told Peck Tuesday he planned to plead guilty and Peck granted a transfer of his case from Texas to Omaha for sentencing.

Wagner was named in nine of 29 counts in the indictment including one of conspiracy and two each of interstate transportation and disposal of stolen equipment, specifically two tractors and two backhoes.

Thalken said he planned to confer with the U.S. attorney's office in Brownsville about a plea bargaining arrangement for Wagner. He said Wagner was the only one from the Nebraska-Iowa Region indicted.

Wagner, who told Peck he was employed in Council Bluffs as a welder-boilermaker, remained free on bond.

Thalken said that at least 14 pieces of equipment were involved in the theft scheme which allegedly occurred from March til the time of the indictment.

Wagner faces a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine on each charge.

No new trial for North Platte in city tax case

North Platte (AP) — Lincoln County District Court Judge Keith Windrum Monday overruled a motion by the City of North Platte for a new trial in a city sales tax case.

The city had requested the new trial after Windrum ruled last week that the city must count signatures on petitions opposing the tax, and must have an election if the number of signatures were sufficient.

City Atty. Richard Satterfield said Windrum's decision will be appealed to the State Supreme Court within 30 days.

Health department's budget is left short

Grand Island (UPI) — Grand Island and Hall County Tuesday remained at odds over a budget for the operation of the city-county health department.

The Hall County Board, which shares the cost of the department's operation with the city, Tuesday voted to stick by its original budget proposal of just over $127,000 for the department's operation during the 1977-78 fiscal year.

The county's share of the funding would be $63,500.

However, the city council voted Monday night to pay a local share of $62,000, and neither side appeared willing to change its budget proposal.

Ed Edwards, health department director, said the department needs at least $127,000 to operate, or he will have to cut several needed projects.

He said he has made cuts in several areas to modify the $138,000 budget he proposed earlier.

In taking action Tuesday, county board finance committee chairman Bernie Crick said, "If the city wants to break the contract with the county for health services, that's okay."

Board chairman Ralph Herndon said, however, the county could not afford to finance the department alone.

In approving its share of the budget Monday night, the city council said it wants to stay within a 9.7% budget increase range for all city spending projects.

The county's proposal would increase the department's budget over last year about 12%.

Planner blows cork over rejection of site

Grand Island (UPI) — The city council Monday night rejected the Hall County Regional Planning Commission's recommendation for a power plant site. A commission member Tuesday called the council a "bunch of jugheads who don't want to listen."

John Webster, of Wood River, said he would never again vote on an issue involving Grand Island while on the 12-member planning commission. He noted the planning commission had rejected the council-approved site south of Grand Island between old and new U.S. 281 and recommended the council select an alternate site.

"The planning commission was provided for by the state Legislature by law for recommendations to the city council who has peanut butter in its ears," Webster said.

"And I'll guarantee you that I will not vote on any recommendation involving the City of Grand Island that goes up before the city council because I'm not going up there to make a fool of myself for a bunch of jugheads who don't want to listen."

Almost 200 residents packed the Monday night hearing, the largest crowd in recent memory to attend a council meeting. The council approved the site 4 to 3 following three hours of testimony.

Health department's budget is left short

Grand Island (UPI) — Grand Island and Hall County Tuesday remained at odds over a budget for the operation of the city-county health department.

The Hall County Board, which shares the cost of the department's operation with the city, Tuesday voted to stick by its original budget proposal of just over $127,000 for the department's operation during the 1977-78 fiscal year.

The county's share of the funding would be $53,500.

However, the city council voted Monday night to pay a local share of $62,000, and neither side appeared willing to change its budget proposal.

Ed Edwards, health department director, said the department needs at least $127,000 to operate, or he will have to cut several needed projects.

He said he has made cuts in several areas to modify the $138,000 budget he proposed earlier.

In taking action Tuesday, county board finance committee chairman Bernie Crick said, "If the city wants to break the contract with the county for health services, that's okay."

Board chairman Ralph Herndon said, however, the county could not afford to finance the department alone.

In approving its share of the budget Monday night, the city council said it wants to stay within a 9.7% budget increase range for all city spending projects.

The county's proposal would increase the department's budget over last year about 12%.

Planner blows cork over rejection of site

Grand Island (UPI) — The city council Monday night rejected the Hall County Regional Planning Commission's recommendation for a power plant site. A commission member Tuesday called the council a "bunch of jugheads who don't want to listen."

John Webster, of Wood River, said he would never again vote on an issue involving Grand Island while on the 12-member planning commission. He noted the planning commission had rejected the council-approved site south of Grand Island between old and new U.S. 281 and recommended the council select an alternate site.

"The planning commission was provided for by the state Legislature by law for recommendations to the city council who has peanut butter in its ears," Webster said.

"And I'll guarantee you that I will not vote on any recommendation involving the City of Grand Island that goes up before the city council because I'm not going up there to make a fool of myself for a bunch of jugheads who don't want to listen."

Almost 200 residents packed the Monday night hearing, the largest crowd in recent memory to attend a council meeting. The council approved the site 4 to 3 following three hours of testimony.

BY
Firestone

1. THE OWNER:
is moving out of town. This your chance to get quick possession on this four-year-old, Firestone custom-built, 3 bedroom ranch. Sliding glass doors to a patio and large fenced-in back yard. Carpet, custom draperies, and wallpaper in beautiful earth-tones. This one is a "must-see"!
2. CHARMING:
3 bedroom brick and frame split level with wood burning brick fireplace in the family room. This three-year-old beauty has a lovely fenced in back yard, double car garage and a corner lot. Adds up to lots of liveability for the price.
3. OWNERS HAVE ADDED:
a 25 X 18 upper level addition to this 2 plus bedroom brick home — suitable for a variety of uses to suit your individual needs. Fenced in back yard on a quiet street. The bedroom in the lower level could be your teenager's delight.
4. ENGLISH TUDOR:
. . . split level. Clinker bricks on the exterior add to the old world charm of this sparkling new Firestone quality constructed home. The master bedroom has a built-in vanity and mirror in the dressing area. So many extras that you must see this one.
5. CUSTOM:
. . . made birch cabinets including a bread board, stained to your exact choice of color, and sealed and lacquered to a glowing patina. Wouldn't you choose this over a factory pre-assembled, pre-stained, pre-fab model? Only one feature of the quality construction which sets a Firestone built home apart from the crowd. If you're thinking about building a new home, don't you owe it to yourself to examine and compare? Four model homes are available for your inspection.

BY
1. THE OWNER:
is moving out of town. This your chance to get quick possession on this four-year-old, Firestone custom-built, 3 bedroom ranch. Sliding glass doors to a patio and large fenced-in back yard. Carpet, custom draperies, and wallpaper in beautiful earth-tones. This one is a "must-see"!
2. CHARMING:
3 bedroom brick and frame split level with wood burning brick fireplace in the family room. This three-year-old beauty has a lovely fenced in back yard, double car garage and a corner lot. Adds up to lots of liveability for the price.
3. OWNERS HAVE ADDED:
a 25 X 18 upper level addition to this 2 plus bedroom brick home — suitable for a variety of uses to suit your individual needs. Fenced in back yard on a quiet street. The bedroom in the lower level could be your teenager's delight.
4. ENGLISH TUDOR:
. . . split level. Clinker bricks on the exterior add to the old world charm of this sparkling new Firestone quality constructed home. The master bedroom has a built-in vanity and mirror in the dressing area. So many extras that you must see this one.
5. CUSTOM:
. . . made birch cabinets including a bread board, stained to your exact choice of color, and sealed and lacquered to a glowing patina. Wouldn't you choose this over a factory pre-assembled, pre-stained, pre-fab model? Only one feature of the quality construction which sets a Firestone built home apart from the crowd. If you're thinking about building a new home, don't you owe it to yourself to examine and compare? Four model homes are available for your inspection.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Wednesday, June 15, 1977

Readers write: "Don't use my last name. I love you sometimes. Other times it is Mars crashing into Neptune and I resent you. But I read you. Do you mind?"—Marilyn, Janesville, Wisconsin. "I enjoy the lead paragraphs of your column and I learn something from them, even if I do not know if there is actually anything to astrology."—Jack Brady, Los Angeles, Calif. "I read your books, listen to your broadcasts, watch you on television and check your column. Man, are you for real?"—McCall Smith Jr.—Lynwood, Wash.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You get second chance, new life, opportunity to crystallize ideas. Travel, relative, short trips, fresh contacts are highlighted. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. You "fall in love." You are revitalized. What had been mystical comes into sharp focus. You "know."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Highlight intuition, teaching procedures, willingness to by-pass orthodox methods. Money picture is bright. What appeared to be a loss could boomerang in your favor—and show a profit. Aquarian figures prominently and so does the number "11."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lunar cycle is such that you gain plaudits, find that opposition lacks punch and that your popularity is greater than suspected. Take initiative. Be a self-starter. Expand horizons. You're going places and now you know it!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Refuse to be kept in the dark. Ask questions, make inquiries. Shove aside secret fears, doubts. Say what you mean—mean what you say. Aquarius, Taurus and Scorpio persons play key roles in scenario. Number "4" could figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your wish "comes true." Romance is in picture—a relationship grows, begins to mean something of value. Lines of communication open—you enjoy travel and you benefit through written word. Gemini, Virgo, Libra persons figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Highlight diplomacy, reunion with loved one—genuine bargain available in art object, antique, home appliance or luxury item. Standing is elevated; you may be doing more entertaining than is your custom. Know it and be ready.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be willing to wager on yourself. Means hold yourself in high esteem. Jealous person who resents you may attempt to dent your confidence. Consider source! Accent on publishing, travel, long-distance communication.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Money is attracted in your direction, you can successfully invest, go into business, bring priorities, necessities into focus. Partner or mate talks about valuables, what is to be retained, what should be discarded. Number "8." Capricorn and Cancer figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Avoid premature starts — you have task to finish and it cannot, should not be shunted aside. Aries, Libra persons are in picture. Accent on legalities, special rights, contractual obligations, request from partner or mate. You may not be getting clear picture where home, property is concerned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Seek "other" sources. Old references may be outdated. Employment, health services require fresh energy — status quo won't suffice. Take independent steps. If this you do, you assure yourself greater personal recognition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take initiative in rising above red tape — steer away from those who are stuck with the "blues," moribund, depressed and lacking in faith. You have chance now to gain and provide inspiration, to "go with" individual or organization geared to future instead of being anchored to past.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Chips, pieces fall into place. You get green light to proceed. What had been a tangle of red tape is removed. Gemini, Sagittarius persons are in picture. Accent on gain from previous endeavors. Views are vindicated. You receive accolade from one you admire.

IF JUNE 15th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are dramatic, attractive, dynamic and you tend to eat too many "sweets." Your voice can be utilized in acting, teaching. Taurus, Libra and Leo persons play significant roles in your life. August could be your most important month of 1977. You are due for wider recognition, more travel, a vindication of views. Important now to illustrate beliefs, to strive for better display and distribution. You remodel or change domestic "aura" this month, June.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Wednesday, June 15, 1977

Readers write: "Don't use my last name. I love you sometimes. Other times it is Mars crashing into Neptune and I resent you. But I read you. Do you mind?"—Marilyn, Janesville, Wisconsin. "I enjoy the lead paragraphs of your column and I learn something from them, even if I do not know if there is actually anything to astrology."—Jack Brady, Los Angeles, Calif. "I read your books, listen to your broadcasts, watch you on television and check your column. Man, are you for real?"—McCall Smith Jr.—Lynwood, Wash.

Croatians surrender

New York (AP) — Three Croatian terrorists shot down a security guard at the Yugoslav Mission to the United Nations Tuesday, then barricaded themselves in a third-floor room for about two hours before surrendering to police.

The gunmen, who had claimed they were ready to die for their cause of Croatian independence from Communist Yugoslavia, surrendered peacefully after negotiations over the telephone with police department hostage experts.

Authority can ban jet

(c) New York Times

New York — A federal appeals court, reversing a lower court, said the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey has the right to ban the Concorde jet from Kennedy Airport so long as the ban is reasonable and nondiscriminatory. And it ordered the lower court to determine if this criteria was met. Concorde backers were disappointed.

Girls hear others' cries

Locust Grove, Okla. (AP) — A 12-year-old girl has told authorities she was awakened by screams at a Girl Scout camp Monday morning but went back to sleep, unaware that three fellow Scouts were being sexually abused and murdered in a tent nearby.

Terry Tennant, of Stillwater, who was in another area of the camp, told police Tuesday that she woke a friend, who looked at her watch. She said it was about 3 a.m. — close to the time authorities believe the girls were killed.

Inmate 'getaway' foiled

Worthington, Minn. (AP) — The winner of a week-long vacation at a northern Minnesota resort, offered by Worthington radio station KWOA, was unable to get away to accept the prize.

Inmate 17284 at the South Dakota Penitentiary in Sioux Falls told KWOA Manager Jim Wychor, "I would like to take the vacation, if you can arrange it."

Wychor couldn't. So, instead, he mailed the prisoner a check for the value of a week's vacation at the resort.

Southern Baptists elect

Kansas City (AP) — Jimmy Allen, pastor of the First Baptist Church of San Antonio, Tex., was elected Tuesday as president of the Southern Baptist Convention, defeating Jerry Vines of Mobile, Ala.

In a video tape sent from the White House, President Carter urged the Southern Baptists to increase their number of missionaries by 50%.

Carter oil tax wins approval

Washington (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee handed President Carter a major victory Tuesday by approving a new oil tax aimed at forcing energy conservation by raising prices.

One effect of the tax would be to raise the price of gasoline by 7 6 cents a gallon by 1981.

The vote for a substitute crude-oil tax similar to the one offered by Carter was 21 to 16, with Republicans and oil-state Democrats opposing it. The panel has yet to consider the President's plan to refund proceeds from that tax to consumers

However, in three votes the committee made clear it does not favor turning over a share of the tax revenue to the oil industry as a production incentive.

The victory was the biggest yet for Carter since the Ways and Means Committee began considering his energy-tax program. He suffered three major defeats in the committee last week.

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, said after the vote that the President was "extremely pleased by what he termed the 'courageous action' taken by the House Ways and Means Committee, action taken in the face of an intense lobbying campaign by the oil industry."

Powell said Carter hoped the committee action "will be maintained in future consideration by the Congress."

Some administration officials have viewed the crude-oil tax as a more important part of the Carter energy program than the standby gasoline tax and rebates for buyers of gas-efficient cars, which were defeated, and the tax on gas-guzzling cars, which was watered down by the committee.

The crude-oil tax would take effect in three stages, starting in 1978. Eventually, the price of oil produced in the United States would be raised to the world price. U.S. production now ranges in price from $5 25 a barrel to $11.28. The world price averages about $13 50

The Carter administration estimates the new tax would save up to 200,000 barrels of oil a day in 1980, rising to double that amount by 1985. Current use is about 17.4 million barrels a day.

Rather than give the tax back to taxpayers, the oil industry advocates turning over a share of the money to producers, in an effort to increase exploration for more oil. The committee defeated three attempts to earmark the money for producers

The key vote was 21 to 16 against a plan by Rep. Joe Waggonner, D-La , that would have provided a federal subsidy of up to $2.5 billion a year for producers.

Earlier in the day, Laurence Woodworth, assistant secretary of the treasury, said Carter considers such proposals "a ripoff of the American consumer and wholly unjustified."

"I can't think of anything from our standpoint that would be worse," Woodworth said.

The 16 votes for the Waggonner subsidy were cast by the 12 Republicans on the panel and four oil-state Democrats.

Carter wants most of the money from the tax, which by 1980 would total $14 billion a year, to be given back to Americans. The first share of the money would go to refund higher prices of home heating oil that would result from the tax. Most of the remainder would be returned across-the-board as credits against federal income taxes.

This would mean a cut in income taxes of $45 to $50 per person, or up to $200 a year for a four-member family. The "rebates" would go equally to every person, regardless of whether or not he conserved energy.

Oil industry supporters have several other ideas on how the money should be used. One of them, drawn up by congressional technicians, would amount to a subsidy of about $2.5 billion a year for oil producers The idea would be to let producers keep more of their money so it would be "plowed back" into the search for more oil.

Woodworth said Carter is "unilaterally opposed to any plowback (credit) and feels it is totally uncalled for and unjustified."

Woodworth was criticized by a committee member, Rep. Bill Archer, R-Tex., for using "inflammatory political rhetoric." Archer said, "All we're talking about is trying to raise additional capital" for the oil industry.

Woodworth said it is essential that money collected by the crude oil tax go back to consumers. "If it is not refunded, consumers' income will be less and that will have serious economic effects," he said.

As envisioned by Carter, the new crude oil tax would be paid by refiners when oil is purchased from producers. The refiners would be expected to pass along the higher cost, and eventually it would mean higher prices for fuel, plastics and many other consumer products.

Under the alternative considered by the committee, the oil producer — who actually pumps oil out of the ground — would get the big tax break while not having to pay any of the new tax.

"That 'refundable plowback' is just a euphemism for giving them something they don't pay," said Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla.

As outlined by the committee staff, Oil Producer X could get a check from the federal government for up to 20 per cent of the tax the refiner would pay on X's oil if certain conditions were met. The main condition would require the producer to invest more than 40 per cent of his oil and gas income in the search for more oil.

Eleven months ago, Mallin weighed 490 pounds. Today, after racing more than 5,000 miles on an exercise bike against the snails in his fish tank, he's down to 195.

"The magic is you've got to be motivated. And even then the going isn't easy," said Mallin, who combined hard work on the bike with a diet restricted to 400 calories a day.

He's mighty proud of the feat, calling the huge loss in weight "the outstanding achievement of my life."

The plastic surgeon said a friend's poor health led him to the conclusion, "By George, I'm mortal, too. I'm going to die."

Deciding that being 37 years old "was better than the alternative," he went to an internist and said: "Here I am. Do me."

A full range of tests showed high blood pressure was the only harmful consequence of his obesity thus far. He took medication to bring his blood pressure down, but took no other drugs during the weight reduction program.

Ordinarily, doctors advise against rapid weight loss. But in Mallin's case, the weight was a bigger risk.

Now that it's over, Mallin said, "I think I'm normal." He trimmed his waist from 64 inches to 34 and his jacket size from 60 to 42.

To keep from going back up he has had reorient his life. "Doing it is hard," he conceded, though there are benefits:

—His daughters no longer are embarrassed when he comes to pick them up at school.

—He comes home from work ready to go, instead of ready to sleep.

—He can easily find chairs big enough to sit in.

—He likes himself.

Mallin's story begins in childhood, as a member of the "clean plate club." He went from being "chunky to stocky to stout." By adulthood he weighed 230 pounds.

He gained an additional 260 pounds after his family moved to Alaska and he rose from a "struggling, starving resident" to success.

Splurging on big meals and eating out was "a way to show success." And some thought fat people were "jolly." But, said Mallin, "Generally, fat people are sad." He said he hopes his children learned from his anguish and will be "spared . . . the sadness."

Looking back, he said, "I often wonder how I did it," believing at the same time the adage that "under every fat man is a thin man trying to break out."

Drop in school taxes expected

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln taxpayers may be paying less in real estate taxes next year to support the public school system, according to budget estimates.

The 1977-78 mill levy for Lincoln Public Schools may drop by one mill over this year's 57 54 levy, according to Schools Supt John Prasch.

A more than 6% expected increase in property valuation and a possible $1 3 million jump in state aid above the current $5.4 million will help offset budget increases, according to Robert Den Hartog, associate superintendent for business

Much of the school's budget increases are tied up in the 8 6% average raise in teacher's salaries The board is expected to vote on a similar 8.6% increase for the nonteaching staff and administration during a June 28 meeting.

The largest single portion of the more than $40 million budget is instructional salaries, anticipated at $26.5 million, up more than $2 million from this year. Instructional salaries go to teachers, principals and counselors

The wage increase would give beginning principals an $820 annual increase, and would raise nonteaching salaries 21 to 40 cents an hour.

Surrounded by large loose-leaf folders, piles of paper covered with typed figures and Styrofoam coffee cups, the Lincoln Board of Education members spent several hours Tuesday morning listening to the budget information presented by Prasch and Den Hartog

There were few questions and no decisions. Budget decisions, including any pay raises for the top administrators, will be made at a June 28 meeting

The tentative budget items presented include the following:

— A $200,000 increase in funds for developmental learning programs, including money for 11 additional staff members. State special education funds will reimburse portions of these programs.

— A more than $100,000 increase in staff development.

— Supplies and utility costs will rise to $1.4 million from $1.1 million

— A $51,000 increase primarily to fund a change in the system's achievement testing program

New board member Milan Wall questioned the budget review method where board members get little review on the effectiveness of money spent on past programs.

The suggested increase in staff development was questioned by Lou Roper, who said that speaking out against staff development "is like talking against motherhood. But we have to use some reason. There is a limit to how much time teachers and principals can be out of their buildings."

A public hearing on the school's budget is tentatively set for July 11.

How would Whelan differ from Exon as governor?

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

The same, but different.

Jerry Whelan shares basic political views with Gov. J. James Exon, but the lieutenant governor would probably be a different kind of chief executive in terms of style, manner and operational technique. Maybe even in more fundamental matters of emphasis.

You know Gerald Whelan, 52, now serving his third year as lieutenant governor, is going to run for governor next year, attempting to succeed Exon after he completes his constitutionally limited two consecutive terms in the office.

But Whelan is not ready to talk in those absolute terms yet, preferring to delay any official announcement until a later date, probably sometime this winter. So the conversation has to turn rather iffy.

If he were to seek the office and win it, how would he differ from Exon? Or would he?

"I think we both look at the world pretty much alike," Whelan begins. "On the really basic issues, like social welfare and fiscal responsibility, we're not very much different.

"But we are different human beings. We do things differently. But to say that there could be some changes is not to imply any criticism of Jim Exon."

Besides, political conditions have changed — in no small part because of Exon himself And the experience and background of the two men provide differing opportunities.

For instance, Whelan believes his association with the Legislature, as its presiding officer for three regular sessions (with a fourth coming up in January), could mean a different relationship with the legislative branch of state government.

Relations between Exon and the Unicameral have often bordered on political warfare.

A different kind of relationship might open up new kinds of options for a governor, Whelan said.

Exon has "worked hard and successfully to keep the (state's) spending base within bounds," the lieutenant governor noted.

"And I think we will be forever grateful to Jim Exon because in times of relative plenty, when the temptation to spend was very great, he kept trying to keep the base down so our future opportunities would not be limited.

"Jim Exon knew there would be leaner days coming and he assumed the role of fiscal watchdog. I think that will be the great Exon legacy."

The result of it, Whelan says, is that Nebraska "still has opportunities for progress ahead of us" while other states have soared to such a high spending base that they can no longer react to changing needs or new possibilities. They are, he suggests, "out of gas."

Nebraska has moved ahead prudently "doing those things which need to be done with a very manageable tax rate It's not a pleasant tax rate, but it's not an oppressive one"

Finally, this year, Whelan said, "The Exon message" seems to have "gotten through" to the Legislature.

With the exception of a $20 million increase in state school aid, the 1977 Unicameral kept state spending within the general boundaries of the governor's budget, he noted

"Maybe now the executive branch can reenter the field of affirmative legislation. Maybe now new options of shifting emphasis will be with us," Whelan said.

If such options are indeed open to the next governor, Whelan said, it will only be because Exon cleared the way with "prudent management" of state government's resources, often over the Legislature's objections.

But don't misunderstand the lieutenant governor If he were the next governor, he says, he too would be a fiscal conservative.

As a matter of fact, he will argue, any governor would violate his oath of office if he were not — because the state constitution prohibits state indebtedness

Philosophically, he is a Jeffersonian, Whelan says.

"I think government is a tool created by the people, to be used by them to solve problems they decide should be solved by concerted action rather than individual action."

There are people in society who "need some help" from government, often because of circumstances beyond their control, Whelan said.

As an example, the elderly need and deserve some assistance, he said.

They have been hurt by "the ravages of inflation" at a time when they can no longer earn, and they should be helped to "live in some dignity," the lieutenant governor said

If (that word again) he were to become governor, he would also like to do something about what he now considers "possibly our No. 1 social problem" That's alcohol abuse.

"We've got to try to change the attitudes of the young on that one, but that's not an issue I want tied up in any political campaign."

(Tomorrow: What's a lieutenant governor?)

Whelan shares basic views.

Los Angeles Times correspondent Robert C. Toth and wife watch May Day parade.

U.S. protests KGB's grilling of reporter

Moscow (AP) — Soviet security police grilled Los Angeles Times correspondent Robert C Toth for more than four hours Tuesday after he was accused of gathering secret information and barred from leaving the country.

Toth was allowed to leave Moscow's Lefortovo prison, where the interrogation took place, but he said the KGB major who questioned him told him to return for more interrogation Wednesday. He was not told the charges against him.

In a note to the U S Embassy, the Soviet foreign ministry said the 48-year-old journalist "has been engaged in . . . the collection of secret information of a political and military character"

While an investigation continues, "his departure from Moscow . . is not desired," the note said

Toth had planned to leave Moscow with his wife and three children Friday, ending a three-year tour here He said that during the interrogation he was given no indication whether his scheduled departure would be delayed

In Washington, the White House said President Carter was "quite concerned" about the Toth case

The White House made public portions of a formal protest lodged with Soviet officials that complained of "a persistent effort by Soviet authorities to harass and intimidate American correspondents in the exercise of their profession."

White House press secretary Jody Powell's quoting of the protest note marked a departure from normal diplomatic practice, which is to keep such communications secret.

The note said that the detention of Toth "cannot be considered in the best interests of normal U S -U.S.S R. relations."

It said the action was "inconsistent with commitments undertaken by the Soviet government" in the Helsinki accord, "which calls for the participating states to increase the opportunity for journalists to communicate directly with their sources and reaffirms the correct, legitimate pursuit of their professional activity as journalists"

Powell, when asked about possible retaliation against Soviet correspondents in Washington, replied, "We certainly do not intend to violate people's rights to legitimately pursue the news."

Powell said any additional steps the U S. government might take, beyond protests delivered in Moscow and in Washington, would "depend upon events."

The State Department called the Soviet treatment of Toth "unwarranted interference in the legitimate work of the journalist.

"Based on our knowledge of the facts we see nothing in Toth's activities that could be considered incompatible with his legitimate journalistic status and activities"

The chairman of the Republican party, Bill Brock, accused the Soviet Union of "a chilling revival of the Cold War." In a telegram to Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, Brock said Toth should be permitted to leave the U S S R immediately

Toth said his interrogation had to do entirely with an incident last Saturday when he was seized on the street by five KGB security policemen just after receiving a document from a Soviet scientist about parapsychology, the study of mental telepathy and extrasensory perception.

He was also interrogated for three hours Saturday

Toth said he had been introduced to the scientist, Valery G Petyukhov, six months ago, and that Petyukhov telephoned him Saturday to offer his article.

Robert Gibson, foreign editor of the Times, said in Los Angeles that the newspaper was "shocked and dismayed" by the decision not to allow Toth to leave the Soviet Union "and to subject him to accusations and interrogation in connection with his legitimate journalistic activities"

Newlyweds pedaling 2,500 miles to bliss

Denver (UPI) — Bicycle mechanic Gary Harty introduced his fiance to bike riding, and she likes it so much they've decided to spend their honeymoon trip by pedaling 2,500 miles

The Hartys were married during the weekend and left Monday on a three-month honeymoon to Nova Scotia They said they hoped to average 50 miles a day

Harty, 27, said friends and family members were about evenly divided between "extremely excited and a lot of disbelief about the trip.

"But we think it will be a good way to see the country up close — a chance to meet people on a personal basis," he said

The newlyweds got the idea for the trip after reading about the ' Bikecentennial Trail," a 4,250-mile transcontinental bicycle route from Oregon to Virginia

Harty and his wife, the former Judy Newman, an occupational therapist at the Robert G Weiland School for the Mentally Retarded, hope to complete the trip in three months.

They met on a backpacking trip two years ago in Beaver Meadows, below Mt Evans He introduced her to cycling ' and she really enjoyed it"

Harty said major problems along the way probably will be rain 'and getting up some of the hills" He also said they are both "scared of snakes" and that Judy is "deathly afraid of lightning"

Georgia abandons goober giveaway

Atlanta (AP) — A peanut farmer from Georgia may be in the White House, but his home state can't afford to give away any more free goobers.

The Georgia Peanut Commission, which has been providing little packets of peanuts free to tourists, says it can't afford to pick up the $40,000-a-year tab and the state says it has no funds for the project.

Peanuts still will be given free to tourists at the new welcome station in President Carter's home town of Plains, but not at the stations on highways leading into Georgia, the commission said

City sells her $30,000 home for $173.70

Los Angeles (AP) — When Willia V Moore of Watts didn't pay a streetlight assessment, the city in effect sold her $30,000 home for $173 70 and now she faces eviction.

Her plight is stirring a court test of a law which one legal aid lawyer calls "a boondoggle for speculators"

The 66-year-old state law was intended to make street improvement easier But in the past year alone, the Legal Aid Foundation says, it has cost 143 Los Angeles County residents their homes

"It's unbelievable that all this is happening," said Mrs Moore, a 53 year-old hospital clerk who, according to attorney Ron Javor, bought the duplex for $30,000 in 1955 and paid it off in 1962

"It's like waking up after a dream and all the parts don't fit I'm praying for my home every day," she said

Statewide, according to Legal Aid lawyer Stan DiOrio, "very easily we could be talking about several hundred (home losses) a year"

The problem, says DiOrio, is that the law "does not provide adequate and clear notice for homeowners and taxpayers, (it) provides a boondoggle for speculators"

The Legal Aid Society is helping Mrs Moore sue the city in county Superior Court on grounds that the Improvement Act of 1911 allows property sales far below real value without enough notice to owners

The society also says there isn't enough recourse, such as hearings

Four of Mrs Moore's six children and two grandchildren live with her DiOrio said she has dutifully paid property taxes of about $250 a year — even since the house was taken away

The trouble began when the city put lights on her street in 1971 and assessed the residents Mrs Moore said she saw no need for the lights and ignored her bill — originally $121 60

She says she was told by Councilman John Gibson she would have 10 years to pay, but Gibson's office says it warned her she had to pay

She ignored foreclosure notices, and the assessment bill was sold in 1974 for $173 70 — the assessment plus such costs as interest — and was later resold to Pauline Rust for $500 Mrs Moore said she was unaware of either sale until an eviction notice arrived in January

She has refused to move, and DiOrio says the current owner has now offered to sell the home back to Mrs Moore for $6,000 rather than market value "I guess it was her way of being nice," he said

Under the law, property owners have 30 days to pay an assessment or to make arrangements to pay it in installments over as much as 10 years If they don't, the city treasurer s office can sell the unpaid bill to anyone interested and must notify the home owner within 30 days of the sale Full title to the property reverts to the purchaser of the bill if the original owner doesn't buy it back within one to four years — at the price of the assessment plus interest

Associated Press

Mrs. Moore holding pet dog and check for $173.

Critics of the law say it encourages speculation based on the hope that an unsuspecting homeowner will neglect to buy back the assessment bill and unwittingly lose property worth far more

Under the law, the original owner must tell the buyer within six months that he intends to buy back the bill Javor also says a person without legal training would not easily understand the legal notices

He met Monday with city officials and said they agreed the language should be clearer But he said the city treasurer would not agree to a moratorium on similar sales until new regulations can be written

Two months ago, Mrs Moore mailed a $173 check to the city treasurer in a belated effort to put things right, but he mailed it back

A Superior Court hearing has been scheduled next Monday

Six-month extension approved by subcommittee

Washington (AP) — A House panel has voted to give 20 states threatened with loss of $142 million in Medicaid payments a six-month extension to comply with federal requirements on reviewing nursing homes that house Medicaid clients

The extension, until Jan 1, 1978, was approved Monday by the House Commerce Committee's health and environment subcommittee

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A Califano Jr said last week that the law would force him to withhold payments due the states July 1 But he called on Congress to change the law to set new guidelines and to permit the states to get the aid

Last man who fled with Ray recaptured

Brushy Mountain, Tenn (AP) — The most extensive manhunt in Tennessee history ended in triumph Tuesday when the same dog handler who ran down James Earl Ray caught the last of six inmates who fled Brushy Mountain Penitentiary with Ray five days before

Douglas Shelton 32, was recaptured about 9 a m by guard Sammy Joe Chapman Shelton, Ray and and Ray's cellmate, Earl Hill Jr , are believed by prison officials to have planned the breakout

But Warden Stonney Lane said in connection with that theory "I don t think we ll ever know for sure They are the only ones who really know and they aren't saying anything '

A lawyer for Ray, the confessed slayer of Martin Luther King Jr , said his client denied participation in the planning The lawyer also said he didn't think Ray had outside help

Lane said a small map of the immediate area cut out of a state highway map and $290 were found on Ray after his capture Monday

In Ray's left front pocket, officers found a wad of $80 in a rubber band, Lane said The remainder was located during a strip search before a physical examination in the prison infirmary

The warden said inmates are allowed to have up to $70 in cash but guards routinely find more money in cells than the rule allows

Ray was paid $35 at the first of each month for work in the prison laundry He was also entitled to draw $35 in the middle of each month from a prison account provided each prisoner for income from relatives and prison work Money also changes hands among the inmates for various purposes, including gambling, Lane said

Shelton's capture kept unblemished the maximum security prison's record of no successful escapes Officials said the hunt had been the biggest in state history, involving 175 searchers and costing $175,000 in overtime pay alone

Shelton was found after a van he stole in the Beech Fork area of Anderson County ran off a state highway and over an embankment as guards gave chase

Officials said Larry Phillips, the owner of the van, had just gotten in when he was grabbed from behind and thrown out by Shelton, hiding in the back Shelton was caught about 18 miles down the winding highway from where Ray was captured and about 7 miles northeast of the prison

Pork barrel projects win; President loses

Washington (AP) — The House, ignoring President Carter s wishes, rejected a move Tuesday to slash 16 water projects from the $10 2 billion public works appropriation bill

But the vote against the amendment was 218 to 194 which was a strong showing in defeat for the Carter forces

The House then passed the bill, 356 to 54, and sent it to the Senate

The vote cast doubt on whether the water projects' supporters in the House could muster a two-thirds majority to override a presidential veto on the bill.

The White House has indicated Carter may veto the measure if funds are left intact for projects he considers not worth their economic and environmental costs

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said that despite the loss, Carter was pleased by the vote, which Powell said "indicates substantial sympathy" for attempts to hold down spending

Asked whether the vote showed there was enough support to sustain a veto, Powell said "I think that s obvious

But asked whether Carter would veto the measure, he said, "It s certainly our hope he will not be faced with a situation in which he has to exercise the veto"

Safety defects alleged in Toyota, Chrysler models

Washington (AP) — Investigations of alleged safety defects in Toyota and Chrysler Corp autos were announced Tuesday by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration

The Toyota investigation involves potential electrical fires in 1969-1972 Corona Mark II models with automatic transmissions The problem in the Chrysler cars is engine stalling in the 1975-1977 Dart, Valiant, Aspen and Volare models

The safety administration has received reports of 22 Toyota fires, one involving a death, and it estimates that 100,000 cars may be subject to the problem

According to the agency, the fires may begin when the vehicles are shifted into park, causing a short The fire can quickly spread to the console between the front seats which houses the automatic transmission shift lever

The agency has received 114 owner complaints about the Chrysler engine-stalling problem There have been no reports of injuries, but two accidents are believed related to the trouble

Most owner complaints reported several unsuccessful attempts to have the stalling corrected by dealers The agency estimates more than one million autos might be subject to the investigation

Lincoln water rates: no uproar needed

If Lincoln water rates become another celebrated uproar, the City Council and mayor will have no one to blame but themselves The city has two basic things to remember and if it remembers them, the problems ought to be minimal.

Water rates need to be fair and they need to encourage conservation. Those two objectives ought not to be overly difficult to achieve with something as relatively simple as a municipally owned water system

The mayor and council should listen to the suggestions of the Chamber of Commerce, as that organization has now volunteered But the city should follow those suggestions only to the extent that they serve the ends of fairness and conservation

The chamber appears to be pushing for an old principle in utility affairs — rates closely related to the cost of service There are a number of faults with that system

For one thing, the cost of service can be argued until doomsday without everyone coming to agreement on what it is For another, the principle is not necessarily fair, as it rewards all the big consumers of water and punishes the smaller user That is not a concept with which everyone will agree on philosophical grounds

Also, the cost of service principle does nothing to encourage conservation. If your water rate goes down as you use more of the product, you are not inclined to be careful of your usage.

In setting rates, it would behoove the city to take a look, too, at the matter of public understanding. If the people cannot understand what is happening to them in the area of their water bills, they will again be up in arms over the situation, as they were last summer.

There is no need for radical changes in rates that leave people confused, skeptical and angry. If the city cannot establish rates, with periodic adjustments, that meet expenses in an orderly fashion over the years then it simply is incompetent.

The chamber has suggested an outside consultant to study the rates. This doesn't make us jump for joy but if the city is unable to do its own arithmetic, then such a consultant is what we are likely to get.

But if we do, the city should bear in mind that consultants come, too, with their built-in prejudices and notions of the right and wrong ways of doing things. You can bet your bottom dollar that a consultant who believes in the cost of service principle is going to produce the figures to support that principle.

People are slow starters

While the water rate controversy continues in Lincoln, and as water customers here are getting used to the higher billings of the last two years or so, far westerners are laboring under the burden of severely diminished supplies of water and punitive rates for excessive use

The water problems in the coastal states were brought on by the same general drought conditions affecting much of the American west but residential users in the far western states are being harder hit at present than customers in our area For the most part the victims are behaving admirably in response to the water shortage

Most of the nation is aware by now of many of the horror stories: dry reservoirs, water piped in from afar, lawns burned brown in the searing heat, thousand-dollar water bills presented small businesses, some of which have closed their doors or limited their hospitality to water-using customers, daily water use quotas So many gallons are allotted families by size in some areas, and use beyond that quota is severely penalized If waste continues past a second penalty billing, the authorities come in and turn your water off Life styles have been altered in small ways (and in some cases, ways not so small) Homemakers stack dirty dishes until there is a full washer load Clothing is washed less frequently, as are bodies The kids might skip a bath every other day Teeth are brushed using a cup of water instead of a running faucet Guests are reminded of the water problem and advised to use the Navy shower technique. Swimming pools are drained less often and many are not filled Cars remain caked with the grime of the road. Less meticulous attention is devoted to one s lawn

For many, life remains much the same, except that it is less comfortable and not so squeaky clean The water shortage has ruined or severely hurt others.

Two points can be made from this When conservation is demanded, people come through like champions. Even in affluent Marin County, California, where people are proud and protective of their easy-going, wasteful lifestyles, the water conservation goal is being achieved — and then some.

The second point: you have to hit people on the head to get their attention. In other parts of the west, where rationing is only in the talking stages, efforts are being made to make people aware of the possible need to ration and they are encouraged to conserve voluntarily. But there is generally only a vague awareness of crisis

Ideally, of course, those who still have plenty of water would learn from those who don't before the shortage hits with full impact Perhaps then the crisis would not be so severe in impact, either physically or psychologically.

The same would apply to the energy crisis. We know by example that people can conserve — water or gasoline, it makes no difference — when the need arises and still lead a life much like at present. Why wait? Why not, in effect, close the barn door before the critters escape, rather than after?

"YOU CAN SEE SHE DOESN'T NEED ANY PROTECTION FROM ME, CAN'T YOU?"

Carter reneges

Washington — Thus far, President Carter has made 272 high-ranking political appointments. Of that number, only 35 have been women — or just 13 per cent of those named.

This disappointing record is part of a pattern of Administration indifference to persisting legal, economic and social discrimination against women. During his campaign, the President vowed to fight for equal rights for women. Now that he is in office he is treating the problem with little more than benign neglect.

President Carter supports the Equal Rights Amendment, but White House efforts to push the measure in several state legislatures earlier this year were so clumsy they hurt the cause more than they helped. And he rejected pleas from women's groups that he discuss the subject in a televised fireside chat and that he beef up the one-person White House office currently assigned to the amendment.

The White House is not visibly working for any of the major pieces of legislation in Congress which would especially affect women's interests nor has it proposed any major measures of its own in the area.

President Carter said during the campaign he supported a comprehensive child-care bill to ease the burden on working mothers. He has demonstrated no further interest in it, although Vice President Walter Mondale was an original sponsor of the bill

He has not lobbied for a bill pending in Congress which would expand the scope of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and grant it broader enforcement powers. (He did, however, name the first woman EEOC chairman, after an unbroken string of five black male chairmen)

He has said he will sign a bill to override a Supreme Court ruling that companies need not include pregnancy in employee disability plans, even if they include male-only disabilities. But he also said he will not lobby for it.

Carter opposes the inclusion of abortion in any new national health insurance plan.

Carter has never issued a new directive for the Justice Department's task force on sex discrimination, set up by President Ford to search out inequitable laws governing all U S. programs and policies. His Administration requested only sufficient budget for a staff of seven for the office, although the Justice Department estimates it would take a staff of 28 more than two years to do the massive overhaul of the laws

In summary, President Carter may be sympathetic to women's desire for equal rights but he's apparently not prepared to do a whole heck of a lot about it.

Saturday morning was waking up to distressing news President Carter, said the papers, wanted to rally public opinion. Rallying public opinion on a weekend in June is almost unheard of It made you wonder if the President had a firm grip on the calendar.

September is for starting wars, October is for making ridiculous promises, November is for cutting the budget, December is for rebuilding the Cabinet. January is for refusing to keep the promises you made in October, February is for fund-raising dinners and March — March, not June — is for rallying public opinion.

June is for leaving people alone so they can fish, get married, graduate the children, wax the car, watch baseball and make the seasonal switch to gin and tonic Asking a person to rally his public opinion during the one month allotted to tending to life's necessities is an imposition justifiable only under the gravest circumstances.

And so, on being awakened with the cry, "Rise and rally!" I was inclined to sulk. The truth is that my public opinions have been in pleasantly low supply lately. All through April and May, though constantly exposed to public events, my opinion-formation glands had produced only three or four opinions worth mentioning at the dinner table

I had thought of consulting a doctor, but decided this wasn't necessary since most of the public events about which I was not having opinions were probably without the slightest significance. What then was so vital that the President wanted to rally me to opinionation in June?

The papers detailed the bad news. It was the energy crisis again. I have struggled for the past four years to have a decent opinion about the energy crisis, without success. Over the years I have had every possible opinion about the energy crisis, and liked none of them The truth is that having a commendable opinion about the energy crisis is one of those things I am simply unable to do, like waltzing, playing the violin or understanding differential calculus.

When the President asked Congress a few weeks ago for heavy new laws to cope with the energy crisis, I had a terrible feeling that he would eventually ask me to rally my opinion on the matter. Recently, however, a close study of the Washington news had suggested the ordeal might be escapable.

Congress in its preliminary committee work seemed to be doing a splendid job of eliminating the energy crisis The energy crisis threatened to saddle us with higher gasoline taxes, and one committee had dispelled the threat by refusing to levy these taxes.

The energy crisis had threatened to hold down the profits of our natural gas industry, and a committee had eliminated the threat by freeing gas prices of federal regulation.

The energy crisis had threatened to tax big cars so heavily that only the rich could own a big car, and the committee had reduced the threat by postponing the tax for at least a year.

The situation seemed as harmonious as anything in government ever can be. The President had identified the foremost threat of our age — the energy crisis — and Congress in a few short weeks had made great strides toward eliminating it.

Now, however, President Carter was insulting Congress Instead of eliminating the crisis, he was saying, Congress had sold out to the oil and auto lobbies. This cruel characterization was said to be the signal for public opinion to rally against what Congress had done so far

In principle, one should rally, I suppose. Opinion must be rallied, even when opinion is total befuddlement. Still, one feels unfairly treated by being asked to rally in June. The Congressional process is Byzantine in its complications and early committee actions are often nothing more than the staking out of outrageous bargaining positions to be abandoned in the fall

The President would doubtless like to keep us rallied throughout the summer, but it is a harsh demand. The patience of Congress and its lobbyists is as the patience of the Pentagon. All know how to ride for months, for years if necessary, before storms of rallied public opinion, knowing that they will have their way once the storm is exhausted.

Is it wise for the President to rally us to opinionize so early in the game? And in June, of all seasons? If public opinion spends the summer rallied against the Congress under the power of oil, asphalt, auto and labor, how can the President expect to keep it interested later in the year when he will need it for heavy combat?

The attention span of public opinion these days is roughly five days long. A president rallying it for a 60-day stand is at risk of showing up at Gettysburg with no troops. I am going to wax the gas guzzler and worry later about the energy crisis sending it to the junkyard.

Chicago — A cop is still steaming about something he says he saw during the rioting near Humboldt Park eight days ago.

He and a few other policemen were guarding busted-out stores on Division Street They were standing near their squad cars chatting with crowds of kids about 9 or 10 years old

A television crew came walking up, looking for something interesting to videotape At that moment, though, nothing exciting was happening

That s the worst thing that a TV crew can find They need action movement.

So, the policeman said, somebody in the crew asked if it would be OK for the kids to go in the store, pick up some merchandise, and carry it out

"At first I wasn't sure what they were talking about," the cop said "Then I realized that what they wanted were some shots of looters They wanted the kids to act like they were looting the store

We told them to get the hell out of there But can you imagine something like that? They wanted to fake looting so they'd have something to put on the news show

The people would watch the show and wonder what we were doing while it was going on

The policeman said he didn't recognize any of the people in the TV crew "I know what most of the anchormen look like and I didn't see any of them," he said

When the shift ended and we got back to the station we squawked about it We thought there should be some kind of complaint made to the TV station or to someone I guess nothing was done But it still bothers me that they'd even ask to do something like that It makes me wonder how often they fake things

I doubt if it is done too often although a few instances of outright fakery have been exposed But the restraint of TV has nothing to do with scruples They re just afraid of getting caught and drawing heat from the Federal Communications Commission, which licenses TV stations

The incident does serve to illustrate what the mortality of TV news really is It has little to do with news It amounts to show biz

The actual news presented on the average TV news show would not fill more than a page or two in a comic book, and it wouldn't be much more informative

When they advertise their news shows, the TV stations gush about how their anchormen are outstanding "newsmen." One of the anchormen is constantly agonizing about how he is overwhelmed with the need to be "out on the street," where things are happening He does not explain why he doesn t go out on the streets, since he has this craving to be there. I mean, it is no big deal. Millions of ordinary people get out on the street every day. Yet, he remains in the studio, sitting in front of the camera, while allegedly pining away for the street

The fact is, most of the city's anchormen would not know a news story if it came up and hit them on the ear. Most of them have never been seen covering an actual news event or writing a simple news story.

Their primary talent is being able to speak without stuttering or drooling If they have a full head of hair, a congenial grin, and the ability to read a simple sentence written by someone else, they are on their way to stardom

The average TV reporter isn't much more advanced Once the camera crew has driven him to the story, and the producer has pointed him in the right direction, and he has asked the inevitable first question — "How do you feel about . . . ?" — he begins running out of thoughts

The best measure of TV news is the deep concern given the weather report By dialing WES-1212 in Chicago you can get the same information On most days you can stick your head out the door and get an idea of what the weather will be

But at one station the entire executive structure agonized over who would tap a stick against a weather map and deliver a few inanities They even glued wires to the skins of a sample audience in hopes of determining if a prospective weatherman would arouse the viewers libido

There is one thing to keep in mind while watching a television news show Mary Tyler Moore has gone off the air But Ted Baxter lives

Today's Mail

Consumer 'bomb'

Lincoln, Neb

This is in response to your three editorials in favor of establishing a consumer protection agency.

You say there is no one in Washington to look out for the consumer and no one to fight his battles. What is the existing department of consumer affairs supposed to be doing? What are Nader and his crowd and a whole bunch of other tax exempt "public interest" groups doing? Just ask your friendly congressman. I am sure you will hear that lobbying for the "consumer" is very strong.

You say the proposed new law is aimed at representation in behalf of consumers before regulatory agencies and without it regulatory agencies have no way of hearing the consumers side. Don't these agencies hold public hearings? Are these "public interest" groups prohibited from attending such hearings?

You say regulatory agencies are "stacked" with industry people which we are presumably supposed to regard as some sort of conspiracy. Isn't it possible that by utilizing at least a few industry people that the regulatory agency will thereby have some knowledge of how the industry works and have at least a chance of avoiding harmful blunders?

You ask what it is that leads businessmen to oppose a voice for consumers. The picture that probably comes to the minds of many of your readers is greedy businessmen bulging with illicit profits, cheating the consumer continuously and fighting tooth and nail to keep away the saintly knight on the white horse that wants to come in and save the victims. Isn't it also possible that businessmen do not wish to be regulated by people who seem to range from suspicion and mistrust of the free enterprise system to outright hostility to it?

I don't think anybody has any serious objections to letting consumer advocates present their opinion to any lawmaker or any regulatory agency. I believe what really scares business people is the provision that if the consumer advocates do not get their own way before regulatory agencies, they may then tie the whole thing up in litigation which could be dragged on endlessly with the result that the consumer advocate would have a power almost of life or death over the "enemy". To grant such power to anyone, no matter how good, how wise, how reasonable or how sensible would be a serious mistake.

To give such power to people who at best represent only one segment of "consumers" and who frequently fail to see harmful long term affects of proposals that appear attractive to their precious "consumers" on a short term basis, would be a disaster

I am extremely gratified that a Congress that is regarded as somewhat liberal can have the good sense to let this bomb die Perhaps enough of our lawmakers have finally seen some of the harmful effects of government intervention in the market place and have seen enough of the so called consumer advocates and the opinions they hold to be reluctant to give them the power to have their own way or to tie things up in the courts as long as they care to do so if they don't get their own way. Otherwise, why would congress pass up two sure fire crowd pleasers in one package: Anti business and pro consumerism?

It is too bad the average consumer doesn't realize the power he already has when he "votes" with his dollar. By looking for the best deal for himself he can wipe out Edsels, mom and pop grocery stores, fountain pens and mechanical adding machines. He can bring forth industries such as discount stores and fast food outlets.

If this bill actually does die my faith and confidence in the future of America will take an enormous leap upward.

JACK MAPES

One too many?

Lincoln, Neb.

If Sam Schwartzkopf takes seriously the rumored speculation he should (might?) be considering having another "go" at the mayor's office, he's more to be pitied than censored.

Ring-wise people might speculate that Sam's taken "too many shots to the head" during his "lightweight" contest with Mayor Boosalis, and his subsequent shellacking at the hands of Omaha's ill-fated Big Green Lottery promoters. For Sam's sake, as well as Lincoln's, it's best he stay out of the political ring before he gets to the stage, like many over-the-hill fighters, where he's jumping into a fighting stance and bobbing and weaving, every time he hears a telephone or doorbell ring! Or sniffs an up-coming election.

His head may still be buzzing from those two previous fights (no-contest fiascoes, might be a better description) if he hasn't gotten the message that, it wasn't so much the votes "FOR" that put Mayor Boosalis in office, but the votes "AGAINST" Sam Schwartzkopf that put him down for the "ten-count".

Sam's 3-0 "ring" record (let's see, didn't he also lose out in the primaries for a public service commissioner's seat?) could hardly be considered an exemplary display of judgment or political acumen. Yep, I'm afraid Sam's already had one, if not two fights, too many.

FBC

Justice destroyed

Eagle, Neb.

It's sad that the laws our police were hired to enforce are, many times, not morally enforceable laws. For example, a common law which most are familiar with is the mandatory speed limit and the enforcement practices that go with it. Speed limits are designed to provide a safe maximum speed for autos on roads according to surface, width, location. The law should provide guidelines for safe travel, but just as in a case of criminal justice, should only provide punishment for proveable offenses against another in regard to life, liberty, property.

This is not the procedure, however. Police cunningly construct speed traps designed not to promote justice, but to induce guilt for breaking a non-objective speed law. Enforcement officials and lawmakers try to justify these laws, and others (like OSHA) like them on POTENTIAL harm to life and property (I stress the "potential", because, as in criminal justice, the "potential" and the "actual" are worlds apart: you "potentially" face death every second of your life). It is those of such "potential" mentality who have destroyed the concept of justice.

MARK F. TUCKER

Asks support

Lincoln, Neb.

I feel it is time the public is made aware of a group of young people proudly representing our city in the Festival of American Community Theaters, June 24-26, 1977, in Spokane, Washington. I am talking of the cast of "The Me Nobody Knows" from our own playhouse.

But it seems due to the lack of support behind this young cast we are short of finances to get our talented cast, crew and orchestra to Spokane. I know the majority of the public is unaware that this group has done all their own fund-raising by special performances and the cutting of a record of the songs of the show. They have worked hard!

I am asking that the citizens of Lincoln support now our Lincoln Community Playhouse and this cast. Somehow we always get the money for Big Red and the University Marching Band, we need that very support from all of you. Please care about us, too.

Town of Elkhorn may declare homebuilding moratorium

Elkhorn (AP) — Elkhorn Mayor William Kohlhaase told about 100 persons Monday night that the city may adopt a moratorium on homebuilding and begin work within two weeks on a restrictive growth ordinance

The goal, he said, is to slow and control development, not to stop it

Landowners and developers with property outside the city objected to the proposals at the city council's public hearing on the so-called Petaluma ordinance

The ordinance is based on a Petaluma, Calif., plan upheld by the courts last year Under it, Petaluma halted all home platting and zoning while it drew up a master plan for its community development.

After completion of the plan, Petaluma restricted homebuilding to a certain level during a given year

Springfield in Sarpy County adopted a restrictive growth plan recently which stopped subdivision building. Gretna is considering a similar plan

All three communities face problems stemming from urban sprawl

Kohlhaase said the number of building permits in Elkhorn increased more than tenfold between 1965 and 1975, while the community's population has grown from 1,100 to more than 1,600 in the past five years

In addition, there now are some 1,200 lots platted in the Elkhorn School District.

The mayor said the growth has put a strain on city services, such as a new sewer plant installed in 1975 which was supposed to handle city needs until 1985 It already sometimes runs at capacity, Kohlhaase said

Planning adviser Mits Kawamoto outlined the Elkhorn proposal and said it would apply only to the city and its one-mile zoning limit

He said there would be a "statement of moratorium" on the platting and zoning of new homes "for a long enough period of time to achieve a control level" He said the moratorium might be for 6 to 12 months.

During that period, he said, the city would update its subdivision and zoning regulations, plot its service needs and determine the number and kind of houses to be built.

Kawamoto suggested a five-year program during which a 20-year program also would be devised.

Developer Robert Gottsch plans to build about 70 homes north of Elkhorn.

He said the proposed city move "would only add fuel to the fire. You would have more development outside the zoning limits. We don't need a planner. We need business and we need industry"

Attorney Harry Farnham, who owns land south of Elkhorn, said the proposal would penalize landowners within the Elkhorn zoning limits He said it would be senseless to adopt the proposal without county assistance

Kohlhaase and Kawamoto agreed They said they had been told the county is taking an interest.

Kawamoto said Douglas County's planning commission is approving no new home plats or zoning in its limits.

He said the county is working on two proposals, one of which would allow no developments unless they were within the jurisdiction of a city The other would allow developments only if they provided full services or could be hooked properly to existing ones.

Ecology class project turned into Utica park

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Utica — Deciding two years ago that ecology class should be more than just studying about plants, two high school sophomores decided to do more than just complain

They wound up building a park

In downtown Utica, next to the Burlington Northern Railroad tracks is the result the trees and flowers of Centennial Park, dedicated on Utica's 100th anniversary

The students now are graduates But Bonnie Tomes and Cindy Rathje still have the pleasure of driving past their school project and calling it our park

Ecology class teacher Arvon Engel credits the girls with getting the old park renovated

They saw the weeds and the mess and wanted to do something about it," said Engel, who also is a member of the village board

During the 1975 ecology class, Bonnie and Cindy urged Engel to allow his students to undertake class projects as part of their assignments Most turned in term papers or photo presentations but the girls thought those boring

We wanted to do something to help clean up the town, Bonnie said We wanted something everyone could enjoy

The two drew up plans for the renovation of a square block area alongside the tracks

Decades ago Engel said, the area was carefully tended by the depot manager who planted trees and kept a flower garden But eventually the depot was closed and demolished and the weeds took over

Once their plans were drawn, Cindy and Bonnie had to present the idea to the village board "That was so scary, Bonnie recalled

I thought, I'm going in there and if they don't like it I'm going to crawl out"

But the board liked the idea and a lot of people got interested in the project," Cindy said

The girls, plus plenty of volunteers, cleaned up the abandoned park area, planted grass and several trees that were donated by the Henry Field Nurseries

They also constructed an elevated flower garden from discarded railroad ties, and Utica's garden club donated the first flowers All the work followed the design created by Cindy and Bonnie

They had kind of decided to aim for the (town's) centennial celebration said Engel And I'll tell you if they hadn't pushed it it probably wouldn't have happened

Today, the girls are hoping for renovation of a second square-block area near their park, and perhaps a small fish pond

If we could just get some more things done Bonnie said that would be great

Engel said the project proved worthwhile, and not only to ecology class students They could see that something was being accomplished — not just the kids but the whole town

Yet one thing remains that brings a momentary frown to Bonnie and Cindy Mr Engel only gave us a B (on the park project)

The teacher has promised to check the records on that

Spanish center requests funds

Grand Island (UPI) — A request from the La Raza Cultural Center for $10,000 to hire a director received a luke warm reception Tuesday from the Hall County Board

The request was referred to the board's finance committee whose chairman, Bernie Crick said he personally felt "if the county agrees to fund the director we will have to contend with similar requests from various minorities

Moses Cavazos the planner for the Grand Island Coalition for Spanish Speaking Citizens, told the board La Raza was trying to become more community oriented and help all low income families instead of just Mexican Americans

Cavazos said the U.S. Agriculture Department in Denver contacted the center Tuesday concerning a lunch program for Grand Island low income families

Since a federal grant to fund the community center recently expired, the center has approached the county board and city council but neither group has approved funding

Board Chairman Ralph Herndon noted when I came on the board 11 years ago we didn't have anything like this"

Somehow we got along," Herndon said, and now this board and city government and every other political entity has got to establish priorities and tighten up somewhere

Mrs. Jensen likes those steaks.

Native Dane still loves Nebraska

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Fairbury — She s a world traveler, retired now in her native Denmark after three decades-plus of living in Hollywood

She's visited every state in the America she adopted back in 1924 But for a few weeks, Mrs Karen Jensen is back in "the place I like best of all — Nebraska "

'Oh, the peacefulness and the fresh air you have here and the people are so genuine," said the visitor "And I do like those Nebraska steaks

All these and more she has found on each of her Fairbury stays, which is every year since she returned to Denmark in 1967 She is the house guest of the Bud Boydens and "my beautiful friend for 40 years,' Mrs Eva Boyden

Petite at a bright-eyed 77, she retains the spark which had made her a teen-age motorcyclist "way back in 1916 " At that time even the idea was daring for a girl, let alone the actual deed

My family called me crazy, so what did I do next? she reflected, pausing I got a motor car license, the second issued to a woman in all Denmark — I was right behind the Princess '

She was dwarfed by the family s monstrous Audi tourister, originally a personal staff car of the German Kaiser The prestigious acquisition came through a friend who was a car importer

An interesting life at the fringe of moviedom came through her husband s unusual work with several studios particularly 20th Century Fox Experience as a Danish sailor helped toward his career as a model shipmaker

"Charles did the sailing vessels for Mutiny on the Bounty as well as all of Lord Nelson s fleet, she reflected It was an interesting life, getting to know people like Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charlie Chaplin '

Cecil B DeMille was another acquaintance, though not a favorite ' because of his foul mouth '

After the loss of her husband 20 years ago Mrs Jensen at first moved to Sun City Ariz She now lives at Odense ' the home town of Hans Christian Andersen

An American citizen she proudly wears a tiny lapel flag about that city

Sometimes an American tourist notices the flag and approaches me she beamed That s the only time I get to speak English now except for my trips back here

Patrol investigating fight's role in death

Beaver Crossing (UPI) — An autopsy was conducted Tuesday to determine if a Beaver Crossing man died of injuries suffered in a fight at a local tavern

Richard Wambold, 42, a fur buyer, died en route to a hospital Monday night Seward County Attorney Randy Stoll said

Captain Lynn Parks head of the State Patrol's criminal investigation division said Wambold apparently had a heart problem and may have died of natural causes

Parks said the incident was being investigated as a homicide however, until results of the autopsy were known

A spokesman for the Seward County sheriff s office said the fight was minor Wambold returned to his home before his family called a rescue-squad

The results of the autopsy won t be known until Wednesday or Thursday Still said

Wambold s survivors include his wife Artis, children Robin Robert James and Angela, all at home and his mother, Mrs Tillie Wambold of Beaver Crossing

Funeral services will be at 11 a m Thursday at the Beaver Crossing Christian Church

Recreation problems at prison confirmed

The complaints of two former athletic directors at the Nebraska Penal Complex may have had some substance

Andy Alexander resigned as inside athletic director at the penitentiary in April In May his successor, Ed Golden, quit. Golden called the job "Frustration, Inc."

Correctional Services Director Joe Vitek acknowledged Monday there have been problems, "mostly with equipment," in the prison athletic programs Shortage of good equipment, due to "hard use and some larceny" has plagued the program, he added

Vitek said that in all his years of corrections work there always have been problems with athletic programs and in dining rooms, and Nebraska is no exception. The fault, he noted, was partially with the inmates, partially with the directors and partially with the prison administration

Golden charged "outright harrassment and bias toward the athletic director" by the guards

We need to establish closer accountability of recreation equipment and scheduling games both with outside and intramural teams ' Vitek said

He said that some states have tried an all-inmate run program, but that has some snags Any way you slice it, this equipment gets hard use and disappears," he added

Alexander and Golden said they spent some of their own money for equipment Alexander said he talked himself out of quitting several times

Vitek said that Warden Robert Parratt has made the largest expenditure ever to upgrade athletic programs in the past six months He noted that the Legislature has appropriated $75,000 for improvement of recreation

Nebraska Masons elect

Alfred B Saum of Kearney has been elected grand master of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Nebraska, succeeding T. Leo Stines of Central City. The election and installation took place during the group's annual meeting in Lincoln.

Other state officers of the Grand Lodge include:

Jack H. Hendrix of Trenton, deputy grand master, Warren D Lichty of Lincoln, senior warden; Byron C. Jenkins of Omaha, junior warden, Norris W. Lallman of Omaha, secretary; the Rev. J. Dallas Gibson of Lincoln, chaplain, Bevin B. Bump of Chardon, orator, Gladwyn A. Youngs of Lincoln, historian; Ralph W. Gerry of Omaha, custodian; Robert A. Metcalf of Lincoln, marshal; Harold C. Wurdeman of Columbus, senior deacon, Paul R. Pierce of Hastings, junior deacon, and Wayne G Luenenborg of North Platte, tyler.

Cattle on feed up 4% from 1976 levels

Nebraska cattle feeders had 1,280,000 cattle on feed June 1, the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Tuesday The current inventory is up 4% from 1976 and up 32% from the low level of 1975

Marketings of fed cattle during May by Nebraska feeders totaled $320,000, the same as a year ago, but 31% above two years ago

Placements of cattle into feedlots during May totaled 285 000, up 15% from last year and up 4% from two years ago

Exon aid quits for Wyoming post

Gov J. James Exon announced Tuesday the resignation of one of his top aids, W. Don Nelson, director of the State Office of Planning and Programming

Nelson, 33, will leave next month to head a new social service agency for Wyoming Gov Edgar Herschler

Exon said he accepted Nelson's resignation "with deep regrets at his leaving, recognizing that his contribution to state government will be long remembered."

Retardation group sees fund surplus

Omaha (AP) — Spokesmen said Monday the Eastern Nebraska Community Office of Retardation (ENCOR) should finish the fiscal year with about a $350,000 surplus. The budget was $5.6 million.

Ray Christensen, executive director of the Eastern Nebraska Human Service Agency (ENHSA), which includes ENCOR, said he expects the budget next year to be about $6 million, up about 7 per cent.

He said the total will depend on how much money member counties allocate when they make up their budgets in August.

ENCOR cut its staff by about 100 a year ago and some programs were dropped following a lengthy public wrangle with state officials and the budget finally was balanced.

Christensen and Michael Albert, ENHSA board chairman, viewed the surplus as a sign of ENCOR's fiscal health and the stability the program has gained.

"You need a certain surplus in any agency to have a cash flow position," Albert said. "Otherwise you end up with a deficit."

Disagreement was expressed by Thomas Miller, executive director of the Greater Omaha Association for Retarded Citizens.

Miller said if there is extra money it should be spent for programs and services, not used for a financial reserve.

He said parents helped fight for an increase in state money for ENCOR and should be consulted on how any additional money should be spent.

Christensen said the state has allocated $2.4 million for next year, a $600,000 increase. ENCOR will get $400,000 in Title 20 Welfare Social Service money, a $210,000 decrease.

City worker trash pickup considered

Omaha (AP) — City Finance Director George Richardson said Monday he's looking into the possibility of using city employes to collect some of Omaha's garbage.

The garbage is currently collected under contract with National Disposal Co., for $3.6 million this year. But it was noted that cities such as Minneapolis and Oklahoma City are dividing the work between their employes and contractors — each taking a different neighborhood.

City employe, Larry Brisby, 25, is driving Mayor Al Veys, since the mayor's eyesight prevents him from getting behind the wheel of a car. Brisby, a security officer, gets about $800 a month.

Brisby picks up the mayor at home in the morning, takes him to functions during the day and then home again in the evening.

Officials said Brisby handles security work in the city-county building when not serving as the mayor's driver.

NU law college will establish water law study

A permanent Water Law Research Program will be established this month within the University of Nebraska's College of Law.

As a preliminary step toward the preparation of a Nebraska Water Plan, the operation is financed by a $38,-580 grant from the University Foundation's Richard H. Larson Fund. Larson, of Lincoln, is a former State Railway Commissioner.

The staff will include co-director Prof. Richard S. Harnsberger of the UNL Law College and an attorney to be appointed.

The program will analyze major problems in preparing a State Water Plan and prepare alternative proposals for citizens and officials to consider.

Among the projects will be a book, entitled, "Nebraska Water Law, Planning and Policy." The book will help the Legislature analyze provisions in the Model Water Code, Model Water Use Act and the Missouri River Basin Commission's Platte River Basin.

Customers urged to curtail electricity use

Columbus (AP) — The Nebraska Public Power District is asking its customers to avoid using electricity between 10 a.m. and 8 p.m. on days when the temperature is forecast to reach 88 degrees or higher.

An NPPD program called "Condition 88" is designed to save ratepayers money and avoid a demand for massive building expenses for generating units, the district said.

The district suggested such activities as washing, drying and ironing clothes; running dishwashers; bathing and using electric stoves be curtailed during peak hours. It also urged customers to set air conditioning thermostats at 78 degrees or higher.

Similar usage patterns also are encouraged by the Lincoln Electric System, but no new promotion is under way, according to spokesperson Pat Smith.

She said, however, that LES does not ask people to avoid using electricity until after 2 p.m. Use of electricity on hot days means LES is forced to turn to standby generators which burn costly oil to meet the peak demands.

Farmers must plan, regulate farm production

At a summer workshop of Nebraska educators at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Gov. J. James Exon spoke on "Concepts and Careers in an Agricultural State."

Exon said agriculture needs to regulate production with long-term planning that allows mistakes in production to be corrected. Agriculture should take a clue in planning from the auto industry, he said.

In order to take out the extreme ups and downs of farm commodity prices, Exon said, the farmer needs more than historical facts. He needs planning so that he may receive a stable, dependable income, he said.

"We should develop a better information system under our U.S. government," he said. "Perhaps, Exon said, sample farms in each state could collect data to feed into a central computer on every phase of agriculture, such as planning how much to plant, what and when. All information from each state could be compiled to aid planning. The same could be done for livestock, he said.

Iowa official fined

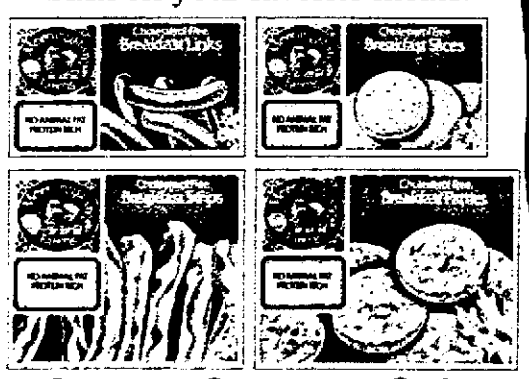
Nevada, Iowa (UPI) — Former Ames Magistrate Larry Munsinger was fined $900 in Story County District Court for failing to file state income taxes.

How to attack cholesterol.

You have one weapon in your hand every time you sit down to eat. Your fork.

But taking the advice of many doctors and restricting the amount of saturated fat and cholesterol in your diet isn't always easy.

It usually means cutting back on your favorite meats.



On bacon. On sausage. On ham. Breakfast foods you've always loved and hate to give up.

But Morningstar Farms® wants you to know that you don't have to give up the taste of any of your favorite breakfast foods just because you want to give up the cholesterol in them. We've developed a whole freezer shelf full of delicious breakfast foods made with textured vegetable protein.

There are crisp Breakfast Strips with the subtle, smokey taste of bacon. For those of you who love pork sausage, we've cooked up delicious Breakfast Links and Patties. Pick your favorite. They'll make your mouth water as they pop and sizzle in the the pan. The special taste of ham? We've got it. Try our Breakfast Slices. There's absolutely no cholesterol or animal fat in any Morningstar Farms product. Tomorrow morning, sit down to a breakfast just as good as your breakfasts used to be. Sit down to a Morningstar Farms breakfast. Bet you ask for seconds.

Safe containing $3,000 hauled from fire ruins

Chadron (UPI) — A heavy black safe containing $3 000 has been pulled from the ruins of a fire which destroyed a half-block area in Chadron s downtown business district Sunday

The safe was on the ground floor of the H and E Auto Supply firm when the fire broke out Flames gutted the first floor, sending the safe plunging into the basement below

Wrecking crews used a crane to haul the safe out of the debris late Monday

Authorities said the money and business records inside the safe escaped damage from the fire

Other businesses in the three buildings destroyed by the fire were the Broken Wheel Saloon Jack and Joe s Cafe and Gene's Auto Machine Shop

Authorities have yet to determine a cause for the fire which left damage estimates as high as $750 000

Investigation efforts were delayed Monday while workmen leveled the second story wall of the saloon, where authorities believed the fire started The wall started swaying in the wind

Harold Eleson, H and E manager, said many individuals including his competitors have offered to help him restart his business but he was having a problem finding a site

"There aren't any buildings here in Chadron, so possibly we might build one," Eleson said "We plan at this time to get back into business as soon as possible, but it may not be for two or three months "

Gene Kriz, owner of Gene's Auto Machine Shop, said he was in the process of constructing a new building which should be completed within two months

Jack Elwood, operator of Jack and Joe's Cafe, said he could be back in business within a month if a site were obtained

State Digest

Swim pool proposed

Cozad — Residents here will go to the polls Tuesday, June 28, to vote on a $125,000 swimming pool bond issue. If approved, the new pool will be constructed in Muni Park, site of the present pool built in 1947.

Cozad has been okayed by the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation for 50% matching federal funds to finance the new pool, estimated to cost $250,000.

Heating bill aid okd

Washington (AP) — The Community Services Administration says Nebraska is eligible for $2 3 million in federal funds to help the state's poorest people pay last winter's unusually high heating bills. Nationally, the agency is making about $200 million available through August.

A spokeswoman said the formula for each state is based on weather conditions, as determined by heating degree days above the normal, fuel price factors and the number of households at the poverty income level

Tuition rates hiked

McCook (AP) — The McCook Board of Education has approved $530 per student increase in non-resident tuition at McCook High School.

The newly-adopted rate for students in grades 9-12 is $1,920, an increase of nearly 39% over last year's rate of $1,382.

Bargaining due

Omaha (AP) — Western Electric in Omaha and Local 1974 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers are to begin bargaining today on "non-economic" local issues, according to White Clark, local vice president. The local represents about 3,700 employes.

Reservoir inspected

Brainard (UPI) — Officials of the Lower Platte South Natural Resources District made the final inspection Tuesday of another flood control structure in the North Oak Watershed project.

The structure, two miles southeast of here, is dam 6-C and will be developed for public access. NRD general manager Hal Schroeder said the reservoir will have a pool of 36 surface acres when filled.

The structure cost $100,000 and the district spent another $98,000 acquiring 160 acres.

Seed firm expanding

Omaha (AP) — The Douglas County Board Tuesday approved a $740,000 Industrial Development Act bond issue for Robinson Seed Co to expand its building and operations at Waterloo.

Arson suspected

Omaha (AP) — District Fire Chief Bart McElligott said arson is the suspected cause of a blaze which caused an estimated $5,000 damage at a portable classroom building at Sherman Elementary School Monday night

Doctor-patient communication is an ancient health problem

To Your Good Health

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read your column and find it interesting and informative. There's one thing I cannot for the life of me understand.

Why would a grown person pay good money to see a physician or specialist concerning an illness and still feel so uninformed about a problem to write you for further information? I imagine there are doctors who won't take the time to explain. Or is it that the patient doesn't ask?

I was always afraid to insist on such information until I realized that often you must be firm and see to it that all your questions are answered. The general questions in your column are fine, but maybe you could help these people by printing a set of guidelines on how to ask and get answers from a physician. — A Reader.

The problem of communication between doctors and patients is as old as medicine itself.

The answer is not as simple as it first appears. Most physicians agree with you that an informed patient is a better patient. But the barriers to full understanding are formidable. In the first place, diagnosis is often a long procedure. There are times when the doctor does not know or is unsure about things. At times he (or she) may feel he knows but is not sure enough to say. Often the patient is reluctant to seek information for a variety of reasons. He may be unequipped to understand medical terms or may not want to know.

The doctor may be hard put to explain in understandable non-technical language just what is wrong or what he suspects is wrong. Often he may not have enough time for a detailed explanation.

Signs warn of 'turtle crossing'

Avalon, N.J. (AP) — Motorists here have been asked to obey "turtle crossing" signs.

The Avalon Conservation Commission said the annual turtle migration has begun from back bay marshlands to sand dunes, increasing the risk of turtles being run over.

The turtles lay their eggs in the warm sand.

Health Tip

Alcoholism today is much more common in women than most people realize.

Most medical people now think of alcoholism as a sickness, no more shameful than flu, says the Nebraska Medical Association.

The average woman alcoholic tasted her first drink before the age of 20. The final "loss of control," the advanced and final stage of alcoholism, happened at about age 42. In between, there was a slow deterioration from regular drinking in moderation, to frequent drunkenness at parties, to secret drinking and prolonged bouts of intoxication. Sometimes in her mid-40s, this composite woman found her life coming apart.

Alcoholism is defined as "an illness characterized by preoccupation with alcohol and loss of control over its consumption, a type of drug dependence that can harm a person's health and interfere with the individual's ability to work and get along with people. The key factor is loss of control and craving for the drug, alcohol."

Stock split 3-for-2

New York (AP) — Shareholders of PPG Industries Inc. approved a 3-for-2 stock split. The split is effective June 23 with distribution on July 22. The large Pittsburgh-based glass manufacturer said cash will be distributed in lieu of fractional shares.

Swift Premium

"No, thanks. I don't wanna swap my *Swift Premium."

No way, Jimmy! Some things just aren't as tempting as others. And it's pretty hard to beat a delicious deal like Swift Premium.

Regular or Beef Franks, for instance—with no fillers to come between you and the taste of all that good meat.

And Swift Premium Cold Cuts. A whole yummy assortment—from bologna to salami, and plenty more besides. All super for sandwiches and after-school snacks.

Or how about Hostess Ham? Consistently lean and luscious, because it is prepared from one cut of meat.

Action Line

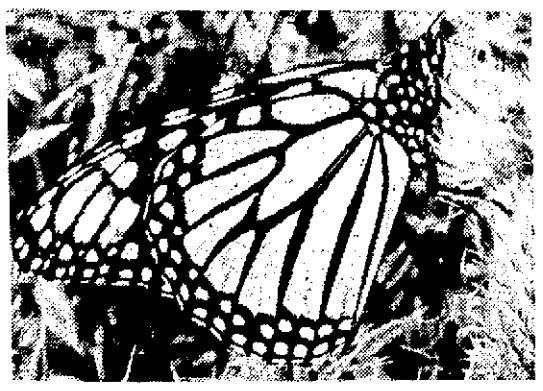
You can make a butterfly net

To ask a question, call 477-2121 or write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, Neb. 68501.

Caught by net

Help! I need a butterfly net with handle for my little granddaughter and don't know where to buy one.

— B.R., Lincoln



ACTION LINE: A spokesman for the NU entomology department tells us that butterfly nets are occasionally sold in hobby shops but advises the netting material may be too coarse. He suggests you hand-fashion one from strong wire, a broom handle and some fine netting material. Several books in the library or local bookstores can give you detailed instructions on how to make the net. Happy hunting.

Moans over phones

Recently, I had the unfortunate opportunity of dealing with the Lincoln Telephone Company. My roomate and I are both listed in the phone book but the billing was coming in her name. When she moved out, I had the billing switched to my name. Although nothing was done to the phone, it cost me a $10 installation charge. The only answer I got was that it was company policy and "policies are policies." Where can I write about this situation?

— F.K., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The first place to direct your complaints is to the phone company. Like any business, they are interested in ways to improve service. If you want to complain further, you can address your comments to The Public Service Commission, at 301 Centennial Mall, Lincoln, which regulates telephone companies.

Impersonal personal

Why is it that the Lincoln Journal and Star do not run ads such as "want to meet . . ." and describing a certain kind of girl?

— R.L., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Journal-Star Want Ads Advertising Manager Bud Callahan advises us that each ad submitted is judged on an individual basis, and in your instance, the department chose "not to accept the advertisement."

Still checking files

ACTION LINE UPDATE: A few weeks ago, we contacted Mutual of Omaha about a missing check sent back to the firm by R.L.M, Lincoln. A Mutual spokesman tells us they are still checking some 50 pieces of correspondence with R.L.M. in recent years and will be writing to him for additional information. International Mail Order Co., of Norman, Okl., through counsel, has written to let us know the firm has offered a full refund to Mrs. B.G., of Utica.

ACTION LINE UPDATE: The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) has just completed a second brochure which focuses on consumers' rights and remedies under the Fair Credit Billing Act. If you are having questions about your credit rights, write for the free pamphlet c/o of the FDIC Publications and Graphics Service Branch, 550 17th, N.W., Room 825, Washington D.C., 20429.

Lethal pesticides stolen

Kansas City (AP) — A large quantity of pesticides, stolen over the weekend from an exterminating company, could spell disaster if found by children or unsuspecting adults, a federal official said Tuesday.

John Wicklund, director of the Environmental Protection Agency, said two of the chemicals stolen from the Getz Exterminating Co. pose an extreme danger if found by persons not familiar with them.

A similar warning came from Thomas Stickney, Getz manager, who told police that some of the chemicals are "so intense that a small portion could reach a large number of persons" — with fatal results.

Wicklund said one of the chemicals, phostoxin pellets, are in a canister and form an extremely dangerous gas lethal to humans in very small doses when exposed to air. He said the chemical is used to fumigate closed spaces, such as buildings or rail cars, after precautions have been taken to keep humans and animals from being exposed.

Wicklund said the second chemical, methyl bromide, is lethal to humans if inhaled at a concentration of 200 parts gas in a million parts of air.

He said the gravest danger would be if the chemicals were discarded and found by children.

'New Glory' will wave indoors, inventor says

Palo Alto, Calif. (UPI) — Flag Day was marked Tuesday by the introduction of a commercial plastic flag which the producer says will wave indoors.

"Frozen flags are like frozen smiles," said Leonard Lorch, the inventor.

He said his new flag "moves constantly, endlessly, responding to the least noticeable air currents.

"It sways gently indoors with a sense of life that no other plastic flag could hope to match."

Lorch calls his flag "New Glory."

Gene Bartow leaves UCLA's 'kitchen'

Los Angeles (AP) — Gene Bartow didn't realize what kind of pressure-cooker he was getting into when he followed the legendary John Wooden as basketball coach at UCLA, both a Bruin player and a rival coach said Tuesday

Bartow, under increasing fire from the media and Bruin basketball fans, took Harry Truman's advice and moved out of "the kitchen" and to the lowkey post of athletic director at the University of Alabama-Birmingham

The move to a school with no existing athletic program, first rumored last week, became official Monday

"I was really surprised when Coach Bartow first told me he was considering the job," said Marques Johnson, UCLA's All-American senior forward Johnson, who was in New York with Bartow to receive a Most Valuable Player award last week, said, "He talked about it with my Father (Jeff) and me I was surprised at first, but after talking with him, I understood how he felt "

Bob Boyd, the basketball coach at arch-rival Southern California, said, "I think it's fair to say Gene was uncomfortable coaching at UCLA

"In college coaching, there's a lot of deviousness, and I found Gene Bartow not to be in the least devious," the USC coach said, not elaborating "I think he misjudged the impact of being the new coach at UCLA particularly being an outsider taking the job "

Bartow had a 52-9 record and won Pacific-8 championships both of his two years at UCLA, but the Bruins failed to win the national championship, a feat Wooden's teams accomplished 10 times in his last 12 years at the school.

Johnson said Bartow had trouble making the adjustment from comparably low-pressure coaching jobs at Illinois and Memphis State to the Bruins job in media-rich and victory-conscious Los Angeles

"I think the fans were a little harsh on him, as was the press," Johnson said "Just look at our record I think the players expected the criticism because we didn't go all the way, but he was surprised it was so strong

"Some of us had been around during the Wooden years, and I remember even he drew a lot of criticism a couple of years ago when we lost two straight in Oregon "

Bartow's decision to take the Alabama-Birmingham job, Johnson said, was capped by the media attention after it was disclosed he was talking with Alabama-Birmingham

Gary Cunningham, a former Wooden assistant at UCLA and considered one of the top candidates to succeed Bartow, said he could cope with the pressure at UCLA, but added that he wasn't sure he wanted to

ASU, Cal State win key games

By Virgil Parker
Sports Editor

Omaha — Three-time NCAA champion Arizona State recorded an 8-4 victory to sideline Minnesota, another three-time titlist, and California State-Los Angeles eliminated Clemson, 1-0, in the College Baseball World Series at Rosenblatt Stadium here Tuesday night

ASU's Sun Devils stayed alive in this double-elimination tournament with aggressive play at the plate and on the base paths, while Cal St -LA displayed a big league defense to blank Clemson

Arizona State, which plays as many games a season as many minor league teams, ran its record to 54-12 with its triumph over the Gophers

The well-played nightcap, which saw Clemson shut out for the first time in its last 167 games and just the second time in the past 217 games, was completed in just one hour and 48 minutes

Cal St LA's Mike Sutherland threw just 94 pitches while notching his seventh victory against a single loss for the season

Sutherland received super support from his in field as he had the Clemson batters hitting first and second-pitch grounders

Second baseman Drew McAuley charged a slow roller, made a bare-handed pickup and an across-the-chest throw for one sterling play, while third baseman Marty Shepherd later duplicated the effort on what appeared to be a perfect drag bunt down the line

The LA club, which never figured on gaining this tourney until knocking off ten-time champion Southern California in regional play, turned in three double plays to greatly aid Sutherland gain his shutout

Cal State, displaying a carefree attitude in previous games ("We didn't figure on being here anyway so we might as well have some fun while we're here, ' coach John Deutsch had said,), didn't show its ' phantom ball" warmup routine used in other games, much to the disappointment of the crowd of 8,405

Clemson's Ron Musselman pitched well enough to win, striking out 13 while giving up just four hits — the same number collected by his club

Neither team threatened until the fifth frame, when Cal State got a runner to third with one out but couldn t get him home

Clemson staged its only threat in the sixth, getting runners to first and second but that was it

Cal State scored the game s only run in the eighth inning when left fielder Rob Hayne bounced a single to center, stole second, moved to third on a wild pitch and then scored when right fielder Gary Adair singled behind second base against a drawn in infield

Arizona State banged out 14 hits — two of them homers — had speedy centerfielder Rick Peters gain base twice via the hit-by-pitcher route, and added two stolen bases

Minnesota which won the championship here in 1956 60 and 64 jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning, but the Sun Devils countered with three tallies in the second frame and were never headed

ASU second baseman Bob Horner added another run when he led off the third inning with a booming home run over the left field wall It was his 22nd round tripper of the year, which leads the nation and is just one shy of the NCAA record

Minnesota closed the gap to a 4-3 count in the bottom of the third on a strange, seldom-seen play

With the bases loaded and one out, Gopher second baseman Ken Mauer — with two strikes on him — swung at a wild pitch in the dirt The ball got away from ASU catcher Chris Bando, younger brother of major leaguer Sal

One run scored, but Mauer, who dashed off to first, was called out — after a long argument — since the bases were full at the time of the strikeout

ASU put the game out of reach in the next inning scoring three runs after two were out Peters was hit for the second time — the 18th time that s happened to him this year — then stole second It was his 46th theft of the current campaign

Two doubles and a single followed and the Sun Devils had an insurmountable 7 3 lead

ASU shortstop Mike Henderson led the winner s barrage at the plate He had the Sun Devils' other home run added two doubles and was four-for-five on the night

Wednesday night s action will feature the only unbeaten teams remaining — Southern Illinois and South Carolina — in a single game starting at 7 40

Thursday night, Arizona State, which won the CWS in 1965 67 and 69 and was the runnerup in both 1972 and 73 will meet South Carolina

Cal State-LA will tangle with Southern Illinois in the other Thursday night clash

Confidence rewarded by Petty Theft

By Mark Gordon
Staff Sports Writer

Omaha — Danny Whited and Gary Thomas had nothing but confidence about their colt, Petty Theft

'I felt pretty good about him If he didn t have any bad luck, I knew he d win ' said Whited after riding Petty to an impressive seven-length triumph in Tuesday's $26,275 Laddie Stakes here at Ak-Sar-Ben

Thomas, Petty s trainer, was less sure, but he was still confident in the 5½-furlong chase that lured 12 2-year-old Nebraska bred colts and geldings

"I thought he'd win, but not that easy I think he s a pretty good Nebraska-bred," Thomas said

Whited broke from the ninth post position in front by one length withstood an early challenge from Mrs Bernice Chaffee s Fella s Folly to lead by three entering the stretch and then raced to the wire easily

He broke good, I figured he d win easy Whited added I hit him three or four times down the lane just to keep him ahead

Thomas said owner B R Evans of Tulia, Tex , purchased both the mare and colt from Harry J Farnham of Elkhorn after she foaled

In running a 1 05 3-5 clocking, Petty Theft returned $7 40, $5 20 and $4 80 The Kemling brothers Prom Crasher, part of a three-horse entry, placed under Rob Williams for $7 60 and $5 20 Fella's Folly, ridden by Sam Maple, showed for $8 80

The 1 70-1 favorite, Bernice M Gedwaki's Sparky D'Or and Foreign Gold were never in contention Sparky finished seventh and Foreign Gold was last

Rider Dave King and Hazel R Smith s Roman Buck apparently escaped serious injury when both went to the ground in the stretch run near the sixteenth-pole of the 6-furlong fifth race

King appeared uninjured Roman, after struggling to his feet for a few minutes, finally regained his balance and walked away

The race's eventual winner, Pete Anderson's Pete's Hubby, ridden by Nels Peterson, was disqualified from first to last for what the stewards ruled was interference in the stretch run

That advanced E. C Cashman's Gonzago, a nose behind Pete's Hubby, to first

'Amateurs' too expensive

Miami (AP) — A Miami club says it canceled plans for a track meet after learning it would cost up to $1 000 plus expenses for each of the amateur track stars invited

' The amateurs are pricing themselves right out of the market," an official of a Miami Optimist club complained "We couldn t afford them '

The club reported that it recently canceled plans for the track meet after learning that such top amateurs as Dwight Stones and Filbert Bayi would cost the promoters $1,000 each, plus expenses

Jimmy Carnes track and field chairman for the Amateur Athletic Union, admitted that athletes are getting high fees and other "under-the-table ' payments

Carnes said that AAU rules allow athletes to accept money to cover expenses including air fare and hotel rooms, but forbid other payments from track promoters and sports equipment companies

"We hear it all the time We hear 'so and so got $1,000 to run so and so got $500 to run,' ' Carnes said "You'd have to have a force of people out to stop them "

Carnes said that there is no way to prove such violations because the athletes promoters and equipment manufacturers deny that any illegal money changed hands

The Internal Revenue Service is reportedly investigating the allegations

One world-class athlete, French hurdler Guy Drut, announced recently that he had been receiving under-the-table payments for years

As a result, International AAU President Adrian Paulen told Carnes last week that as far as he is concerned Drut has forfeited his amateur status

Kenyan half miler Mike Boit called the charge about illegal under-the-table payoffs to amateur athletes ridiculous and unfair "

'I wouldn t say that they (other track and field stars) take a lot of money from promoters " Boit said ' What we are provided with most of the time is a ticket to go to the track meet and to return to the place you left from, plus $3 to $5 every day for expenses '

Last year, sprinter Houston McTear was invited to run in Miami His coach accepted the invitation under the condition that a $500 check be sent to cover airfare from Pensacola, Fla according to The Miami News The round-trip fare for McTear and his coach was less than $300

"Plus, they made us pay their expenses in Miami," the promoter told the News "The hotel bill (for two days) came to $144 "

To alleviate the problem of under-the-table payments, Carnes said he is attempting to recruit industries and large companies to sponsor track and field teams

"How else can a guy survive in the United States (with no subsidy) when he has to train three and four and five hours a day?" Carnes said

Grid legend Fleming, 58, dies in Omaha

Omaha — Don Fleming a football legend in Nebraska and Iowa for more than three decades, died early Tuesday afternoon of an apparent heart attack

Fleming, 58, was due to report to Ak-Sar-Ben for work as the operator of the electronic horse race timer when his wife, Helen, informed officials her husband had suffered an apparent heart attack Officials reported he died before he arrived at a local hospital

Fleming was the nation's leading football ground gainer for Creighton University in 1940 and was captain of Creighton's National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball team in 1941.

He served as an assistant football coach at Marquette University in Milwaukee and was an assistant football coach at the University of Washington under his brother-in-law, Howie Odell.

He coached state championship high school football teams at Creighton Prep in Omaha, Don Bosco High School in Milwaukee, Sioux City Heelan and Nebraska City Lourdes

Don Fleming
.. Holy Name Coach

At the time of his death, he was athletic director and head football coach at Omaha Holy Name

Fleming, who was this area s talent scout for the Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League, also served as head coach for the now defunct Omaha Mustangs professional football team

Fleming worked at Ak-Sar-Ben in admissions before becoming head usher for the horse race meet for five years He was in his first year as operator of the electronic horse timer

"Don was an excellent employe We all were very shocked and sad today," said Ak Sar-Ben executive director and general manager Dick Becker "He was a good worker for Ak-Sar-Ben, but he was better known as an outstanding coach "

Fleming was honored a year ago by being inducted in the Creighton Athletic Hall of Fame and the Iowa High School Basketball Hall of Fame during the 1977 Iowa State High School Basketball Tournament

Super Bowls go to Miami and Pasadena

New York (UPI) — National Football League owners, sticking to sites which have been successful in the past Tuesday voted to play the 1979 Super Bowl in Miami s Orange Bowl and the 1980 game at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif

The announcement marks the first time the NFL has chosen sites for two games In the past, single Super Bowl sites have been announced two years in advance

League owners also refused to act on compensation for teams who lost players after playing out their options After a lengthy discussion which carried over from the winter meetings in Phoenix, the owners decided to let individual clubs work out their own compensation problems

The owners also made some minor decisions regarding tie-breaking procedures in the draft, starting times for games and preseason schedules

The owners ruled that in the future, ties in the draft among teams from the same division would be broken under the formula used to determine league champions rather than putting a team playing the weaker schedule ahead of another

They also decided that beginning in 1978, all games would start at one minute after the hour to provide uniformity and avoid delay in doubleheaders Also starting in 1978 when the 16-game regular season goes into effect, each team must schedule two preseason opponents outside its conference before playing the other two games against conference clubs

Miami, which will be the Super Bowl site for the fifth time, and Pasadena, which played host to the title game before a record crowd of 103,000 last January, were chosen after presentations from eight cities Los Angeles, Houston and New Orleans, all previous Super Bowl sites, and Seattle, Pontiac, Mich , and Dallas, bidding to hold the game for the first time, lost out.

Super Bowl XIII, which will be played in the 80,000-seat Orange Bowl in Miami, is scheduled for Jan 21, 1979 Super Bowl XIV, set for the 104,000-seat Rose Bowl in Pasadena, will be played on Jan 20, 1980 No starting times were announced

Frank Rose

Anyone who is a horoscope fanatic should find Frank Rose an interesting case to study

Whether the moon and stars can take the credit, Rose has compiled an amazing "odd year record as a golfer

The Fairbury native and ex University of Nebraska golfer won the 1977 Kansas State amateur championship Sunday It was his fourth title He claimed his other Jayhawk State crowns in 1971, 73 and '75

To carry the ' odd year ' success even further, Rose won the Nebraska amateur championship in 1969

Rose who now lives in Topeka where he is an insurance actuary became only the second golfer in the 57-year history of the Kansas event to win the championship four times

Short stretch

Even more amazing is the short period of time in which Rose has accomplished the feat He has lived in Kansas just seven summers In six of his seven tries he's reached the finals of the match play event

Rose is the only player in Kansas history to make the finals that many times

The 29-year-old Topekan crushed 20-year-old Dennis Kay of Kansas City 9 and 8 in the 36-hole title match Sunday

He whipped Dave Dennis of Independence by that same count when he won his first championship in 1971 He defeated Charles VanDyne of KC 3 and 1 in 1973 and Paul Anderson of Manhattan 7 and 5 in 1975

Incidentally, the only year he failed to make the finals — being eliminated in the second round — he hurried up to Grand Island in time to enter AND WIN the Tournament of Champions

Steady player

A magician with the wedge, Rose banged his approach shots stiff to the pin with such regularity in his final match this year that he played the final 23 holes in seven under par

On the front side during the afternoon round, Rose recorded four birdies and five pars He won six of the nine holes

It is interesting to note that Rose s seven-year match play record in the Kansas tournament stands at 29-3 He has beaten 29 different opponents

The only player he has ever met twice was Gary Navarro of Wichita Frank defeated him the first time, then lost in '74, the year he came up to win the T of C in Grand Island

Stickler on the rules

The officials who follow each match at the Kansas event are obviously careful to enforce all the rules of the game

Kay, Rose s Sunday opponent in the finals, got some help in his semifinal match when the match official awarded Kay a hole after his opponent was called for tamping down the grass behind his ball with his putter when it was on the fringe of the green

Many golfers — Kay included — didn't know there was such a rule

Nebraska s state match play championships comes up next weekend at the Omaha Country Club Though it is considered one of the state's top events, the Cornhusker State golfers still place the greatest importance on the medal play test which will be in the Capital City at Hillcrest in late July

Kansas doesn't have a medal play tourney, but it's nice to report on an ex Nebraskan who is dominating the game down there

Dodgers, Braves enter into Seaver bidding

New York (UPI) — Other clubs, including the Los Angeles Dodgers and Atlanta Braves, have now entered into the bidding for Tom Seaver, and with the trading deadline rapidly approaching, the possibility increased the three-time Cy Young Award winner may remain with the New York Mets because they were unable to make an equitable deal

Seaver already has given his consent to a proposed deal with the Cincinnati Reds — orally However, if the Mets decide to trade him to Cincinnati for unsigned relief pitcher Rawley Eastwick, utility infielder Doug Flynn and another player, he still must give his consent in writing for the deal to be consummated

He might have some second thoughts about that, just as the Mets themselves have been mulling over the question whether to trade him or not. Seaver is currently in the second season of a three-year, $225,000 per annum contract with the Mets

The major league trading deadline is Wednesday midnight

"As a 5-and 10-year man (the last five years with the same club and 10 years in the majors), "it's Tom's decision to accept or turn down any trade that is offered," said Board Chairman M Donald Grant "He has steadfastly refused to register his desire to stay with the club unless we are willing to renegotiate his contract This leaves us no alternative but to grant him his request and make the best deal we can "

Cincinnati has been the dominant club mentioned in dealings on Seaver Reds' third baseman Pete Rose said Monday night "the deal for Seaver has been made " Cincinnati President Bob Howsam refuses to admit that a trade for Seaver is even being discussed

"We're talking to a lot of clubs just as we do at this time of the year every season," said Howsam

Seaver said in Atlanta Monday night that Rose "is being premature I believe I would know "

Cincinnati relief specialist Eastwick, the most prominent of the players mentioned in trade talks, was given a letter of permission by the Reds to talk to the Mets He said Joe McDonald called him Sunday evening to discuss a contract, but the ace reliever told the Mets' general manager he wanted to consult with his agent Jerry Kapstein, before reaching any agreement with the New York club

The Mets' home office has been deluged by phone calls from fans pleading with the club to keep Seaver

"The calls are 100 per cent against trading Seaver ' said Whitney de Roulet, an assistant director of public relations with the Mets who fielded many of the calls Tuesday 'They say they want to register their protest against trading Seaver

By Chuck Sinclair
Staff Sports Writer

For those who thought the summer months were strictly for rest and relaxation, take a second guess if your desires include holding a golf club in your hands

With the variety of activities slated for the state of Nebraska the next week and a half, there are no exemptions for age or sex ranging from the Lincoln junior boys city tournament to the women's state medal tournament at Columbus and the men's state match play at Omaha Country Club

But is you re still inclined towards leisure you don't even have to play to enjoy the game as golf s incomparable Jack Nicklaus flies in from the U S Open in Tulsa for a Heart Assn benefit at Omaha's Applewood Golf Course on Monday

A 1 p m clinic is scheduled to be followed by an 18-hole match with Nicklaus, Pioneers Park pro Dave Oliphant, Omaha amateur Tom Sieckmann and Applewood's Gene Johnson

Tickets are available at Omaha area golf courses and at Applewood the day of the exhibition

Here is a rundown of the tournaments scheduled.

—The Country Club of Lincoln is holding its 24th annual Swingfest for members and their visiting guests beginning Wednesday with a practice round and running through Saturday

Thursday's play will include a Scotch two-ball with the main event, a two-man best ball, to be contested Friday and Saturday

—Entries are still open for the Lincoln Junior Boys Tournament beginning Monday at the Country Club of Lincoln and progressing to Hillcrest Country Club on Tuesday, Pioneers Park Wednesday and finishing Thursday at Holmes Park

Last year's champion Mike Schuchart is over the age limit and can't compete this year, assuring a new champion

Entries will be accepted until Saturday night with tickets available at either Holmes or the Junior Golf Course for boys who haven t reached their 16th birthday by the opening of the tournament

—Some 40 junior boys and girls entries are expected Friday for local qualifying in the Chevrolet PGA junior tournament at Holmes Park

—The women's state medal tournament at Columbus is scheduled for next Wednesday and Thursday and the men's state match play for next Thursday through Saturday at Omaha Country Club

Lincoln's Ed Smith fired an even par 72 to win one of the state's top charity events Friday, the Swing Against Cancer at Hillcrest Country Club, bettering a field of 103 golfers

Smith's score was good enough for a five-shot winning margin over Bill Jennings, Dr Tom Ludwick and Gordon Saffer who each shot 77

Low net went to Lincoln realtor Tom Cronin, as he posted a six-under-par 66

Rams trade Harris to Chargers

Los Angeles (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams, who recently acquired veteran Joe Namath from the New York Jets as a free agent traded quarterback James Harris to the San Diego Chargers Tuesday night for an undisclosed number of future draft choices

The trade leaves young Pat Haden who replaced Harris as the starting quarterback in the final games of last season, as the No 1 quarterback on the NFL National Conference Western Division champions

Besides Haden, the Rams also have Nebraska quarterback Vince Ferragamo

South Sioux City Star and editor are sued

Omaha (AP) — A libel suit asking $510,000 in damages has been filed by a former South Sioux City police dispatcher against the South Sioux City Star newspaper and editor Henry Trysla.

In the suit filed in U.S. District Court in Omaha, attorneys for June Davis say a story the paper printed last September about her dismissal from her job contained erroneous information.

According to the suit, the newspaper reported that Miss Davis had emotional problems and was hospitalized when she was dismissed. That information was not correct, the suit said.

The paper's story said Miss Davis, a resident of Iowa, attempted to gain unemployment insurance from Nebraska through using the address of a South Sioux City councilman

PBS plans to give Cavett a new show

Lincoln's homegrown television personality, Dick Cavett, is going back on national television, a Public Broadcasting Service official said Tuesday

Cavett, a former writer and talk show host, begins an interview show in October for the national educational television network, according to Chloe Aaron, PBS senior vice president of programming

Recently Cavett has been seen on the PBS network's Live from Lincoln Center involving interviews with classical concert artists on Sunday afternoons

Ms Aaron said the program's format is still being discussed but would probably deal with cultural materials

The announcement was made during a press conference for three PBS officials including Ms Aaron, Lawrence Grossman, president of PBS, and William T Reed, PBS vice president of station relations They are in Lincoln for the Central Educational Network s annual meeting

Two officials of the CEN announced that the Nebraska Educational Television Network s general manager, Jack McBride, was elected chairman of the CEN board of directors The term lasts for one year and involves policy-making for the 10-state 91-station CEN

Grossman told the press conference that since PBS weathered the Nixon storm, which saw its multimillion dollar budget request vetoed by the White House about five years ago, it has gained new respect in Washington

He also said he's confident the Carter administration will try to adhere to suggestions by a new Carnegie Commission which is looking into the future of American public television

The first Carnegie Commission at one time recommended a $500 million program budget for PBS but the suggestion was ignored by three presidents

"This should be a billion dollar system," Grossman said. That's if we're going to provide alternative programming that's not out of Los Angeles or New York."

He said the commission also is looking into alternative funding methods for public television so the fund-raising aspects can be downplayed

Tuesday night CEN officials and the PBS executives gave Hartford N Gunn Jr one of the PBS founders, the DEN 1977 award for Exceptional Service to Public Broadcasting situation, blacking out all news reports, until his fellow leaders in the Politburo could be informed and an immediate policy decided upon. Nikolayev was under enormous pressure: the slightest omission, the failure to act precisely as the man at the center would expect him to act, would open him to charges of misfeasance at a crucial moment.

"Your formal protest is noted," said the Russian.

"For Crissake, Vasily," Curtice almost shouted across the desk, "this is no formality, this is —" he groped before lamely settling for "— life and death." More than that, Curtice's reputation rested on his ability to negotiate them out of here posthaste, with the news blackout lifted. Every action, every movement, every moment's delay would be analyzed by reporters and historians for years, and the blame, he was determined, would not be laid at his door. He felt a twinge of conscience at thinking of how he would look in this situation later, and returned to the pressure: "Every moment you sit on this powderkeg, the worse the explosion will be when the story breaks. Don't you see? You're making it worse."

"The general secretary is dead," said the foreign minister. "What could be worse?" Curtice thought it best not to make a quick reply, and Nikolayev answered his own question: "It could be worse if your President were dead, I know. But he is not dying. In terms of his own life, which as you say is paramount, the needs of security are greater at the moment than the need for medical specialists."

"We're not sure we're safe right here," Curtice pressed, a sense of helplessness mounting in the face of Nikolayev's rigid line. "What about an attack on the hospital? It could happen. They could burst in at any moment; you don't have 20 men guarding this place." It was hopeless; this was fencing, Curtice knew. The Russian was operating on a timetable of communication; after he knew the initial power lines were laid, the story would be made known, the President permitted to leave. The delays were "unavoidable", any objections would be politely listened to but not heard. And Nikolayev had an edge; America's first black secretary of state had to show himself as calm and cool, with no bombast. The explosion that might be allowed a white would be criticized in a black; a subtle edge, but one the Soviet foreign minister was ready to exploit.

Nikolayev, he knew, would not be pushed further, but four hours would not satisfy Lucas Cartwright, the President's chief of staff, or Ericson, and he was beginning to worry more all the time about how he would be savaged by the American press for conceling the biggest news of the generation. Curtice could think of no other way out. He told himself that he was acting in the interests of getting the wounded President adequate medical care and of making public the facts. He played his hole card.

In a different voice, he said, "I have just come from the bedside of the injured Secret Service agent, Bok." Curtice walked to the window and reminded himself that his words were probably being recorded, so he chose them with care. "Agent Bok is not sure of his memory of the moments on the ground, as the attackers charged his position. His uncertainty is understandable, since he was bleeding from the grenade wounds, and everything was happening so fast." Curtice paused to let that element of uncertainty sink in

"He is not sure," Curtice said slowly, "but he indicated that he thinks he remembers Secretary Kolkov crawling over to the President who was unconscious in the ditch. He thinks he recalls the secretary lying on top of the President, shielding him with his own body."

"He remembers that?" Nikolayev was weighing the possibilities in his mind.

"His memory is hazy — after all, the agent is in pain, partly sedated. When he's better, it could be he will remember that

Full Disclosure

Secretary Kolkov died an heroic death saving President Ericson's life. Or —" Curtice shrugged — "he will remember that the secretary just died."

He let the Russian think it over. Curtice knew that the card he was playing was attractive to the foreign minister. If Kolkov died a hero, then Nikolayev, Kolkov's chosen successor, would be strengthened inside the Soviet Union. The American secretary of state could not pretend to know what machinations were going on in Moscow at that moment, or the relative weight of the need for time against the introduction of the fact of Kolkov's herosim. Maybe, he allowed himself to worry, Nikolayev wanted to discredit Kolkov, that no herosim was desired.

"Ninety minutes," said Nikolayev.

"Immediately," snapped Curtice. He had won.

"Thirty minutes."

"Done."

Seven hours out of Yalta, as Air Force One began its descent toward Lajes Field in the American Azores, Dr. Herbert Abelson gave a nervous start when the buzzer on his wristwatch went off. He had promised Ericson he would wake him a half-hour before arrival, and only with that promise had the President taken the sedation he needed.

He had been wrong to take this job, Abelson thought. This was exactly the kind of life he had decided not to live, the reason why he had set aside the practice of medicine a few years back for the more orderly life of medical editor. He should never have let Ericson talk him into the political life in the first place. "C'mon, Herb," the candidate had said. "It's just for the campaign. You'll see the play of power from the inside, and it's fascinating." And the campaign manager, that bastard Leigh, had assured him "the only thing you'll have to had out is aspirin and cold pills." Like a dope, Abelson thought, he had gone along for the ride.

The most intolerable part of the situation to Abelson was the knowledge that only he, of the people around the President, knew of the worst part of the problem. Not the medical part, the political part. With Harry Bok flat on his back in Yalta — poor bastard, he'd walked his last — only Herb Abelson carried the weight of guilty knowledge around with him.

He had to share it; he would not bear it alone. That was why he was looking forward to seeing Hennessy, along with the doctors at Lajes. He would give the political secret to Hennessy and then the responsibility would be out of his hands. Then he would give the medical secret to the Bethesda team, so that the medical responsibility for the patient would be where it belonged.

Ericson was in pain, brow furrowed, eyes staring ahead, his fingers lightly touching the bandages around his head to find out how bound up he was. "I'm a little dizzy, and I feel sick, and my head hurts," he reported

He was lucid, the doctor noted; the complaints were differentiated "You're lucky to be alive, Sven."

"You're right How's Harry?"

"He'll be okay." Abelson did not think it was a good time to suggest paralysis; the President had enough on his mind. "We left him in the hospital there, along with the big, blonde nurse, and we're sending doctors " There was silence.

"All right, Herb, what do you think?" the President asked.

The doctor passed his hands across the patient's eyes, back and forth a few times. No blinking. "You're stirring up a wind in front of my face, Herb, what do you think?"

"Can you tell light from dark — I mean, the window's to your left, there's a lot of sun, but over here it's darker. Can you tell the difference?"

"I can't see a thing," the President said. "Not a goddam thing."

"We'll be landing in the Azores in a minute," Abelson said quickly, "and the ophthalmologist from Bethesda is there waiting for us. He'll give us a diagnosis, we'll know a lot more. Concussion like this, could be a couple of days, you'll be as good as new."

"How long was the last time?"

"The second time lasts longer?"

"Jesus, Sven, I wish I knew," said the doctor. "The way it was was such a big secret, I was afraid to ask around. That's a very specialized field, a whole different branch of medicine."

"We'll have to tell the truth about my condition when we land at Andrews," the President said. "In a calm way, just the temporary effect of the concussion. And in a couple of days I'll be out of it. That's not the problem. The problem is the last time "

"You mean you don't want to tell the eye doctor about the last time?"

"Not a word, Herb. I know what I'm doing. No hints, nothing Ever. Let's go over who else knows."

"Buffie was in the compartment with you. She knows, and she's been very good. You and I know. And Harry Bok. And that bastard Leigh knew. That's all." Then he went over the people who probably should have been told but from whom it had been kept "Not even an eye doctor was told. Cartwright, Hennessey, Smitty, Melinda — not one of them knows. I haven't said a word."

"Keep it that way," the President said, in a presidential-order voice, "I'm going to tell Hennessy about the last time. Second thought, you do it, when Hennessy comes aboard now. And Herb—" he reached behind him for a pillow, and the doctor moved to give his head the support he wanted — "if you have any questions ever about what to do, and you can't reach me for any reason, work with Hennessy."

"You have to know something," Abelson said to Hennessy urgently when the special counsel and the medical party met Air Force One at Lajes "The President has a problem."

"It's this blindness business," said Hennessy, helping him along.

"No. I mean, God knows that's problem, but there's something else that wasn't important before that makes everything worse. You remember the campaign train back in September, that great idea of that bastard Leigh to go back to politicking in the old style?"

Mark Hennessy remembered it well but could not see how it was relevant at a moment like this, and he said so.

"It's relevant as hell, counselor," the doctor said. "You remember how we canceled the schedule for the next two days while the candidate recuperated from his laryngitis? What happened was that Ericson was in his upper berth with Buffie, the photographer, between stops. When the damn engineer slammed on the brakes, Sven smashed his head into the end of the berth. Buffie started hollering and waving a naked arm through the curtains of the berth Harry Bok was right there, in the corridor, and he shut her up and got her out and came for me "

"So"" Hennessy couldn't get aggravated about the beginnings of an Ericson affair.

"The candidate was unconscious for about an hour, and Leigh and Bok and I just sat around, they wouldn't let me call a hospital. Leigh insisted everybody freeze. He wouldn't even tell Smitty. He said he didn't want him to have to lie. Me, he let lie. Finally, the spirits of ammonia got some results and Ericson came to. But he couldn't see. We thought he'd gone blind. The first day, he could tell light from dark and the second day the pressure came off the nerve when the swelling went down, and he could see as well as ever.

"This time he can't tell light from dark yet And when these things happen more than once, it's not good. That's why I said the hell with it, this time I'd get an eye doctor before anybody stopped me. Cartwright passed the message on to Bethesda without arguing, he didn't know the background. Doesn't even now. The President said you were the only one to know, that you would be the honcho on this."

"I have not even spoken to the President about this," Hennessey said slowly after a moment's thought, "but from what you tell me he told you, it seems that he is concerned that his enemies might use the campaign incident to try to drive him from office. It was unimportant then, but it becomes important now, as you said at the beginning. Very important. I'm not suggesting what you do, only that you think about it." He looked for another handle to help Herb shut up about this. "Think about the medical ethics, of telling outsiders more than your patient wants you to tell them about confidences vouchsafed to you under the doctor-patient relationship."

Hennessy felt the enormity of the President's triple problem beginning to grip him. The threat of upheaval in the Soviet Union, or the threat of vengeance against the people who would be blamed for the assassination, had to be foremost in the mind of the man elected to protect the nation's survival.

And that was only the beginning of the problem for the President, Hennessy thought, putting himself in Ericson's shoes He was blinded — temporarily, probably, judging from the previous experience — but even for a few days, he would have to grope around physically as well as mentally, giving the appearance of disability, even paralysis, at a time when the situation cried out for the appearance of supreme ability.

And then the complication: the concealment of the previous blindness. Hennessy turned that over and examined it. on the campaign train, it would have seemed vital to hide the fact that the President was playing around with a girl between whistle stops At this stage he could downplay the sex angle; after all the candidate was a divorcee or widower — depending on how you characterized the survivor of a woman who committed suicide on the day of her divorce.

But that innocent concealment of the affair was not a suspicious concealment of a "previous blindness", inviting the charge that Ericson had failed to fully disclose his health before the election. That was no peccadillo, to be brushed off as fuel for gossips, but a substantive complaint about a false basis for assuming the reins of power.

That reminded the lawyer of Roy Bannerman, the treasury secretary, who had been Ericson's rival for power in the party. If Bannerman were to learn of the previous blindness, perhaps he would be inclined to mount a challenge to the President while he was still blinded, getting him to step aside, invoking the terms of the Letter to the Vice President, or even invoking the 25th Amendment.

10 from region indicted in farm implement theft

Kansas City (AP) — Nine Kansas City area residents have been indicted by a federal grand jury in Brownsville, Tex. as alleged participants in an international farm implement theft ring, FBI agents said here Tuesday.

The nine local residents and one from Iowa were among 16 persons indicted as part of a conspiracy to steal tractors, backhoes and other valuable equipment in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Arkansas. Authorities said their plan was to sell them to buyers in Mexico and Guatemala through connections in Texas towns along the Mexican border.

Among those named in the 29-count indictment were: John Shockey, James Eggleston, Joseph W. King, Frank Kolisek Jr. and Robert J Martin of Kansas City, Kan.; Ralph B. Hufford, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; Carl L. Drake and Mr. and Mrs. Robert L Denny of Bonner Springs, Kan. and Ray Wagner of Oakland, Iowa.

Blinded U.S. President brought home

Editor's Note: Vasily Nikolayev, Soviet Foreign Minister, plotted the assassination of Soviet Chairman Alexei Kolkov and American President Sven Ericson in a helicopter over the Crimea to avert their cosying up to an Oriental axis of China and Japan. Kolkov dies, but Ericson is saved by his Secret Service guard when a wild boar attacks the assassins. William Safire unfolds the tale in the second excerpt from his book, "Full Disclosure."

Full Disclosure

By William Safire

The secretary of state felt a wave of fury surge in him and said nothing until it had passed They were in the hospital administrator's office, originally a waiting room in the Czar's Palace, which the foreign minister had taken over as his command post. Upstairs, the President of the United States lay, alive, conscious, unable to see, in need of the best medical attention in the world. Down the hall from the President's room, Agent Bok occupied a huge ward, his condition unknown, but paralysis likely; he was sedated now, out of pain, but in need of a surgeon they could all trust. On the top floor, being photographed now, were the bodies of Soviet General Secretary Kolkov, his guards and his Chinese assassins.

George Curtice looked at his watch again: 12:30 P.M. Yalta time, three solid hours since the aerial ambush, one hour since the President opened his eyes and said his first shattering words, "Am I alive?" To have him lying there, attended by a couple of unknown Soviet doctors and his own half-competent personal physician was an impossible situation.

"You cannot keep this bottled up for five more minutes," Curtice said, his voice under control. "The President's life comes before any other consideration. You have helicopters at the airfield; I saw them when we got in," Curtice insisted, knowing the Russian was deliberately dragging a foot. "Delay is dangerous. You — and I hold you personally responsible for this — you are endangering the life of the President."

Nikolayev rose. "Do no say what is not true. I have ordered the helicopter. I have ordered the airport sealed off and secured. But I must make absolutely certain that the men we use to fly the plane are loyal, and not allied with the Chinese assassins."

"How long will that take?"

"Four hours. If it protects your President's life, the time is well spent."

"Unacceptable." Curtice knew exactly what Nikolayev was doing, and might have done the same in his shoes: freezing the

Interest rate is cut, stock mart advances

Dow Ind. +10.17

New York (AP) — The stock market staged its strongest advance in more than two months Tuesday, inspired by an unexpected prime rate cut at a leading New York bank.

Depressed glamor issues scored some notable gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 10.17 to 922.57, for its sharpest rise since it climbed 13.06 points on April 12.

Gainers outnumbered losers by better than a 5-2 spread on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume reached its busiest level in almost four weeks at 25.39 million shares, up from 20.25 million Monday.

The catalyst for the rally was provided by Morgan Guaranty Trust of New York late Monday when the bank lowered its prime lending rate from 6¾ to 6½ per cent.

No other major banks showed any haste to match the reduction. But analysts said it nevertheless came as a kind of official stamp for recent evidence that interest rates were easing off after rising for most of the spring.

Only last Friday Citibank of New York had changed its formula for computing the prime to avoid an increase to 7 per cent.

Brokers said the market also benefited from hopes that recent declines in many commodity prices signaled a lessening of inflationary pressures on food prices.

On Tuesday afternoon the Agriculture Department said prospects remained bright for another bumper world grain crop in the coming year.

The Dow rose 6 at the outset, pulled back to about the plus-2 level by noontime, and then resumed its climb. In so doing, it broke loose from the 898-914 range in which it had been fluctuating weakly since late May.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials vaulted 1.31 to 110.18, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 1.12 at 99.86.

Among glamor issues, which have borne the brunt of the pressure on the market in recent months, IBM showed a 4½-point gain at 258 as of the 4 p.m. close in New York; Burroughs rose 1½ to 61½; Xerox gained 1⅜ to 48⅛, and Eastman Kodak was up 1⅞ at 60½.

Actively traded blue chips included General Motors, ahead 1 at 69⅜; Exxon, up 1 at 52⅜, and American Telephone & Telegraph, ½ higher at 63.

Texaco was the volume leader, unchanged at 28 on turnover of more than 320,000 shares.

In the over-the-counter market, the NASDAQ composite index closed at 97.70, up .42.

Omaha is eligible for $18 million

Omaha Neb. (AP) — The City of Omaha, which asked for $8.3 million in federal Public Works money, is trying to find ways to spend the $17.8 million for which it is now eligible.

"I'm sure we can find a lot of needed projects," said Mayor Al Veys.

Former Omaha Mayor Robert Cunningham and other mayors went to Washington, D.C., to complain after their cities didn't get any of the $2 billion distributed to high unemployment areas. The regulations subsequently were changed.

Kiburz is elected

Toronto (UPI) — The general manager of the Loup Public Power District in Columbus, Neb., Tuesday was elected president of the American Public Power Association during its 34th annual conference.

Max E. Kiburz succeeds Charles E. Duckworth, city manager of Garland, Tex., in the association's top post.

In addition, Mrs. Rosemary M. Skrupa, Omaha Public Power District President, was one of five new members elected to the association's board of directors.

Dividend declared

The Board of Directors of NBC Co. declared a devidend of $.11 per common share according to President James Stuart, Jr. The dividend will be payable June 30, to stockholders on record June 27.

NBC Co., a one-bank holding company, owns the National Bank of Commerce, NBC Center Building, Mutual Saving Company of Lincoln and Omaha, Nebraska Savings Company, Scottsbluff; NBC Leasing Co. and NBC Credit Insurance Agency, Inc.

NBC Co. is listed locally on the over-the-counter market and was bid at $12¼ June 12.

Old crop futures fall

Chicago (AP) — Old crop soybean and soybean oil futures declined to nearly the allowable daily limits on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

The fall in soybeans was 28½ cents a bushel in the nearby months and 95 points, just short of the 100 point limit in oil.

Hogs, cattle mostly lower

Omaha, Neb. (AP) — Omaha Livestock Exchange quotations Tuesday listed barrows and gilts at 25 to 50 cents lower, except for those over 300 pounds, which were largely $1.00 lower.

Sows were 25 to 75 cents lower. Those weighing 300-600 pounds sold for $36.00-36.50.

There were 6,400 cattle and calves on offer. Steers were moderately active and steady to 25 cents lower, instances 50 cents lower. Heifers were moderately active, steady to weak, instances 25 cents lower. Cows were mostly $1.00 lower, some $1.25-1.50 lower.

There were 600 sheep on offer. Slaughter spring lambs were 25 cents higher. Slaughter ewes were mostly $1.00 higher. Choice and prime spring slaughter lambs weighing 95-115 pounds sold for $54.00-55.00. Utility and good shorn ewes sold for $11.50-12.25.

The U.S.D.A. estimated receipts Wednesday at 5,000 cattle and calves, 4,000 hogs, 400 sheep.

Water rules delay development

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

The Lancaster County Board has been postponing approval of rural subdivision development because a proposed water quantity standard has not yet been approved.

Tuesday the board deferred action on an application by Harold Heiser to develop about 55 acres along West Fletcher St., just north of Pawnee Lake.

The subdivision, "Pawnee Estates," would contain 14 lots — "a rather small development," said Heiser's attorney Jack Wolfe.

The board earlier deferred action on two similar subdivisions: Savage Acres at 84th and Davey Rd. and Finnigan's subdivision at 84th and Waverly Rd.

The delays have occurred because the board, at the instigation of Commissioner Bob Colin, has asked for an amendment to the county land subdivision resolution requiring proof that a subdivision will not use water at the expense of its neighbors.

Heiser attempted to comply with a preliminary draft of the proposed regulation by hiring John Addink of Addink Engineering Co., a water consultant, to study the proposed plat.

Addink told the commissioners that test wells showed a flow of eight to nine gallons per minute on the land to be developed, and he said neighbors' wells have an even better flow.

"This thing's going to have water 100 years from now," Addink said.

The area is not suitable for irrigation, he noted, so farmers should not experience adverse effects.

Despite Addink's evidence, however, the commissioners voted unanimously to defer action until the new requirement is on the books.

"It's difficult to say yes to this one when we've hung two others up," chairman Bruce Hamilton said.

The proposed water regulation may be ready for approval at next Tuesday's board meeting, according to Deputy County Attorney Mike Heavican.

In other action, the board approved three bids for work at Lancaster Manor. Two contracts were awarded to Donley Medical Supply Co., 2425 O St.; $20,376 for various tables and chairs and $7,482 for "miscellaneous nursing services." A contract for $6,924 was awarded to B & B Locksmiths, 6220 Havelock Ave., for a security lock system.

An additional $1,340 was awarded to E.O. Peters, Inc., for work on the County-City boiler plant. A steam pipe was relocated to avoid a gas main.

The board approved a resolution confirming Sunday beer sales at Austin's Silver Spur in Martell.

A June 28 hearing has been set for a Sunday beer sales application by Paul Wilcoxen, owner of Lee's Restaurant at Coddington and W. Van Dorn.

Different wage hikes may mean dilemma

It's too early to predict, but Lancaster County commissioners are emitting warning signals about an across-the-board raise for county employes.

The county's tradition of matching the city's pay hike may not be continued this year, commissioners indicate.

A 6½% wage and benefit package has been accepted by some city employe groups, but rejected by others.

The City Employes Association, which represents workers in some agencies jointly financed by the city and county, particularly the Health Department, has accepted the offer.

If the city adopts a 6½% raise for all employes, and the county is unable to match that without breaking through its tax ceiling of 14.28 mills, it will cause some juggling of figures for those whose salaries are jointly financed.

The county should not pick up the tab for any increase to the jointly financed salaries above what the county is able to grant its own employes, commissioner Jan Gauger said Monday.

The board will not rule on a pay increase until after next fiscal year's budget has been approved and the mill levy computed. The board will grant only what increase is possible without going over the taxing limit.

Whether that amount will be 6½%, or a percentage point or two less, will remain an unanswered question until the county budget process is completed.

If the board is true to its form of past years, the budget won't be approved and the mill levy set until late August.

Neil Welch
. . . FBI candidate.

Welch, Omaha native, candidate to head FBI

Omaha (AP) — One of President Carter's candidates for FBI director is an Omaha native.

Neil John Welch, 50, a graduate of the former University of Omaha and the Creighton University Law School, is one of five possible nominees named Monday by Carter.

Welch currently heads the FBI's Philadelphia office.

Starting his FBI career in 1951, Welch was appointed assistant agent in charge of the bureau's first office in Jackson, Miss., in 1964. A year later, he was transferred to Washington, D.C., as an inspector.

In 1966, Welch was put in charge of the field office at Buffalo, N.Y. Four years later, he became special agent in charge of the Detroit office. He was moved to Philadelphia two years ago.

Decline forecast

Washington (AP) — This season's orange harvest is expected to produce 250 6 million boxes, a 2% decline from 254.6 million forecast in May, the Agriculture Dept. reported.

Pathfinder hearing keys on poll

Fremont (AP) — Dodge County District Court Judge Mark Fuhrman heard arguments on a public opinion poll Tuesday before scheduling Aug. 23 action on a change of venue sought by E.I. du Pont de Nemours in 37 lawsuits filed in the Fremont Pathfinder Hotel explosion.

The Jan. 10, 1976, explosion killed 18 persons outright and damaged much of downtown Fremont.

Du Pont, a codefendant with Nebraska Natural Gas Co., cited widespread publicity in requesting the change in trial location.

Federal investigators determined the explosion occurred when a two-inch piece of plastic pipe, manufactured by du Pont and installed by Nebraska Natural Gas Co., pulled away from a metal coupling. Du Pont is seeking a third-party complaint against Norton McMurray Manufacturing Co. of Geneva, Ill., manufacturer of the coupling.

The focus of the hearing was on a poll paid for by du Pont to determine if Dodge County residents had an opinion on who to blame for the explosion.

A 10-member staff headed by professional pollster Joe B. Williams of Elmwood questioned 200 registered voters.

Judge Fuhrman ordered attorneys and others involved not to divulge percentages that might prejudice potential jurors. Before the order, Williams said 77 per cent of those polled had decided who to blame and 23 per cent had no opinion.

Arguments from attorneys for Nebraska Natural Gas and Norton McMurray challenged the relevance, necessity, accuracy and possible bias of the poll.

Fremont attorney John Kerrigan, representing six of the 37 plaintiffs, argued that the poll had been "vastly overemphasized."

Kerrigan said the case should remain in Dodge County for the convenience of all parties involved, especially elderly plaintiffs who "find it difficult even to come to the courthouse."

Plaintiffs' attorneys also claimed the Pathfinder disaster drew statewide and national attention and that other such polls could show similar bias in many other counties.

Attorneys also took issue with submission of a du Pont file of Fremont Tribune articles on the explosion.

Canadian authorities want to see him now

Robert Morrison, the hungry Canadian who found a free meal at the Lincoln City Jail Sunday after attracting attention, has attracted some more attention.

Morrison, 34, was jailed after he threw four wooden street barricades through the windows of two downtown businesses in the wee hours Sunday. He told police he hadn't eaten for two days and knew he'd get fed in jail.

Authorities Tuesday learned the Canadian officials would like to question Morrison about a parole violation. He was recently released from Kingsport Prison in Ontario where he had served time on an assault charge.

Extraditing Morrison to Canada may involve some "higher ups," according to Deputy Sheriff Vincent McNeil. McNeil said the last time such an estradition was made was in 1958, and the order had to be signed by President Dwight Eisenhower and some British officials.

It isn't clear if Jimmy Carter and Queen Elizabeth will get in on the Morrison story since the procedure might have changed in recent years. Besides, any fugitive action will have to wait until the local charges are cleared, McNeil said.

Morrison faces charges of malicious destruction of property in Lancaster County Court June 28.

63-year-old woman conned out of $22,000

A 63-year-old Lincoln woman was conned out of $22,000 by two women Monday afternoon in what police call "the old pigeon drop scheme."

The woman said she met the pair at Gateway Shopping Center and they told her they had found $30,000 in a hollowed-out book. They promised her a share of the money if she'd put up some good faith money, which she did.

She was told to wait at the shopping center where she would be contacted with her share of the $30,000 and her good faith money. When the pair failed to return, she called police.

Iowa youth pleads innocent to two charges of burglary

The arrest of an 18-year-old Iowa youth may clear up at least eight recent house burglaries on the outskirts of Lincoln, according to Lancaster County sheriff's officials.

Gregory W. Myers, a Lincoln resident for about one month, was charged Monday with two counts of burglary in county court. He pleaded innocent but was ordered in lieu of $5,000 bond pending a preliminary hearing.

Myers was arrested at his home Friday night. Several thousand dollars worth of television sets, radios, guns and watches were recovered, authorities said.

Among the victims of the burglaries was County Commissioner Bob Colin.

Preliminary hearing July 20 for man charged with robbery

A 37-year-old Illinois man charged with the May 29 robbery of a Lincoln Safeway store faces a July 20 preliminary hearing on three felony counts stemming from the incident.

Rudy Helenick has been charged with robbery, the use of a firearm to commit a felony and fleeing to avoid arrest. He was arrested by police following a high speed chase after he alleged robbed employes of the Piedmont Shopping Center Safeway and locked them in a milk cooler.

Police reportedly recovered about $5,000 taken in the robbery.

Arson hearing not slated yet

A preliminary hearing date will be set June 28 in Lancaster County Court for a 27-year-old Lincoln man charged with four counts of arson.

Paul J. Von Busch was arrested in the vicinity of a fire he allegedly set June 5. Authorities said the arrest possibly cleared four similar fires, two near downtown and two in the Belmont area.

Man in diversion program

A 48-year-old Lincoln man charged with debauching two teen-agers last December has been accepted into the Lancaster County pre-trial diversion program.

Richard Vaughn, of 2540 Park Blvd., was accepted into the program which offers counseling from three months to a year for persons convicted of nonviolent felonies.

Gunshot wound finally fatal

Dan D. Sperry, of 6326 Gladstone, died at St. Elizabeth's Health Center where he was taken following the shooting.

Planned budget cuts draw winces

By Joe Hudson
Star Staff Writer

Pre-trial diversion Director Eric McMasters explained Tuesday night how $30,000 to $40,000 might best be trimmed from his program's budget.

As he explained, some members of the program's steering committee winced at the prospect of the budget cut, requested Monday by the Lancaster County Board.

County Atty. Ron Lahners said he'd "rather not be associated with a program that cannot perform its function," hinting that the cut may cripple the program.

The pre-trial diversion program is designed to reduce court and jail costs by rehabilitating first-time offenders outside normal judicial channels. Another aim is to reduce the likelihood of first-timers returning to crime.

"I wouldn't try to run my office with just three lawyers," Lahners said. "If we cut too much . . . we may as well revert to the former system."

Under McMasters' plan, a now-vacant counseling position would be eliminated, and a person hired to evaluate the impact of the program would finish his work in December — about six months earlier than originally planned.

Cuts in training and travel accounts would amount to savings of less than $10,000, McMasters said.

If necessary, the program's supervisor of counselors would be demoted to a lower-paid counselor, and McMasters himself would take a lower position and salary.

Program officials had requested a $206,281 budget for fiscal 1977-78, but the County Board requested the cuts be made and that the program "still survive."

"You've got to have qualified people to run the program," Lahners said. "Without that, you've got a hodgepodge."

Steering committee members said the benefits of the program aren't appreciated. For instance, they said, it is nearly impossible to calculate the savings to society of diverting an individual from a life of crime.

And, it was noted, the program suffers from an image problem; many persons don't like the idea of a criminal getting off "scot-free" without a jail sentence.

"If they'd rather spend more on jails and courts," Lahners said, "then that is the will of the policy-makers."

Tornado misses Bayard but damages two farms

United Press International

A tornado that was on the ground for about 30 minutes returned to the sky just before reaching the town of Bayard, but caused "extensive damage" to two farms in its path, the State Patrol said Tuesday.

There were no reports of injuries late Tuesday night, but the patrol and the Morrill County sheriff were checking on farms in the area.

The National Weather Service said the tornado could be observed from Alliance, about 26 miles from Bayard.

"The tornado kicked back up several times and we really couldn't tell where it was going. It was on the ground about a half hour," a weather service employe said.

"We have reports of baseball-size hail that may have caused some crop damage. There were also reports of wind damage in Scottsbluff and Gering, but no estimates are available yet," he said.

Winds up to 55 miles per hour were recorded at the Scottsbluff airport.

There were several confirmed reports of tornadoes and funnel clouds southeast of Scottsbluff, and a twister between Minatare and Melbeta "stayed on the ground a while," the weather service said.

Walnut-size hail was reported around Lake Alice near Scottsbluff.

The weather service said thunderstorms in the Panhandle would creep eastward across Nebraska during the night, expected in the central and east parts of the state Wednesday.

Scottsbluff nixes park, fire station

Scottsbluff (AP) — Residents of Scottsbluff rejected proposals to build a new fire station and establish a wilderness park Tuesday.

Defeated by a 1,652-758 unofficial margin was a $650,000 bond issue to finance construction of a new fire station. A $900,000 bond issue for the same purpose lost by 38 votes last November.

The city said its fire, police and building and zoning departments have outgrown their present buildings.

Voters turned down the wilderness park proposal by an 1,858-516 margin.

The city currently has a Housing and Urban Development grant for $76,000 to buy part of the 250-acre park site. Voter approval was sought to purchase the entire area eventually.

Train mishap hospitalizes transient, 43

A 43-year-old transient was listed in serious condition Tuesday night after catching his foot in the coupling mechanism of a railroad car east of Waverly.

James Day was spotted by the engineer of a passing train at about 7:15 p.m. on tracks near 162nd St. and Highway 6, sheriff's deputies said.

Day was lying on a flatbed car, his foot crushed in the coupling mechanism, deputies said.

It was now known how long Day had been caught there before being rescued. He was taken to St. Elizabeth Health Center.

Steel production falls

New York (AP) — Steel production fell to 2,674,000 net tons in the week ended June 11, a decrease of 2.1% from the preceding week's 2,732,000 net tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported.

Uranium drilling up

Grand Junction, Colo. (AP) — Uranium exploration worldwide increased 37% during 1976, according to a government survey, and companies in the field expect to increase drillings by about 41% this year.

Neighborhood park still undecided

A park for the Salt Valley View neighborhood is still in the talking stage, Lincoln Board of Education members told a Salt Valley View association Tuesday.

The neighborhood group asked the board to continue working with the city to establish a five-acre park on the school-owned land. The group also wants the board to keep the rest of the lot's 12 acres for a possible future elementary school

The land, south of S 1st and S 14th streets and north of the Highway 2 cutoff, is now a weed problem and has not been mowed in several months, according to Tom Engstrom, chairman of the neighborhood association.

Board members did ask school administrators to look into the mowing problem but gave no hint about any change in a decision on a future school building in that neighborhood.

Current plans are to sell the land not used as a park to private buyers.

Negotiations continue with the city on the purchase of the land for a park, Supt. of Schools John Prasch told the group.

In other business, a combined program for about 500 junior and senior high school youth, called the special vocational needs program, will cost about $480,000 next year, according to an administration report.

The program combines special counseling for potential dropouts in two junior high schools and Lincoln High School, the Lincoln Learning Center, an alternative program for senior high school students, a similar program for junior high school students, and the citywide work-study program.

The alternative schools for the junior and senior high school students and possibly the work-study staff will be in the Whittier School, Prasch said.

Lincoln schools hope for about $241,000 in federal and state funds for the combined programs, he said.

The only reservation about the programs was expressed by board member Lou Roper who said, "I want to make sure it (the alternative school program) is not a copout to academic learning."

In other action, the board appointed Calvert Elementary School teacher Dean H. Faubel as assistant principal at Meadow Lane Elementary School.

The school system still has three or four elementary school vacancies for next fall and about a dozen vacancies in the secondary schools, said Carroll Sawin, assistant superintendent for personnel.

Prepared Boy Scout foils bear

Jackson, Wyo. (UPI) — A Nebraska Boy Scout, confronted by a bear Tuesday in Grand Teton National Park, played dead and received only a puncture wound from the animal, park officials said.

The incident marked the first human injury sustained this season from a bear in the park.

Johnathan Gould was hiking in a park canyon about eight miles north of Jenny Lake with a companion, Larry Johnson, when they spotted the bear. The Omaha Boy Scouts dropped their packs and fell to the ground to play dead, according to Joseph Shellenberger, park information officer.

The bear inspected a pack and then "sniffed around Gould's leg and put a single puncture wound about a quarter of an inch deep," Shellenberger said. The boy was later treated for the minor wound, he said.

Shellenberger said the incident could have been caused by a bear suspected of tearing though packs left by rock climbers in the Garnet Canyon area of the park. That canyon has been closed for more than a week.

Malone plan opposed

A Malone-area resident Tuesday night launched a petition drive seeking to halt plans which he says will turn the area into a neighborhood of multiple-unit dwellings

Tony Esquival, 2330 R St., says federal urban development funds earmarked for the Malone area should be used to help homeowners repair dilapidated housing.

Esquival said all six alternative plans submitted by consultants call for construction of townhouses and other multiple-unit dwellings in the area bound by 27th St., Rock Island Railroad tracks on the west, O Street and Missouri Pacific tracks on the north.

An Urban Development Department survey shows that 30% of the residences in the area are owner-occupied, he said. Of those, he said, the survey determined that 92% could be adequately rehabilitated with improvements costing $4,000 or less

Judging from experience, he said, homeowners are likely to get "peanuts" in return for their property and will have few alternative places to relocate

Esquival said the petition will be presented to city officials, including Mayor Helen Boosalis But he said federal Housing and Urban Development officials also would have to be swayed if plans are to be changed.

Easing of retirement plan urged

About a half-dozen persons Tuesday night, spoke for liberalization of the county employes retirement plan, but County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton said the county is fiscally incapable of meeting all the requests.

In a public hearing on proposed changes in the retirement plan, spokesmen urged that the minimum retirement age be lowered or eliminated, Hamilton said.

Under proposed changes, anyone who is 55 years old and has participated in the retirement plan from time of eligibility and for 20 consecutive years may retire and draw from the fund.

Also urged was an easing of the requirement that, in order to collect county contributions to the fund, the individual must have participated in the plan for 20 years

Hamilton said "some good questions" were raised and that the retirement plan would be placed on the board's agenda.

Bike rider hurt in crash

A 12-year-old Lincoln boy suffered an apparent concussion in a car-bike accident on 9th St between Hill and Van Dorn.

Carl J Burgeson son of Mr. & Mrs. Orville C. Burgeson of 2735 S 9th St., was in fair condition at Lincoln General Hospital with head injuries

Police said a motorist was passing Carl, who was riding his bike along 9th St., at a low speed The driver told police she felt a slight bump when she passed the bicycle, and looked back to find Carl and his bike down in the street.

Motorcyclist's condition fair

An 18-year-old motorcyclist was in fair condition Tuesday night at Lincoln General Hospital after his motorcycle collided with a car on 40th Street.

James S. Hammond, 4211 Spruce, suffered head and foot injuries when his cycle collided with a car turning left on 40th between Lake St. and Normal Blvd., police said.

The driver of the car, Ben H. Myers, 67, of 4030 C St., was ticketed for failure to yield the right of way, police said

Safety awards given

Rutherford N.J. (AP) — The Becton Dickinson Plant in Columbus, Neb., and the Santee Sioux Becton Dickinson Plant in Knox County, Neb., will receive the "award of honor from the National Safety Council in recognition of five million man hours without a disabling injury, a spokesman for the company said Tuesday

The spokesman said the award is the highest given by the National Safety Council Only about 5% of the nation's industry achieves this high level of safety

The spokesman said the Columbus and Santee Sioux plants are the only ones in Nebraska to be so honored. The award will be made June 23 at the Columbus plant.

Man bound over for robbery

An Omaha man charged with four felony counts stemming from the Feb. 17 robbery of a Lincoln couple was bound over to district court Tuesday.

Planned budget cuts draw winces

By Joe Hudson
Star Staff Writer

Pre-trial diversion Director Eric McMasters explained Tuesday night how $30,000 to $40,000 might best be trimmed from his program's budget.

As he explained, some members of the program's steering committee winced at the prospect of the budget cut, requested Monday by the Lancaster County Board.

County Atty. Ron Lahners said he'd "rather not be associated with a program that cannot perform its function," hinting that the cut may cripple the program.

The pre-trial diversion program is designed to reduce court and jail costs by rehabilitating first-time offenders outside normal judicial channels. Another aim is to reduce the likelihood of first-timers returning to crime.

"I wouldn't try to run my office with just three lawyers," Lahners said. "If we cut too much . . . we may as well revert to the former system."

Under McMasters' plan, a now-vacant counseling position would be eliminated, and a person hired to evaluate the impact of the program would finish his work in December — about six months earlier than originally planned.

Cuts in training and travel accounts would amount to savings of less than $10,000, McMasters said.

If necessary, the program's supervisor of counselors would be demoted to a lower-paid counselor, and McMasters himself would take a lower position and salary.

Program officials had requested a $206,281 budget for fiscal 1977-78, but the County Board requested the cuts be made and that the program "still survive."

"You've got to have qualified people to run the program," Lahners said. "Without that, you've got a hodgepodge."

Steering committee members said the benefits of the program aren't appreciated. For instance, they said, it is nearly impossible to calculate the savings to society of diverting an individual from a life of crime.

And, it was noted, the program suffers from an image problem; many persons don't like the idea of a criminal getting off "scot-free" without a jail sentence.

"If they'd rather spend more on jails and courts," Lahners said, "then that is the will of the policy-makers."

Tornado misses Bayard but damages two farms

United Press International

A tornado that was on the ground for about 30 minutes returned to the sky just before reaching the town of Bayard, but caused "extensive damage" to two farms in its path, the State Patrol said Tuesday.

There were no reports of injuries late Tuesday night, but the patrol and the Morrill County sheriff were checking on farms in the area.

The National Weather Service said the tornado could be observed from Alliance, about 26 miles from Bayard.

"The tornado kicked back up several times and we really couldn't tell where it was going. It was on the ground about a half hour," a weather service employe said.

"We have reports of baseball-size hail that may have caused some crop damage. There were also reports of wind damage in Scottsbluff and Gering, but no estimates are available yet," he said.

Winds up to 55 miles per hour were recorded at the Scottsbluff airport.

There were several confirmed reports of tornadoes and funnel clouds southeast of Scottsbluff, and a twister between Minatare and Melbeta "stayed on the ground a while," the weather service said.

Walnut-size hail was reported around Lake Alice near Scottsbluff.

The weather service said thunderstorms in the Panhandle would creep eastward across Nebraska during the night, expected in the central and east parts of the state Wednesday.

Scottsbluff nixes park, fire station

Scottsbluff (AP) — Residents of Scottsbluff rejected proposals to build a new fire station and establish a wilderness park Tuesday.

Defeated by a 1,652-758 unofficial margin was a $650,000 bond issue to finance construction of a new fire station. A $900,000 bond issue for the same purpose lost by 38 votes last November.

The city said its fire, police and building and zoning departments have outgrown their present buildings.

Voters turned down the wilderness park proposal by an 1,858-516 margin.

The city currently has a Housing and Urban Development grant for $76,000 to buy part of the 250-acre park site. Voter approval was sought to purchase the entire area eventually.

Train mishap hospitalizes transient, 43

A 43-year-old transient was listed in serious condition Tuesday night after catching his foot in the coupling mechanism of a railroad car east of Waverly.

James Day was spotted by the engineer of a passing train at about 7:15 p.m. on tracks near 162nd St. and Highway 6, sheriff's deputies said.

Day was lying on a flatbed car, his foot crushed in the coupling mechanism, deputies said.

It was now known how long Day had been caught there before being rescued. He was taken to St. Elizabeth Health Center.

Steel production falls

New York (AP) — Steel production fell to 2,674,000 net tons in the week ended June 11, a decrease of 2.1% from the preceding week's 2,732,000 net tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported.

Uranium drilling up

Grand Junction, Colo. (AP) — Uranium exploration worldwide increased 37% during 1976, according to a government survey, and companies in the field expect to increase drillings by about 41% this year.

Neighborhood park still undecided

A park for the Salt Valley View neighborhood is still in the talking stage, Lincoln Board of Education members told a Salt Valley View association Tuesday.

The neighborhood group asked the board to continue working with the city to establish a five-acre park on the school-owned land. The group also wants the board to keep the rest of the lot's 12 acres for a possible future elementary school.

The land, south of S. 1st and S. 14th streets and north of the Highway 2 cutoff, is now a weed problem and has not been mowed in several months, according to Tom Engstrom, chairman of the neighborhood association.

Board members did ask school administrators to look into the mowing problem but gave no hint about any change in a decision on a future school building in that neighborhood.

Current plans are to sell the land not used as a park to private buyers.

Negotiations continue with the city on the purchase of the land for a park, Supt. of Schools John Prasch told the group.

In other business, a combined program for about 500 junior and senior high school youth, called the special vocational needs program, will cost about $480,000 next year, according to an administration report.

The program combines special counseling for potential dropouts in two junior high schools and Lincoln High School; the Lincoln Learning Center, an alternative program for senior high school students; a similar program for junior high school students; and the citywide work-study program.

The alternative schools for the junior and senior high school students and possibly the work-study staff will be in the Whittier School, Prasch said.

Lincoln schools hope for about $241,000 in federal and state funds for the combined programs, he said.

The only reservation about the programs was expressed by board member Lou Roper who said, "I want to make sure it (the alternative school program) is not a copout to academic learning."

In other action, the board appointed Calvert Elementary School teacher Dean H. Faubel as assistant principal at Meadow Lane Elementary School.

The school system still has three or four elementary school vacancies for next fall and about a dozen vacancies in the secondary schools, said Carroll Sawin, assistant superintendent for personnel.

Prepared Boy Scout foils bear

Jackson, Wyo. (UPI) — A Nebraska Boy Scout, confronted by a bear Tuesday in Grand Teton National Park, played dead and received only a puncture wound from the animal, park officials said.

The incident marked the first human injury sustained this season from a bear in the park.

Johnathan Gould was hiking in a park canyon about eight miles north of Jenny Lake with a companion, Larry Johnson, when they spotted the bear. The Omaha Boy Scouts dropped their packs and fell to the ground to play dead, according to Joseph Shellenberger, park information officer.

The bear inspected a pack and then "sniffed around Gould's leg and put a single puncture wound about a quarter of an inch deep," Shellenberger said. The boy was later treated for the minor wound, he said.

Shellenberger said the incident could have been caused by a bear suspected of tearing though packs left by rock climbers in the Garnet Canyon area of the park. That canyon has been closed for more than a week.

Malone plan opposed

A Malone-area resident Tuesday night launched a petition drive seeking to halt plans which he says will turn the area into a neighborhood of multiple-unit dwellings.

Tony Esquival, 2330 R. St., says federal urban development funds earmarked for the Malone area should be used to help homeowners repair dilapidated housing.

Esquival said all six alternative plans submitted by consultants call for construction of townhouses and other multiple-unit dwellings in the area bound by 27th St., Rock Island Railroad tracks on the west, O Street and Missouri Pacific tracks on the north.

An Urban Development Department survey shows that 30% of the residences in the area are owner-occupied, he said. Of those, he said, the survey determined that 92% could be adequately rehabilitated with improvements costing $4,000 or less.

Judging from experience, he said, homeowners are likely to get "peanuts" in return for their property and will have few alternative places to relocate.

Esquival said the petition will be presented to city officials, including Mayor Helen Boosalis. But he said federal Housing and Urban Development officials also would have to be swayed if plans are to be changed.

Easing of retirement plan urged

About a half-dozen persons Tuesday night, spoke for liberalization of the county employes retirement plan, but County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton said the county is fiscally incapable of meeting all the requests.

In a public hearing on proposed changes in the retirement plan, spokesmen urged that the minimum retirement age be lowered or eliminated, Hamilton said.

Under proposed changes, anyone who is 55 years old and has participated in the retirement plan from time of eligibility and for 20 consecutive years may retire and draw from the fund.

Also urged was an easing of the requirement that, in order to collect county contributions to the fund, the individual must have participated in the plan for 20 years.

Hamilton said "some good questions" were raised and that the retirement plan would be placed on the board's agenda.

(AP) — The Becton Dickinson Plant in Columbus, Neb., and the Santee Sioux Becton Dickinson Plant in Knox County, Neb., will receive the "award of honor" from the National Safety Council in recognition of five million man hours without a disabling injury a spokesman for the company said Tuesday.

The spokesman said the award is the highest given by the National Safety Council. Only about 5% of the nation's industry achieves this high level of safety.

The spokesman said the Columbus and Santee Sioux plants are the only ones in Nebraska to be so honored. The award will be made June 23 at the Columbus plant.

Health department's budget is left short

Grand Island (UPI) — Grand Island and Hall County Tuesday remained at odds over a budget for the operation of the city-county health department.

The Hall County Board, which shares the cost of the department's operation with the city, Tuesday voted to stick by its original budget proposal of just over $127,000 for the department's operation during the 1977-78 fiscal year

The county's share of the funding would be $63,500.

However, the city council voted Monday night to pay a local share of $62,000, and neither side appeared willing to change its budget proposal.

Ed Edwards, health department director, said the department needs at least $127,000 to operate, or he will have to cut several needed projects.

He said he has made cuts in several areas to modify the $138,000 budget he proposed earlier.

In taking action Tuesday, county board finance committee chairman Bernie Crick said, "If the city wants to break the contract with the county for health services, that's okay."

Board chairman Ralph Herndon said, however, the county could not afford to finance the department alone.

In approving its share of the budget Monday night, the city council said it wants to stay within a 9.7% budget increase range for all city spending projects

The county s proposal would increase the department's budget over last year about 12%

Planner blows cork over rejection of site

Grand Island (UPI) — The city council Monday night rejected the Hall County Regional Planning Commission s recommendation for a power plant site. A commission member Tuesday called the council a "bunch of jugheads who don't want to listen"

John Webster, of Wood River, said he would never again vote on an issue involving Grand Island while on the 12-member planning commission He noted the planning commission had rejected the council-approved site south of Grand Island between old and new U S 281 and recommended the council select an alternate site.

"The planning commission was provided for by the state Legislature by law for recommendations to the city council who has peanut butter in its ears," Webster said

' And I'll guarantee you that I will not vote on any recommendation involving the City of Grand Island that goes up before the city council because I'm not going up there to make a fool of myself for a bunch of jugheads who don t want to listen "

Almost 200 residents packed the Monday night hearing, the largest crowd in recent memory to attend a council meeting The council approved the site 4 to 3 following three hours of testimony.

Iowan to plead guilty of theft

Omaha (UPI) — An Oakland, Iowa, resident told U.S. Magistrate Richard C. Peck Tuesday that he planned to plead guilty to being involved in a heavy equipment theft ring covering at least four states.

Assistant U.S. Attny. Thomas Thalken said Ray Wagner, 32, was indicted with 15 others by a federal grand jury in Brownsville, Tex., June 7 in the interstate transportation of stolen heavy duty equipment, including backhoes and tractors, and disposing of them.

Thalken said the alleged operation covered Texas, Kansas, Iowa and Arkansas.

Thalken said Wagner voluntarily surrendered in Omaha Thursday and was freed on a $10,000 signature bond pending his retaining an attorney.

Wagner told Peck Tuesday he planned to plead guilty and Peck granted a transfer of his case from Texas to Omaha for sentencing.

Wagner was named in nine of 29 counts in the indictment including one of conspiracy and two each of interstate transportation and disposal of stolen equipment, specifically two tractors and two backhoes.

Thalken said he planned to confer with the U.S. attorney's office in Brownsville about a plea bargaining arrangement for Wagner. He said Wagner was the only one from the Nebraska-Iowa Region indicted.

Wagner, who told Peck he was employed in Council Bluffs as a welder-boilermaker, remained free on bond.

Thalken said that at least 14 pieces of equipment were involved in the theft scheme which allegedly occurred from March til the time of the indictment.

Wagner faces a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine on each charge.

No new trial for North Platte in city tax case

North Platte (AP) — Lincoln County District Court Judge Keith Windrum Monday overruled a motion by the City of North Platte for a new trial in a city sales tax case.

The city had requested the new trial after Windrum ruled last week that the city must count signatures on petitions opposing the tax, and must have an election if the number of signatures were sufficient.

City Atty. Richard Satterfield said Windrum's decision will be appealed to the State Supreme Court within 30 days.

Swimming pool takes to the air to find proper resting place

David White's new swimming pool will come to rest in his backyard at 2053 Calvert Street, after a crane lifted the fiberglass pool over the house. There was no other way to get the pool to the spot dug for it.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B V A X R

is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Readers write: Don't use my last name. I love you sometimes. Other times it's Mars crashing into Neptune and I resent you. But I read you. Do you mind? —Marilyn Jones, Ile Wisconsin. I enjoy the lead paragraphs of your column and I learn something from them even if I do not know if there is actually anything to astrology. —Jack Brady, Los Angeles, Calif. I read your books. I listen to your broadcasts, watch you on television and check your column. Man are you for real? —McCall Smith Jr., Inglewood, Wash.

ARIES (March 21-Apr 19) You get second chance new life opportunity to crystallize ideas. Travel relative short trips fresh contacts are highlighted. Leo, Aquarius future prominently. You fall in love. You are revitalized. What had been mystical comes into sharp focus. You know.

TAURUS (Apr 20-May 20) Highlight intuition. Teaching, procedures, willingness to bypass orthodox methods. Money picture bright. What appeared to be a loss could boomerang in your favor—and show a profit. Aquarian figures prominently and so does the number 11.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Lunar cycle is such that you gain ground, find that opportunity knocks punch and that your mobility is greater than suspected. Take initiative. Be a self-starter. Expand horizons. You're going places and now you know it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Refuse to be kept in the dark. Ask questions, make inquiries. Show aside secretiveness. Say what you mean—mean what you say. Aquarius, Taurus and Scorpio persons play key roles in your near future. Aquarius could figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your wishes comes true. Romances, opportunities, relationships grow, begins to mean something of value. Lines of communication open. Expect travel and you benefit through women. Gemini, Virgo, Libra persons figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Highlight many areas in which you excel. Emphasis on gain available in art, science, with money a prime factor. Lucky items: dancing shoes, anything that is your color, know it and be ready.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Be willing to wager on yourself. Means hold yourself in high esteem. Jealous person who resents you may attempt to dent your confidence. Consider source. Accent on publishing, travel, long distance communication.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Money is attracted in your direction, you can successfully invest, go into business, bring prior ties, necessities into focus. Partner or mate talks about valuables, what is to be retained, what should be discarded. Number 8. Capricorn and Cancer figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Avoid premature starts — you have task to finish and it cannot, should not be shunted aside. Aries, Libra persons are in picture. Accent on legalities, special rights, contractual obligations, request from partner or mate. You may not be getting clear picture where home property is concerned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Seek other sources. Old references may be outdated. Employment, health services require fresh energy — status quo won't suffice. Take independent steps. If this you do, you assure yourself greater personal recognition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Take initiative, disregarding above red tape — steer away from those who are stuck with the blues, moor bound, depressed and lacking in faith. You have chance now to gain and provide inspiration to growth individual or organization geared to future, instead of being anchored to past.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Choppy seas fall into place. You get green light to proceed. What had been a tangle of red tape is removed. Gemini, Sagittarius persons are in picture. Accent on gain from previous endeavors. Views are validated. You receive accolade from one you admire.

IF JUNE 15th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are dramatic, attractive, dynamic and you tend to eat too many sweets. Your whole can be utilized in acting, teaching. Taurus, Libra and Leo persons play significant roles in your life. August could be your most important month of 1977. You are due for wider recognition, more travel, an indication of views important now to illustrate beliefs, to strive for better upkeep and distribution. You remodel or change domestic aura. It's a hot June.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
